From the North, From the South, From the Southeast, Teutonic Armies Draw Battle Lines Nearer the City

GERMANS ALSO WINNING IN THE BALTIC CAMPAIGN

Very Little Doing in the West; Italians Claim Further Advance; British Claim Repulse of Turks

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Further breaches in the defenses of Warsaw are claimed in the latest official statement from German army headquarters. Teutonic troops are closing on the Polish capital both from the north and the south.

General von Gallwitz's army has stormed the Russian fortresses of Rozan and Pultusk. German troops have fought their way across the Narew between these places and already are in force on the south bank, Berlin declares. Farther to the north the Germans are advancing toward the river, along which the Russians have made their stand to the northeast of the city.

HEADWAY IN SOUTHEAST.

To the southeast also the drive on Warsaw is making headway. Northwest of the fortress of Ivangorod, at which the Germans are hammering, the Russians are declared to have been thrown across the Vistula from Kozienica as far as the mouth of the Pilica, while the attacking forces have worked closer to the fortress itself on the west front.

Apparently the Russian lines are still holding south of Lublin, where the Austro-Germans are struggling for possession of the railroad.

In the Baltic campaign the Berlin war office announces that General von Buelow's army has defeated the fifth Russian army near Shavli after ten days of continuous fighting. The Russian forces were dispersed with the capture of many cannon and machine guns and great quantities of material, it is claimed.

QUIET IN THE WEST.

Only minor operations are reported along the fronts in the west from the sea to the Vosges.

In the Isonzo region the Italians are continuing their assaults on Gorizia. Reports have reached Milan that they have captured the city, but these have not been verified.

An attack by the Turks on an allied position on the Gallipoli peninsula in the Dardanelles was repulsed after a brief engagement, London announces.

The Austrian government has ordered the confiscation of the 1915 vegetable crop as a means of preventing speculation in food products and keeping down prices. What remains of the 1914 crop will be seized after August 1 and sold under state supervision.

GERMAN STATEMENT.

The German official statement today from Berlin follows:

"Near Souchez again yesterday the French repeated unsuccessful hand grenade attacks.

"Our mine explosions in the Champagne district which we reported yesterday inflicted great losses on the enemy. Attempts to eject us from the captured positions failed.

"South of Le Mesnil our advanced posts again repulsed enemy attacks.

"Concerning the reports of the French war department issued at 11 p. m. on July 22, which says that a strong German reconnoitering party was thrown across the river at Selle, the party consisted of five men, who cut an enemy obstacle and retreated with a loss of one dead.

"In the district of Muenster (in Alsace) there were minor encounters yesterday. After the battles of the last few days some 2,600 dead French were counted before our front.

"Eastern theater: General von Buelow has defeated the Fifth Russian army near Shavli.

"After ten days of continuous fighting and marching German troops yesterday succeeded in arresting the retreat of the Russians in the district of Rozan-Szadow and defeated and dispersed them. The booty since the beginning of these operations on July 14 has increased to 25 cannon, 40 machine guns, more than 100 cars loaded with ammunition, a great quantity of baggage and other war material.

FORTS AR ESTORMED.

"On the Narew river the army of General von Gallwitz stormed irresistibly the fortresses of Rozan and Pultusk and forced a crossing of the Narew between both places. Strong forces are on the south bank of the river. Further north and to the south our troops are advancing toward the river.

"In the battles between the Niemen and the Vistula since July 14, 14 cannon and 90 machine guns have been captured. The quantity of war material taken cannot yet be estimated. Before Warsaw in minor fighting we have captured in the last few days 1,750 prisoners and two machine guns.

"North of the mouth of Pilurza river the Germans have reached the Vistula.

"Southeastern theater: From the mouth of the Pilica to Kozienica, northwest of Ivangorod the enemy has been thrown across the Vistula. Before Ivangorod our troops have approached closer to the west front of the fortress.

"Between the Vistula and the Bug obstinate fighting is proceeding. Near Sokal a Russian attack against a bridgehead position was repulsed. A Pharnsian regiment especially distinguished itself here. The exact quantity of war material taken has not yet been ascertained.

London Admits Abandonment of Warsaw Is Now Probable

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, July 24.—10:25 p. m.—The Austro-German armies have been unable to force the Russians from important positions west of Warsaw and from the line along the Lublin-Chelm railway, but German victories in northern Poland and

Honor Convict Sobs Bitterly as Prison Gates Close on Him

David Esaacson Calls on God to Help Him as Reaction Comes at End of Long Journey Alone From New York to Atlanta

It was the "music hour" when David Esaacson took himself into the Atlanta penitentiary.

Every man in the prison has an instrument—violins, trombones, cornets, even combs wrapped in tissue paper. Every afternoon between 6 and 7 o'clock they are allowed to play.

And so Friday, when David Esaacson fulfilled his trust, hundreds of convicts sat two and two in their cells, cross legged opposite each other, playing fiercely each his separate song. Ragtime and opera thundered, a strain of Trovatore swept into "Annie Laurie," battered against a Billy Sunday hymn and lost itself in a vast pandemonium—the "music hour."

And while bedlam reigned within the prison a little man sank down in the quiet afternoon sunshine on the steps outside, and sobbed and sobbed. For at the last moment the fortitude which brought David Esaacson from New York to Atlanta alone snapped like a bow-string and he went to pieces.

"My God! My God!" he cried, the tears streaking down his shrunken cheeks. "My God!" Then bowed his head on his knees, a withered scrap at the foot of the great, white bulk of the building.

He had left the Terminal hotel at 9 o'clock with only a brave smile out of his brown eyes for the clerk who shook his hand and the porter who took his meagre dime. With his last dollar he paid the hotel bill, for ever since leaving New York he has refused to accept government money for his transportation, poor though he is.

HIS JESTS ARE FEEBLE.

At the corner of Mitchell and Whitehall streets he waited for the South Pryor-Federal Prison car.

He looked wistfully at the homehurrying crowds and struggled with his self-control. He tried to jest. A woman at the postoffice that day had left her hand bag at his elbow and then hurriedly snatched it away when she recognized him by his picture as the man who had been convicted of swindling.

"Suppose she had had me arrested?" said David Esaacson. "It would have been funny—very funny!"

But once on the street car his spirit began to droop. Every whir of the wheels was taking him to prison, and he knew it.

As the car reached the stretch of woods heralding the end of the line, his hands were clenched tight on the seat in front of him and he was whispering feverishly to himself, of his "sweet wife, my little grandchildren, my boys, my girls."

What he said were the words of common melodrama, but he said them crying and shaking to his shoe-tips so that they were pitiful. "For myself I do not care! But the disgrace of prison to my family—O, it is horrible, horrible. You would be surprised to know where I wish I was, in a cemetery pondering the green graves of those who have the only peace, the only rest. But I—I am going to a living grave."

This was the man who had borne himself unswerving in a court room and accepted his judgment stoically, the man who maintained such a calm front on board ship that no one knew he was a prisoner, who a few hours before had laughed heartily because the bell boy asked him where his "million" was.

The actual sight of the penitentiary walls which for a month had been only a bad dream, smashed him. Other men go to life terms like Sidney Cartons; David Esaacson has only a year and a day. But the figure which hobbled up the gravel walk in the dying sunlight

GOV. HARRIS TO ASK $50,000 FOR BUILDING AT THE STATE FARM

Special Fund for Individual Cells and Other Improvements Will Be Asked in Message to General Assembly

COMMON SLEEPING ROOM FOR CONVICTS IS OPPOSED

Chief Executive Finds Other Conditions, Generally, at State Prison Are in Good Shape, He Says

BY LINTON K. STARR.
(Journal Staff Correspondent.)

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., July 24.—Governor Nat E. Harris, in the special message he announced today—following his investigation of condition at the state prison—that he would send to the legislature soon, will ask for a special appropriation of at least $50,000 for a new building here, many individual cells and improvements generally. While the governor has not made this announcement officially, stating that he preferred not to give out details of his message in advance, it is known this is in his mind.

The governor was surprised to learn that convicts share a common sleeping room and that there are few facilities for separating desperate characters from mild-spirited convicts. He is firm in his conviction that improvements are imperative, and intends to make his message to the legislature very strong and full of details and recommendations.

He intends to guard as far as possible against a repetition of such occurrences as the atack on Leo M. Frank and the flight of two convicts yesterday, although he appreciates the fact that it is impossible to have a personal watch over every man. By putting in a number of cells, however, the governor believes conditions can be greatly remedied.

His intentions are to make recommendations calculated to bring prison conditions in the state up to the high standard expected of a state of Georgia's high standing and before drafting his message he probably will make a careful study of the conduct of prisons in other states.

It is decided, however, in his opinion, that something must be done promptly to remedy matters and that an appropriation of no mean size is necessary.

"As far as I can see," said the governor, "things here are in splendid shape and are kept in fine style. Warden Smith and his assistants seem to be taking all pains to keep things sane and healthful. However, the place is no paradise."

Governor Harris expects the state to save from twelve to fifteen thousand dollars in making the improvements by using convict labor. At present the legislature allows about ninety-five thousand dollars to care for the entire convict system of Georgia. In connection with today's investigation it was pointed out that the particular appropriation for the prison here has remained practically at a standstill whereas the number of convicts here was about doubled in the past five years.

The other principal development in today's investigation by Governor Harris

THE SUBSTANCE OF IT!

HUNDREDS TRAPPED IN LARGE STEAMER DROWNED LIKE RATS

Divers Continued Work Under Searchlights After Darkness Came, and Recovered Many More Bodies

THREE PROBES STARTED TO LOCATE THE BLAME

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, July 24.—A thousand persons lost their lives in the Chicago river today by the capsizing of the excursion steamer Eastland while warping from its wharf with more than 2,400 employes of the Western Electric company and their relatives and friends on board, bound for a pleasure trip across Lake Michigan.

After working ceaselessly all day and far into the night, the bodies of 842 victims of the catastrophe, most of them women and children, were collected in temporary morgues and taken to the Second Regiment armory. When these bodies had been tagged, Coroner Hoffman, taking into consideration estimates of bodies thought to be in the hold of the steamer, lying on its side in the river, and in the stream itself, said he had hopes that the total dead would not exceed 1,000.

The Eastland, said by marine architects to have been top-heavy and ballasted in an uncertain manner, turned over inside of five minutes after it began to list, pouring its gala passengers into the river, or imprisoning them in its submerged hull.

Every effort was made by thousands of persons on the river wharf to rescue the drowning men, women and children, but many went down almost within grasp of the river bank. Mothers went to death while their children were snatched to safety. Other children died in the arms of their parents, who finally were saved. Hundreds of girls, freed for a day from their tasks of making telephone and other electrical apparatus in the factory of the Western Electric company, dressed in their smartest white frocks, drowned miserably.

A pall of sorrow hung tonight over the entire West Side of Chicago, where the majority of the victims lived.

Several persons were taken alive from the cabins after the ship had lain on its side in the river for three hours, but the 170 or more others said to be in the hulk are all dead.

After a night of searchlights tonight scores of men worked in the hull of the vessel to remove the bodies. The steamer lay on the bottom of the river, one side protruding like a promontory to the hundreds it had drowned as it turned over.

CAUSE NOT DETERMINED.

The cause of capsizing had not been determined tonight, but federal, city and state officials were conducting investigations to determine whether the ship was top-heavy from faulty designing, was improperly ballasted or was poorly handled in leaving the wharf.

Under misty skies 7,000 men, women and children went to the Clark street dock early today to fill the large lake steamers with holiday mirth in a trip to Michigan City. The steamer Eastland was the first to be boarded.

Rain began to fall as the wharf superintendents lifted the gang planks from the Eastland, declaring that the steamer, built of 2,500 passengers had been reached.

The passengers swarmed to the left side of the ship as the other steamers drew up the river toward the wharf. A tug was hitched to the Eastland, ropes were ordered cast off and the steamer engines began to hum. The Eastland had not budged, however.

Then the heavily laden ship wavered sidewise, leaning first toward the river bank. The lurch was so startling that many passengers joined the large concourse already on the river side of the decks.

The ship never heeled back. It turned slowly, but steadily toward its left side. Children clutched the skirts of mothers and sisters to keep from falling. Water began to enter lower port holes and the hawsers tore at the splies to which the vessel was tied.

Then there was a plunge with a sigh of air escaping from the hold, mingled with crying of children and shrieks of women and the ship was on the bottom of the river, casting hundreds of living creatures to the water.

Many sank, entangled with clothing

POLICE BOARD CALLED TO TRY CHIEF BEAVERS

Majority Wants to Bring Formal Charges of Inefficiency and Insubordination

A special meeting of the board of police commissioners has been called for Monday night in order that formal charges of inefficiency and insubordination may be brought against Police Chief J. L. Beavers.

Eight members of the board, according to one commissioner, have agreed that in view of the fact that the board adopted the report of the probe committee, which they say in effect declares Chief Beavers to be incompetent and insubordinate, the chief should be given an opportunity to answer and, if he can, to disprove these charges in a formal manner.

This commission says the eight members of the board are aware that Chief Beavers testified at length before the investigating committee and was given an opportunity then to vindicate his administration, but they feel that he has failed to do so and that for the good of the police department and the city the situation should be thoroughly cleared up.

OPEN MOVE IS EXPECTED.

That the long-expected open move against the chief will come Monday night there is said to be little doubt. The special meeting has been called as the result of a petition signed by seven members of the board—a majority—before it was placed in the hands of Chairman W. P. Fain, who fixed Monday evening as the time for the meeting.

When formal charges against Chief Beavers were not presented at the last regular session of the board the reason assigned was the absence from the city of Commissioner J. W. English.

Following that meeting, however, it was generally reported that further action on the report of the probe committee would not be taken for several weeks. As the result of this report, the calling of the meeting for Monday night has occasioned surprise and interest.

The petition for a special meeting was circulated by Commissioner Andy King, who until a few weeks ago was supposed to be a supporter of Chief Beavers.

WANTS BEAVERS TRIED.

Since the report of the probe committee, however, Mr. King has openly contended that Chief Beavers should be placed on trial and given a chance to answer the charges made in the committee's report.

Besides Mr. King, another commissioner who has been active in working for the special session, was formerly regarded as a supporter of the chief.

As there are five members of the board who have been known for months to hold the opinion that the Beavers' administration is not successful, the situation in the police department is believed now to have undergone a change and the friends of the chief are said to have become anxious, fearing that he may be removed from office.

CORONER ORDERS ALL EASTLAND OFFICIALS PLACED UNDER ARREST

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, July 24.—Coroner Hoffman announced late tonight that he had ordered the arrest of every official of the Indiana Transportation company, which leased the Eastland. No individuals were mentioned in the coroner's announcement.

W. C. Steele, secretary and treasurer of the St. Joseph-Chicago Steamship company, who owned the Eastland, built on Lake Erie in 1903, and remodelled later, because topheavy, it is said, was arrested tonight and locked up at a police station. The steamer was leased by the Indiana Transportation company, whose officers said they were not responsible for the licensing of the ship and did not control the crew.

"The Eastland was the crank of the lakes," W. J. Wood, naval architect, who was called by the owners in 1903 to correct faults in the boat, declared today. In 1904 Wood made representations to Captain Ira Mansfield, local steamboat inspector, which resulted in an order to cut off the top deck of the vessel and to keep the water ballast compartments filled.

"The deck was cut off," Wood declared today, "but it would be impossible to fix the cause of the accident until it is known whether the other conditions were fulfilled.

"The design of the vessel would not permit its operation as other vessels are operated and great care had to be taken at all times."

The Eastland was built by the Port Huron Shipbuilding company, and on its trial run in 1903 failed to come up to specifications, according to Wood, who was one of three judges to pass on its performance.

GANGWAYS LEAKED.

"The gangways were not watertight," said Wood, "and I was called on to correct the fault as well as some of the other faults in the interior of the hull.

"It was most important that the water ballast compartments should be filled at all times. It was also important that the passengers should not crowd on one side of the upper deck.

"It seems to be evident that the passengers were not where they belonged when this accident happened.

"The fault in the Eastland was in the hull. I told the builders so at the time I was called to inspect some parts that were not properly designed.

"After the Eastland was completed $35,000 was spent to correct faults, but the vulnerable faults were in the hull and I got my first sight of it today as I saw the boat overturned in the river. There are certain fundamental principles applying to naval architec-

GERMANS SEE CONCESSION IN LATEST AMERICAN NOTE

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, left Washington today to remain away from the capital until instructions from his government or new developments make it necessary for him to confer again with officials here.

It was learned in German circles here tonight that the German interpretation of the statement in the last American note that the lives of noncombatants may not be put in jeopardy unless a vessel resists or seek to escape was expected to satisfy the German military

MAN BATTLES ROBBERS; DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED

John Head, twenty-four years old, of 19 Estoria street, is in Grady hospital and is not expected to live as a result of fatal wounds inflicted by two white men who held him up shortly after midnight this morning on his way home.

Head has one deep wound under the heart and several other cuts. His recovery is doubtful.

Head was on his way home when the two meen held him up at Gaskill and Estoria streets. He had some money and a watch, and the men ordered him to hold up his hands.

Although unarmed, e offered a fight, and people hearing the commotion ran out from their houses. They found the men gone and Head lying on the street.

The police have not as yet succeeded in finding a trace of the highwaymen.

MILITARY BUDGET WILL BE DOUBLED, IS BELIEF

Wilson's Request for Report on National Defense Causes Much Comment

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Announcement from the White House today that President Wilson directed Secretaries Garrison and Daniels to report to him a program of national defense caused widespread comment.

Several weeks ago the president discussed the question with his cabinet with the result that both departments began a permanent policy for adequate national defense.

The White House statement gave no reason for the announcement, stating merely that the president would confer on his return from Cornish, N. H., with Secretaries Daniels and Garrison "to formulate a sane, reasonable and practical program of national defense."

It was indicated, however, in official quarters that the direction given to expedite the plans being made resulted from a consideration of the possibilities of the international situation.

The president, in letters to Secretaries Garrison and Daniels early last week calling for the reports made no reference to any particular situation but emphasized the importance of the entire subject of national defense. He wishes to make the navy as efficient as any in the world; to see the regular army adequately developed and equipped and the citizenry trained to arms in a way consistent with American traditions.

PREPARING DATA.

For several weeks Secretary Garrison has been in conference with members of the general staff shaping plans for presentation to the president. The general board of the navy abandoned its usual summer trip to Newport and is preparing its recommendations for Secretary Daniels. The president wishes to have the information ready when he returns and the indications are that the influence of the administration will be exerted to secure adequate appropriations.

Mr. Wilson has not indicated whether he will call congress into special session. This depends largely on developments in the international situation. The dispatch to Germany of what is generally regarded as the strongest note yet written to any of the European belligerents, has accentuated the possibility of special session in event American rights again are violated by German submarine commanders.

Among army and navy officers familiar with developments the belief prevails that a military budget practically double that of last year will be presented to congress. It is believed, will seek at least $200,000,000 and the navy perhaps as high as $250,000,000.

RESERVE ARMY.

War department plans look toward the development of a large reserve army with a minimum, it is said, of 400,000 men and with adequate provision for the use of the militia and men who have previously served in the regular army. Weekly meetings are being held by the board designated by Secretary Garrison to prepare plans for a general reorganization of the army. Special attention is being given, it is understood, to planning for an adequate supply of munitions.

The navy department, it has been indicated, will ask for at least thirty, and probably fifty submarines. The general board's recommendations are also expected to include a number of battle cruisers, a minimum of four dreadnoughts and a proportionate number of scout cruisers and auxiliary craft such as fuel ships and submarine tenders. The department is engaged with experiments with submarines and submarines and also with attempts to find a practical means of defense for battleships against torpedoes.

and members of the prison commission were:

The statement of William Creen, who slashed the throat of Leo M. Frank last Saturday night, to the effect that he tried to kill Frank because he believed that in so doing he would rid the state of a man whose presence here invited an attack on the prison with consequent loss of life.

The statement of Governor Harris in response to the plea of Edgar Stripling's six-year-old daughter, that he will pardon her father within the next two years.

The statement of the governor that he believes Warden Smith is conducting the prison satisfactorily and is not to be blamed for recent occurences.

Commendation of Warden Smith by the Baldwin county grand jury.

Petitioning of the governor by practically every convict to pardon Dr. W. J. McNaughton who saved Frank's life last Saturday night.

Prison commissioners' statement that Stripling's case probably will be taken up Monday week. The governor already is thoroughly familiar with the case and will act on it as soon as passed on to him by the commission.

Following the inspection of the prison proper the governor and officials went through adjacent buildings and the reformatory. They pronounced themselves pleased with the manner in which the various departments are being conducted.

Governor Harris, General Nash, Commissioners Rainey and Patterson motored to Macon this afternoon and will reach Atlanta tonight at 8:30. Chairman Davidson motored to his home in Greensboro.

Commissioners and prison officials are in a quandry as to what will be done with Creen who already is serving a life term. They do not venture to guess.

Frank is improving rapidly and apparently is past the danger line. He reiterated his innocence today, repeated the statement made when on the operating table, facing death, that he entertains no malice toward Creen.

Frank asserted he would not recognize Creen should he see him. Frank's statement as to how he was attacked coincides precisely with accounts as given in The Journal, to the effect that he was asleep and Creen crept upon him and cut his throat. Frank's hands pillowed his head as he slept and he grabbed the knife, the result being a bad gash on his right hand.

Frank's wound is healing rapidly. Mrs. Frank is still here and probably will be here for some time.

"There isn't much for me to say," said Frank. "I have worked as hard and well as I could. I came here as the lowest grade prisoner and of course wore stripes. I have done the work of a menial and worked as best I could."

Baldwin Grand Jury Commends Warden Smith

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., July 24.—Eighteen of the twenty-two members of the Baldwin county grand jury, all who could be reached today signed resolutions commending Warden James E. Smith of the prison.

authorities of the fact that the United States has not insisted on a complete abandonment of submarine warfare as such. It was believed that this point would be considered as a concession and would add weight to that element of official and public opinion in Germany which is urging a more conciliatory attitude toward the United States.

Count von Bernstorff viewed with satisfaction the statement in the American note that the United States would insist upon the freedom of the seas "from whatever quarter violated." He hopes this will be accepted in Germany as a proof that the Washington government intends to insist upon its rights with the same firmness toward Great Britain as elsewhere. The German ambassador believes that the American attitude would probably cause American citizens to take passage on British ships to demand of the captains of such vessels that their lives be safeguarded by an adherence to the precepts of international law in obeying the warnings of war craft.

Conflicting reports reached the German embassy today as to what occurred in the Orduna case. According to statements made by some of the passengers on the ship no torpedo was fired by the German submarine from which the liner escaped. They saw only the shell fire at the ship. Lacking any official statement from their own officials they would not discuss the Orduna incident.

Germany Will Endeavor Not to Damage Neutral Interests

(By Associated Press.)

BERLIN, July 24.—(Via London, July 25.)—The text of the American note has not yet been published in Berlin, but the afternoon papers print a fairly exhaustive authoritative summary. For the most part the papers reserve comment until the full text of the note is known.

The Lokal Anzeiger, in an apparently inspired article, asserts its confidence that Germany in utilizing its submarines in the future will endeavor to combine advantage for Germany with the least possible detriment to neutral interests and expresses the belief that the American note will furnish ground for further negotiations.

After pointing out the friendly form of the note, the Lokal Anzeiger says:

"The questions raised in the note must naturally be considered carefully by the German authorities; therefore it is impossible for the time being to forecast the answer. The British version indicating that America considered the note as the final word in the negotiations, is entirely unfounded.

"After the previous negotiations the confidence, in any case, is justified that Germany will continue to employ her valuable submarine weapon, over which the present differences of opinion have arisen, in a manner useful to us and least damaging for neutrals. We had and have naturally no interest in arraying neutrals against us. On the contrary, it must be our intention to avoid everything unnecessarily endangering the well comprehended rights of neutral states."

The Germania and the Boerlen Zeitung briefly discuss the note in terms very similar to those of the Lokal Anzeiger.

The Germania assures its readers that the recent inactivity of the submarines was due to bad weather and not to a cessation of submarine warfare. The Boersen Zeitung says:

"We will assume that the refusal of our proposal is an intentional brusqueness; nevertheless, President Wilson's policies appear in the latest note to have found a peculiarly vigorous expression."

The Tages Zeitung points out that the American note flatly rejects the German proposals and adds:

"Adoption of President Wilson's standpoint would be equivalent to a death sentence for the German submarine campaign. It is utterly impossible for submarines to establish whether the Americans are aboard merchantmen which are attacked, and as a consequence all ships could proceed safely. The American attitude is neither friendly nor necessary to the American interest, nor neutral in spirit. Principles are brought to the foreground and practical conciliatory proposals are rejected in order to relieve our enemies from the effects of a policy increasingly injurious to them and correspondingly advantageous to the Germans."

The Kreuz Zeitung says:

"The note manifests not the slightest desire to appreciate the German standpoint, but clings stiff-neckedly to the alleged flight of American citizens to travel safely on English ships, even when loaded with bombs and shells."

President at Cornish for Hard Work, Not Vacation

(By Associated Press.)

CORNISH, N. H., July 24.—Freed from the minor worries incident to his official life in Washington, President Wilson settled down here today to a period of hard work on a group of subjects which he has desired to study for some time. He arrived at Harlakenden House this afternoon for an indefinite stay. The reports from Secretary Garrison and Secretary Daniels on matters about which the president has requested them to prepare for him, will not be placed before him until his return to Washington, but he plans to give preliminary consideration to the subjects while here. His ultimate object is to get material for incorporation in his next message to congress.

Mr. Wilson brought with him data on the Mexican question and next week he will receive from Secretary Lansing the draft of the note to Great Britain protesting against interference with commerce between the United States and neutral nations abroad, which has been under preparation for some time.

The president's object in coming here at this time was described by him today in speaking to an admirer at a station on the way.

"I am not expecting a vacation," he said, "but am coming to Cornish for an uninterrupted opportunity for work."

It was not generally known that the president was en route to Cornish, but as he neared his journey's end he went to the rear platform of his private car at every stop and shook hands with the few persons gathered to see him. He looked tired and careworn.

WILSON'S ORDER TO FIRE HALTS CARRANZA TROOPS

Chief Tells His Soldiers to Discontinue March Toward Nogales

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Orders were issued today with the approval of President Wilson to Major General Funston to repel with force, if necessary, any firing into American territory during fighting between the Mexican factions in border towns, and a note was dispatched to General Carranza advising him of that fact.

Soon afterward advices from Vera Cruz to the Carranza headquarters here said the general had instructed General Calles, his commander, before Nogales, not to attack the Villa force there, and gave assurances that the Carranza forces which had occupied Naco would withdraw, leaving a civil administration in charge. The garrison marched out late today.

What thereafeened a new complication in the Mexican situation apparently passed over with officials here determined to take direct action if the Mexicans force the fighting. The specific method of repelling any possible attack was not mentioned in the note to Carranza, but the inference was that American artillery would deal with any situation construed as as an attack on American citizens.

Specific instructions to General Funston was directed to resist border fighting without referring the question further to Washington.

CARRANZA ACTS.

General Carranza apparently gave immediate heed to the warning. A dispatch received from him by his agency here late today stated he had instructed Calles to discontinue their march on Nogales.

The state department has had the border situation under consideration for several days. The Villa and Carranza agencies here have each held the other responsible for the violation of the agreement to neutralize border towns made when General Hugh Scott, chief of staff of the army, last visited Naco. Without engaging in any controversy the American government has insisted that the status quo be maintained and no fighting attempted which would endanger lives on the American side of the boundary.

The Carranza agency gave out tonight the following telegram from Naco.

"The town of Naco, Sonora, was today evacuated by all of our military forces in accordance with the agreement made last January between Brigadier General Hugh L. Scott, chief of the staff, United States army, and the factional leaders in Sonora. Naco has been left in the hands of the civil authorities of the constitutionalist government."

The situation throughout Mexico as reported from various sections today was considered discouraging by officials.

With the main forces away from their bases and moving away from depot railroads, news of the military situation is meager. In Las Mochis, state of Sinalca, 1,500 Mayo Indians are causing much apprehension and the American government has forces nearby, has been asked to assist in protecting foreigners and their property.

The state department's summary today of conditions in Mexico included the following announcement:

"The department is in receipt of advices from Torreon saying that it is reported by one who has just arrived from Torreon, who is regarded as reliable, that the story of the execution of 30 railroad men at Torreon is untrue, as also the report of the execution of Francis Ugarto, who, however, is said to be under arrest.

"Delayed news from Mexico City, dated the 13th instant, is to the effect that the railroad connections with Toluca and Cuernavaca were destroyed by the Zapatistas when they retreated to the south and west. All foodstuffs were being, the relief committees being unable to fully cope with the situation. The city council has appointed a chief of police and order is being fairly well preserved. A few hundred soldiers are in the city. The city has no communication with the outside world except through courier, but it is hoped that the cable service will shortly be restored. Nothing is said of the possibility of a wireless service being established. The report does not mention the position now held by General Gonzales and his forces, nor does it make any reference to the whereabouts of the 'flying column.'"

LIKE SCENE FROM PLAY.

At the foot of the steps he sank down clutching his precious bundle while a guard brought him a glass of water. At the door he recovered for his last bit of bravery. Straightening his shoulders, he said: "As an officer of the United States I have the honor to deliver to you David Esaacson, the prisoner."

Once inside, he broke completely. They let him sit in a chair while a guard went for the captain, back there where the music made violent discord. It was like a scene from a play, for a bloody sun was sinking, and its rays struck through a barred window to fall, full and crimson, on Esaacson's face.

For a moment he gripped the arms of his chair to stop the hysterical sobbing that rasked himself half way, pointing dramatically to the light. His voice was so thick that the reporter had to bend low to hear words.

"See," whispered Esaacson. "That is the sunset of life. I will never leave here. They honored me by sending me alone—to a living hell!"

He crumpled into a heap until the captain touched his arm. "Sign," said the captain, and Esaacson signed a paper proclaiming himself indeed David Esaacson, honor prisoner—while his hand shook like a leaf.

north of the Polish capital have tightened their grip on the city and military critics say that the abandonment of Warsaw again becomes more probable.

The German forces have crossed the Narew river north of Warsaw and have a considerable weight of men on the south bank between the fortresses of Rozan and Pultusk, which a Berlin official statement describes as having been "stormed irresistibly." The communication, however, does not state whether the fortresses capitulated.

The fight in southern Ceurland, according to German claims, has resulted in something akin to a crushing victory. General von Buelow's forces having cut off the Russian retreat and delivered a body blow. It is stated that the Germans cut up the retiring troops badly, dispersing those that were not killed, wounded or captured.

That the Russians are holding the immediate Warsaw front is evidenced by a German official statement which refers to only minor operations in this area and tells of a comparatively insignificant number of prisoners taken. Military critics say this indicates that there have been no serious attacks which probably means that the Germans are dug-in waiting reinforcements while the Russians are risking nothing in counter attacks.

The report of the investment of Ivangorod is patently erroneous as the Germans speak of attacks west of the city.

Mining and grenade throwing around Souchez constitute the only notable event along the western front.

The Turks again have assailed the British left on the Gallipoli peninsula. The attacking party approached the British trenches with the snap that they have heretofore shown, but the Turks withered before the machine gun fire and the British lost no ground.

Battle Line Quiet, Says Paris Statement

PARIS, July 24.—The following official communication was issued by the war office tonight:

"There is nothing to report except an artillery action around Souchez, the throwing of some shells on Soissons and Rheims and a violent bombardment in the forest of Le Petre.

"A German aeroplane was brought to earth near Bethancourt, the two aviators being taken prisoners."

(By Associated Press.)

BERLIN, (Via Wireless to Sayville, L. I.) July 24.—The Overseas News agency gives out the following for publication:

"The German people are expecting a decisive battle on the Russian front, the result of which may decide the war. Within ten days the Austro-Germans have made 120,000 prisoners.

"The Deutsche Tage Zeitung says that, according to official reports at 11 o'clock on the morning of July 20, eighteen miles east of the Firth of Forth, a German submarine stopped an 800-ton steamer flying the Danish flag. Suddenly the steamer opened fire with two guns, she hauled down the flag after the first salvo, but continued to fire without showing a flag. Only after the fifth or sixth salvo was the British war ensign hoisted. The submarine luckily escaped this attack."

Another Overseas News Agency today says:

"Private advices from the Italian front, received in Vienna, declare that the present fearful struggle along the Isonzo river is comparable only with the Russian efforts to pierce the Austrain wall at Dulka Pass in the Carpathian mountains.

"For five days, wave after wave of fresh troops have rolled continuously against the Austrian lines. If an assault is repulsed a fresh regiment presses forward, trying to exhaust the heroic defenders. Occasionally the attacking forces succeed in reaching the trenches where hand-to-hand fighting ensues, terrible scenes being enacted, especially during night attacks in the illumination of glearing searchlights, gun butts, bayonets, knives and daggers being brought into play until the invading Russians are thrown back, their losses exceeding anything heard of before."

Make it Easier For Baby in Summer

Many of the Hot-Weather Troubles Can Easily Be Avoided

If the mother will see to it that the bowels are kept regular, much of the illness to which children are most susceptible during hot weather can be prevented.

A mild laxative, administered at regular intervals, will prove an excellent preventive of summer complaints that are caused by inactive bowels. The combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, sold in drug stores under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is excellent for children, being pleasant to the taste, gentle yet positive in action, and free from opiate or narcotic drug of any description. It acts naturally, without griping or other discomfort, and is altogether dependable.

The cleansing of the bowels will most effectively check an attack of diarrhoea by expelling the foreign matter and poisons that irritate and inflame the tissues.

In every home a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin should be on hand, ready for use when occasion requires. It costs only 50 cents a bottle and is sold in drug stores everywhere. A free trial bottle can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 452 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

To Discard Freckles, Tan, Pimples, Wrinkles

The use of creams containing animal substance sometimes causes hair to grow. You run no risk of acquiring superfluous hair when you use ordinary mercolized wax. There is nothing better for a discolored skin, as the wax actually absorbs the offensive cuticle. The latter is naturally replaced by a clear, smooth, healthy complexion, full of life and expression. It's the sensible way to discard a freckled, tanned, over-red, blotchy or pimpled skin. Get as ounce of mercolized wax at any druggist's and apply nightly like cold cream, erasing in the morning with soap and water. It takes a week or so to complete the transformation.

The ideal wrinkle remover is made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in the solution brings almost instantaneous results. (Advt.)

ture which seemed not to have been carried out.

"The Eastland had almost no body at all and this was its main weakness.

"Other boats on the lakes look as top-heavy as did the Eastland, but they are absolutely safe because their hulls are properly constructed."

PASSENGERS UPSET BOAT.

That a sudden rush of people on the deck of the Eastland to the port side to look at a speeding launch caused the catastrophe was the assertion of Jack Elbert, gauge tender of the steamer.

He said he and J. M. Erickson, chief engineer, escaped drowning by wading through water in the hatch and crawling out of a port hole into the river.

"The steamer Eastland was kept stable by means of a water ballast system," Elbert said. "Water is pumped into the chambers in the ship until she becomes steady. This was done before ever freight was taken on board. The first thing I noticed this morning was that the Eastland began to lean to starboard. Erickson, the chief engineer, was in charge of the pumps used to pump the water into the chambers.

"STEADY HER UP!"

"He said, 'Boys, steady her up a little,' and then we pumped water into the other side until she was up even and all right. We had just evened up when a launch came down the river and passed the Eastland, and the crowd on the deck rushed over to the port side to look at it. The weight all on one side apparently proved too much, and the Eastland began to list badly.

"We worked frantically at the pumps to try to bring her back, but she was too far gone."

Eye-witnesses informed the police that there was a man in the launch with a moving picture camera, and that this attracted the attention of passengers on the Eastland, who rushed to one side of the boat.

COMPANY'S STATEMENT.

W. K. Greenebaum, manager of the Indiana Transportation company, made the following statement late in the day:

"The Indiana Transportation company expresses its deepest sorrow and sympathy for the bereaved in the Eastland catastrophe. The Eastland was not overloaded. There were some 2,408 tickets taken up at the Eastland gangway by the Eastland collectors under federal supervision. The government capacity mark is set at 2,500.

"At this time the Indiana Transportation company is unable to voice an opinion on the cause of the accident because the Eastland was hired for the day, and the captain and crew were not employes of the Indiana Transportation company.

"We are doing everything in our power in aiding all investigations both by legal authorities and by the press.

"To both we have thrown open every facility for information and relief at our command."

Rescue Work Goes on at Night by Searchlight

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, July 24.—With ten high powered searchlights playing over the scene from roofs of neighboring buildings and the inside of the ill-fated steamer illuminated with electric bulbs, the hunt for bodies continued after dark.

The hazardous task of stringing the electric light wires inside the wreck was accomplished by twenty or more electricians.

NEW PEACH CROP WILL BEGIN TO MOVE SOON

The entire south Georgia peach crop, one of the best in years, will be practically ended this week, and the north Georgia crop will begin to move about Monday, is the statement of the Georgia Fruit exchange.

The north Georgia crop will not be very large at first, says the exchange, and the total crop will not be as large as expected.

The fruit exchange has been instrumental in securing very satisfactory prices for this year's crop. The indications are that the prices will remain about the same for the next week or ten days, but, with the passing of time and the scarcity of peaches, states the exchange, the prices will of necessity have to be raised.

The exchange states that more markets have enjoyed Georgia peaches this year than ever before, and that there is a constant demand for them by all the large markets of the east and north.

EUGENE C. WHITEHEAD, Atlanta boy who escaped Eastland disaster at Chicago when his company's excursion steamer tipped over in Lake Michigan. Young Whitehead had intended to go on the trip but was detained in Chicago.

ATLANTA BOY WAS NOT PASSENGER ON EASTLAND

Eugene C. Whitehead Did Not Make Trip on Ill-Fated Ship as Was Expected

A telegram from Eugene S. Whitehead late Saturday afternoon to The Journal brought news that the young man, a graduate of the Georgia School of Technology and an employe of the Western Electric company, at Chicago, whose excursion steamer capsized Saturday morning with the loss of hundreds of lives, was not a passenger on the Eastland.

Mr. Whitehead's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Whitehead, of College Park, and his many friends here, were in great anxiety Saturday when The Journal's extras brought them the first news of the disaster. They knew that young Whitehead went on the picnic last year and had intended to go this year.

A telegram Saturday morning to his mother said that he was safe, but did not state whether he had been on the overturned steamer.

REMINGTON PLANT MEN WILL GO BACK TO WORK

(By Associated Press.)

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 24. —With the ratification tonight by the machinists of the agreement reached between the labor leaders and the Remington Arms and Ammunition company and the Stewart Construction company, the strike at the arms company's plant today came to an end and the men will be back at work Monday. The structural iron workers took similar action during the day.

The agreement provides for a regularly week schedule of 48 hours for both day and night shifts, beginning August 1, any time worked in excess of these hours to be regarded as overtime, for which extra pay will be given. All employes who were involved in the trouble are to be taken back and the pay will not be less than was in vogue prior to the trouble.

and bundles and did not rise, but hundreds came to the surface, seized floating chairs and other objects. Persons on shore threw out ropes and dragged in those who could hold these life lines. Employes of commission firms, along the river threw crates, chicken coops and other floatable objects into the water, but most of these were swept away by the current.

Boats put out, tugs rushed to the scene with shrieking whistles and many men jumped into the river to aid the drowning. With thousands of spectators ready to aid and the wharf within grasp hundreds went to death despite every effort at rescue.

One mother grasped her two children in her arms as she slipped from the steamer into the water. One child was torn from her but she and the other were saved. Fathers were prominent in aiding their wives and children to safety.

One man was seen to cling to a spike in the side of the wharf while two women and three children stepped upon his body to reach it. He fell exhausted into the river as the last one of the five reached the pier.

Instances of heroism were almost as numerous as the number of persons on the scene. Boats as soon as full took rescued passengers to the wharf or to the steamer Theodore Roosevelt, which was tied up opposite the England.

In an hour the water was cleared of excursionists but it had not been taken to land had sunk or were swirling down the river towards the drainage canal lock, Lockport, Ill., many miles away. The locks were raised to stop the current and arrangements were made to take bodies from the river along its course through the southwest part of Chicago.

STEAMER'S HULL CUT.

Shortly after the water was cleared, city firemen and workmen were on the exposed side of the Eastland's hull, cutting through its steel plates with gas flames. Divers were hurried into under-water suits. A tug was moored as a bridge between the pier and the cap-hized ship.

As the divers gained entrance to the hull, the scene of distress moved for the time being from the river to the extemporized morgues. Warehouses of wholesale companies along the river were thrown open and bodies were placed in rows on the floors. Scores of persons rescued from the water were injured and these were taken to the Iroquois hospital, built in memory of the six hundred women, children, and a few men who were burned and crushed to death in the Iroquois theater several years ago.

Efforts to resuscitate those taken from the river were generally unsuccessful. Only two or three were thus saved. It was also said that many of the injured would die.

CITY IN CONSTERNATION.

The whole city was in consternation over the catastrophe. Word of the accident spread rapidly and to the thousands already at or near the wharf other thousands added themselves. The Clark street bridge near the wharf was crowded until it threatened to collapse. Streets had to be cleared by the police to allow the passage of ambulances.

Business men sent their automobiles and motor trucks to help aid the injured and carry away the dead. One warehouse soon was filled with bodies and other dead were taken to the Second regiment armory, a mile away.

Mayor William Hale Thompson was in San Francisco and Chief of Police C. C. Healey was also out of town, but Acting Mayor Moorhouse sent out a request that the city display signs of mourning. Flags on public buildings were placed at half mast and many buildings were draped with mourning. Baseball games were postponed and festivities largely ceased.

STREAM OF CORPSES.

While those on land were disposing of the dead, injured and rescued the divers in the heart of the sunken vessel who had been caught between a pile of corpses from the submerged decks. First it was a gaily dressed girl in her teens, who had been caught between a pile of chairs and a cabin wall. Next it was a slight boy, gathered from the lifeless arms of a fond father, who had clung to his offspring even in death.

Then followed an old woman, who had gone aboard the ship to watch the youthful pleasure of her grandchildren, or a little girl with bare legs and bootees, with gay ribbons sodden against the face of her holiday gown.

One thrill passed through the crowd as word came from the steamer that a girl baby had been found alive among the hundreds of dead in the ship. The child was discovered in a starboard stateroom, where she had been held against the water by a chair that jammed against the berth. The baby only hair awakened as it was carried to land. Its mother could not be found.

TWO WOMEN SAVED.

Two women were found alive in another stateroom in a protruding side of the Eastland, but that ended the hopes that any number had escaped death in the trap. There were still 800 persons in the hold when these three persons were taken out alive, and the explorers of the hulk said that all were dead.

Work of tagging the bodies of the dead and placing them in accessible places for identification proceeded all day and night. Reports from various temporary morgues gave a total of 770 bodies, but tabulation became so confusing that it was decided to take all bodies to the Second regiment armory so that those who were looking for lost friends and relatives could view all the victims in one place.

SCENES IN MORGUE.

Identification was slow, and scenes at the morgues were as affecting as those at the river when the steamer capsized. Mothers fell across the biers of children whom they had sent away a few hours before on what was intended to be a day of pleasure. Men had to summon all the stoical qualities they possessed to retain their composure as they passed between rows of corpses, looking for missing children or wives.

Yet amidst all the horror and heartache officers of various departments attended to pressing duties of disposition of the dead and injured, tracing of the missing, inquiry into the cause of the disaster, and precautions against disease from unclaimed bodies, and the carrying of corpses by the river toward the canal locks.

Federal Judge Landis ordered a grand jury impanelled to investigate the catastrophe; State's Attorney Heyne prepared a county grand jury inquiry; Coroner Hoffman called a jury to look into the cause of the deaths; the police arrested all the officers of the Eastland, and the health commissioner arranged to purify the river, for fear disease might be spread by the presence of many bodies in the stream.

WILL RAISE STEAMER.

Arrangements also were made to get at the sunken vessel to determine the underlying causes of the accident. Derricks on scows were taken to the side of the Eastland, and marine engineers were engaged to inspect the ship.

Those in charge of the various works of clearing up the toll of casualties and determining the responsibility for the capsizing of the boat said tonight the endeavor would necessarily be slow because of the large number of persons aboard the Eastland and the difficulty of getting at the hull of the steamer.

Victims of Steamer Horror Had Planned Great Jubilee

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, July 24.—The "July Jubilator," the official newspaper of employes of the Western Electric company advertising the picnic in Michigan City, Mich., that was prevented by the steamer Eastland disaster, was filled with jokes and cartoons on what might have taken place. Copies of the paper were found on many of the victims.

"Whoa!

"Readers of the Jubilator be jubilant! Last time it was a submarine.

Long ago Jonah took a trip in a submarine.

There is no Jonah about this.

But it will be a whale of a success."

The fifth annual picnic of the employes was to have been the largest ever held.

A great parade in Michigan City with movlemen recording every event, athletic contests and other amusements had been provided.

Prizes had been offered for the most novel costumes in the parade and this accounted for the gorgeous attire on many of the bodies.

ONE MAN SAVES FOUR.

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, July 24.—Charles Williams, representative for a New York concern, stripped to his underclothes and plunged into the river. He saved a man who was choking to death.

Next he saw a young girl struggling in the middle of the river. Williams grabbed her by the hair, swam to a North Side dock and helped her climb to safety. A man in a patrol boat yelled to him that another young woman had gone down at a spot he pointed out. Williams dived, found the girl and took her to shore, where a pulmotor revived her. Then he brought a three year old child to shore.

MOVIE SCENES FORBIDDEN.

Early Relief Is Planned by American Red Cross

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, July 24.—Acting Mayor Moorehouse and J. J. O'Connor, director of the central division of the American Red Cross, laid plans for relief of the Eastland victims at a meeting tonight attended by officers of the Western Electric company.

Private stores and offices were turned into relief stations and public utility concerns helped. The Chicago Telephone company installed a score of free telephones near the Eastland's docks, whence survivors flashed word to anxious relatives.

The Red Cross established an emergency station at the Second Regiment Armory, prepared to take care of prostration cases and accidents. The Nurses Association and society volunteered to care for survivors and stricken relatives and were helped by hotels, which furnished gallons of coffee and hundreds of sandwiches.

Under direction of the city health department treatment to prevent typhoid fever was accorded survivors who might have swallowed river water.

Pass the Land Titles Bill.

It is gratifying to know that the General Judiciary committee of the House has recommended for passage the bill introduced by Mr. Turner, of Brooks, and Mr. Barfield, of Bibb, providing for a simpler and safer system of land titles in Georgia. The enactment and operation of this measure will establish new and impregnable safeguards to the rightful ownership of land, and also will make real estate a sounder and readier basis of credit. The special commission which was authorized, under a joint resolution of the House and Senate last August, to investigate and report upon this subject has well said:

"Land is the most valuable commodity in any State. Title to land should be the surest and safest of all investments; but practical experience has demonstrated that, under our present laws, this is not the case. The ownership of land should be a sure and easy basis of credit; but owing to our present method dealing with land titles, the borrowing of money on land is a slow and expensive process. Every doubt as to title makes land less valuable. The necessity of investigating and reinvestigating the title from time to time, as it is sold or given as security, detracts from its choiceness as investment. Too frequent have been the cases where men have invested the savings of years in lands, and lost them through unsuspected defect in titles."

The pending bill is designed to overcome these difficulties and uncertainties. It provides to that end "a cheap, yet thorough and comprehensive procedure by which anyone who really owns a tract of land may have his title confirmed and established by a decree which will stand in any court just as if it were the State's plat and grant issued to him, and at the same time will make it extremely difficult for one who is not the true owner to register, and thereby steal someone else's land." The bill also provides simple and reliable means whereby titles thus confirmed can be registered, and transferred or otherwise dealt with, so that every person acquiring a subsequent interest therein will have ample security.

Under the proposed system, the landowner may file with the Superior court a petition asking that his title be examined and certified by the court. If upon due advertisement of his petition no other claimants intervene, and if upon due investigation no defect in the title is found, the court will issue to the petitioner a Certificate of Title, which will be absolute evidence of ownership. This certificate will then be entered in a register book kept especially for that purpose by the clerk of the court, each certificate being given a page to itself. On this page there will be space for recording all subsequent transactions connected with or affecting the particular title, such, for instance, as mortgages, liens, homesteads or other encumberances. Thus it will be easy to ascertain at any time the exact legal status of any piece of registered land simply by consulting the proper page of the register book.

As the court's certificate will be conclusive evidence of ownership and as the system of registration will show at a glance all encumberances, land so certified and registered can be transferred almost as simply as ordinary commercial paper, and can be used as collateral with as great facility as if it were a stock or a bond of equal value." Three important purposes thus can be served: the valid title to land can be established beyond future contest; the tedious and oftentimes costly investigations now required in most real estate transfers can be made unnecessary; and the owner of land can enjoy facilities far greater than now in using his land as a basis of credit.

As the authors of the bill explain, the proposed system will not be forced upon anyone. "Any landowner may avail himself of its benefits; no landowner is required to do so." Because of the valuable safeguards it provides and the valuable conveniences it affords, this well-considered measure should be made a law.

Our Final Word to Germany.

THE latest note to Germany is America's final word on the great rights and principles at issue. Berlin cannot misunderstand or evade the straightforward, conclusive terms in which the President has spoken his country's thought and will. It matters little what Germany now does. Future invasions of neutral rights by German submarines "must be regarded by the Government of the United States, when they affect American citizens, as deliberately unfriendly." There is no mistaking the gravity of that pronouncement. It is virtually an ultimatum. It puts an end to idle parley and rivets upon the German Government full responsibility for continued peace or severed relations.

That developments should reach this crucial stage was made inevitable by the pettifogging course which Berlin thus far has pursued. Neither of our previous notes received an answer in any wise satisfactory or sincere. Their just and reasonable demands were evaded; and the principles of law and humanity for which they contended, though formally acknowledged, were really ignored. Berlin began with the unwarranted assumption that the Lusitania was an armed vessel, carrying troops and munitions of war, and therefore subject to destruction. This preposterous claim having been exploded, Berlin turned to proposals which could not have been accepted save at the surrender of the very rights on which the United States insists. From the outset, Berlin has dodged and temporized, apparently doubting the seriousness of America's purpose. It was essential, therefore, that decisive notice be served. This, the President has done. He has done it without bluster or excitement but with unmistakable determination, and the country is a unit behind him.

Developments now rest with Germany. If she conducts her submarine warfare in accordance with international law and in such a way as not to infract the neutral rights of American property and lives on the high seas, further trouble will be averted. But if she persists in the lawless, conscienceless course that sent hundreds of innocent noncombatants to death in the Lusitania, if she repeats this atrocious act against American citizens, she will be brought to full and instant accountability. On this matter, there can be no further argument. Our Government has taken its stand once and for all on the principle "that the high seas are free, that the character and cargo of a merchantman must first be ascertained before she can lawfully be seized or destroyed, and that the lives of noncombatants may in no case be put in jeopardy unless the vessel resists or seeks to escape after being summoned to submit to examination." Standing on this principle, which is the inviolate law of the civilized world, the United States makes its final demand of Germany and awaits the outcome with calmness and iron resolution.

"Illegal and inhuman acts, however justifiable they may be thought to be against an enemy who is believed to have acted in contravention of law and humanity," the note declares, "are manifestly indefensible when they deprive neutrals of their acknowledged rights, particularly when they violate the right to life itself. If the belligerent cannot retaliate against the enemy without injuring the lives of neutrals, as well as their property, humanity, as well as justice and a due regard for the dignity of neutral powers, should dictate that the practice be discontinued. If persisted in it would in such circumstances constitute an unpardonable offense against the sovereignty of the neutral nation affected."

From the events of recent weeks, however, there is ample reason to believe that it is both possible and practicable for submarines to operate effectually and at the same time in keeping with the standards of law and humanity. With the exception of the Orduna incident, regarding which there is yet no official report, German submarines have not attacked unarmed merchantmen without warning or endangered the lives of neutrals and noncombatants since the Lusitania outrage. "It is manifestly possible, therefore," as our Government declares, "to lift the whole practice of submarine attack above the criticism which it has aroused and remove the chief cause of offense." If, then, Germany commits another wrong of this kind, it will be a "deliberately unfriendly" act, and as a matter of justice and honor our peaceful relations with the German Government must cease.

Mere words from Berlin will suffice no longer. Quibbling and evasion are at an end. American rights must be respected, or they will be defended "without compromise and at any cost."

Our Case Against Great Britain.

Washington dispatches announce that a note to Great Britain protesting against unlawful interference with commerce between the United States and neutral nations, is virtually complete and will be sent forward, probably within the next few days. The fact that this issue has not been pressed to an earlier accounting is due in no sense to hesitancy or negligence, but to a wise policy of dealing with grave problems one at a time and in the order of their relative importance. For weeks and months past the Administration has been absorbed in the American case against Germany, which involved not only the rights of property but also the rights of human life. Now that it has spoken its ultimate word on this supremely vital matter, our Government is free to handle the British case with equal energy and resolution.

And we have every assurance that it will do so. In his latest note to Berlin the President declares, significantly enough: "The Government of the United States will continue to contend for that freedom (the freedom of the seas), from whatever quarter violated, without compromise and at any cost." There could be no clearer notice to belligerents in general as well as to Germany in particular that the neutral rights of American citizens and American trade must be respected. Germany's offense has taken precedence over Great Britain's because Germany's involved the more vital interest; but our Government is none the less mindful of Great Britain's high-handed interference with American vessels bound for neutral ports and her seizure of cargoes intended for neutral customers.

Our cotton growers and producers of other staples need have no apprehension that the Administration will neglect their interests as menaced by the European war. The fact that the Administration has not acted hastily is no sign that it will not act firmly and conclusively. American rights will be enforced wherever or by whomever they are challenged. Great Britain as well as Germany will be held strictly to account.

Any man who knows it all must be an awful bore to himself.

Those who suffer in silence usually have a lot to say about it later.

Steady Work for Foreign Trade.

It is a singularly interesting fact that despite the roar of guns the American Chamber of Commerce for the Levant with main offices at Constantinople is going tranquilly forward with its constructive mission. In its latest report it urges the merchants and manufacturers in the United States "to redouble their efforts to enter markets that formerly bought supplies from Germany and the other nations at war;" and it also directs attention to the tremendous trade opportunities that will soon unfold in Russia.

Commenting on this report, the New York Commercial remarks:

"We buy freely from the Near East but sell little in return. We take fifteen million dollars a year from Egypt and twenty million from Turkey. Next to the United Kingdom, we are Turkey's best customer, but we sell less than two per cent of the half billion dollars' worth of the products imported by the countries of the Levant and the Balkans, and most of that small share passes through second hands. Asia Minor will be thrown open to the world after peace is restored. The railroad from Constantinople to Bagdad is partly built and will be completed no matter what happens. . . . The termination of the war will mean the first real opening up, to American trade and influence, of the markeets of the Levant, the Balkans and Russia."

This is but one instance of the United States' unexampled opportunities for developing its oversea commerce to vast and permanent dimensions. The fact that our balance of trade for the fiscal year recently ended overtopped a billion dollars is immensely gratifying; but no such record can be held unless we prepare now to utilize the advantages which the future will offer. We need not turn to the faraway Levant for exceptional opportunities. Our neighboring countries in Central and South America are overflowing with inducements to enterprise. But the aggressive energy of the American Chamber of Commerce at Constantinople is a worthy example to similar institutions and interests at home.

Most of the slips occur after the cup has been to the lips.

Of course the average man is above the average. If you doubt it, ask him.

But it is better to quarrel over trifles than over something of real importance.

Editorial Echoes

Persons in this country who profess to be horrified at the American traffic in munitions of war should note carefully what Germany and Austria are doing to Rumania. Both Germany and Austria have countenanced bitter agitations at home and in this country as a protest against trade that has always been lawful and that, pursued by individuals, has never before raised a question of neutrality. Germany and Austria now menace the northern frontier of Rumania with armed forces because that country, thus far strictly neutral, refuses to permit shipments through its territory to Turkey of munitions of war. In this case Germany and Austria hope to enforce traffic in arms for their own benefit by governmental action on the part of a neutral. In our case they have attempted to prevent traffic in arms which for the moment is disadvantageous to them by governmental action on the part of another neutral. No doubt after Rumania's rights shall have been violated we shall hear very little from Berlin and Vienna of the deadly shrapnel going forward from the Krupp works to deprive British and French women and children of their breadwinners who are now fighting at the Dardanelles.—New York World.

PROVERBIAL WEATHER

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN

ASK the city man what kind of weather we are going to have tomorrow and he will probably read you the weather bureau's prediction, possibly with the addition of a phrase to the effect that "You can believe that if you want to."

Ask the dweller in the open country the same question and he will cock his "weather eye" heavenwards, observing the color of the sky, the cloud formations, the direction of the wind and the quarter of the moon. He will then probably answer you with a proverb which has come down to him from generations of farmer ancestors, a proverb apt to be despised by those not versed in the fluctuations of the weather and the causes therefor.

It can be argued, apparently with good reason, that weather proverbs cannot have any practical use in this enlightened age, since almost every country maintains its own weather service and supplies "scientific" forecasts to its farmers, sometimes by wireless. But the value of a number of the proverbs, when used in individual cases and for immediate forecasts of weather conditions, is sufficient to have been officially recognized by the weather bureau in Washington, the government's stamp of approval having been placed on a score or more of them.

Scientific meteorology—which is the long name applied to the science of weather-forecasting by those who participate therein—is not yet sufficiently advanced to prophesy whether an entire season will be warm or cold, good for crops or bad. Not so proverbial meteorology. There are a number of proverbs that run in rhyme that are more or less continuous covering of snow, incident to a cold winter, not only delays the blossoming of fruit trees until after the season of killing frosts, but also prevents that alternate thawing and freezing which is so injurious to wheat and other grains. In short, as another proverb has it, "a late spring never deceives."

Another class of proverbs dealing with practically the same condition, viewed from the opposite angle, is illustrated by the following examples:

"January warm, the Lord have mercy."

"If you see grass in January,
Look your grain in your granary."
"January or February
Do fill or empty the granary."

Our forefathers appear to have been long on weather philosophy, but short on the spirit of poetry.

Scientific prophecies concerning the immediate weather are usually based largely upon the appearance of the sky and sun, the moon and stars. So also the proverbs which have been accorded the official sanction of the weather bureau.

"A red sun has water in his eye" is usually a faithful forecast of rain, because the redness of the sun is induced for the most part by moisture in the atmosphere which holds in suspension the particles of dust and smoke causing the peculiar color of the setting sun. The blue and other short-wave-length colors of sunlight are both scattered and absorbed by a greater amount of water vapor than are the longer red waves. This effect becomes more marked as the particles coalesce. Hence, when the atmosphere is heavily charged with dust particles which have become water-laden—in other words, when rain is imminent—we see the sun as a fiery ball.

Next to the color of the sun the appearance of the sky is a favorite medium in the hands of prophets to foretell the coming weather. From Shakespear we have:

"A red morn that ever yet betokened
Wreck to the seaman, tempest to the field,
Sorrow to the shepherds, woe unto the birds,
Gusts and foul flaws to herdsmen and to herds."

In many ways the most interesting of the proverbs that deal with the connection between the weather and the color of the sky is the one which, according to Matthew, Christ used to answer the Pharisees when they asked that He show them a sign from heaven: "He answered and said to them: 'When it is evening you say, It will be fair weather, for the sky is red. And in the morning, it will be foul weather today, for the sky is red and lowering.'"

The causes for the fair weather which follows a red sunset and the foul which comes after a crimson sunrise are well known to scientific meteorologists, and, because they are as nearly infallible as any general forecasts can be, proverbs of this nature have been officially approved by the government.

Shakespeare, who appears to have had a good batting average in the Weather Prophets' league, gives us another quotation dealing with a different phase of the sunset:

"The weary sun hath made a golden set
Gives token of a goodly day tomorrow."

This is a poetic expression of the scientific truth that an absence of moisture in the air brings into prominence the yellow (short-wave-length) colors and, therefore, presages dry weather.

If, however, the sky be neither red nor yellow, but is overcast with a uniform gray we know that numerous tiny water globules are present and that the dust particles, in spite of the heat which they have absorbed from the sun, have become loaded with such moisture. To produce this effect, the atmosphere, to a considerable height, must be practically saturated, a condition which favors rain and justifies such proverbs as: "If the sun is set in gray, the next will be a rainy day; but if the sun goes pale to bed, 'twill rain tomorrow, it is said."

Many proverbs foretelling bad weather are based on the appearance of color or lunar halos or coronas, and, as these form only when there is much moisture in the air, the proverbs of this class are well founded. Typical of such sayings is that of the Zuni Indians, which predicts "when the sun is in his house it will rain soon." Other adages refer to the apparent diameter of the circle in connection with the proximity of the bad weather. Thus we have: "The bigger the ring, the nearer the wet."

Many people have supposed, and some still maintain, that the moon controls the weather. Therefore, are there numerous proverbs based upon this assumed relation. This belief is no doubt due to the fact that the appearance of the moon depends upon the condition of the atmosphere, and, therefore, proverbs based upon phenomena of this nature are of much value when applied to local predictions.

Thus, "clear moon, frost soon," and "moonlight nights have the heaviest frosts" are true, because, on the clearest nights, the cooling of the earth's surface by radiation is greatest and most likely to cause precipitation in the form of dew or frost.

"Sharp horns do threaten windy weather" is another interesting proverb finding a scientific foundation on the fact that when the air is clear sight is interfered with by atmospheric inequalities which winds will eliminate. Therefore, when the moon's horns appear sharp—or when there is nothing to interfere with the sight—we know that these inequalities do not exist and the natural inference is that they have been smoothed out by strong winds which will later reach the surface of the earth.

Like the sun and moon, the stars have furnished a number of proverbs concerning the weather. Many of these are nonsense, but a few have decided merit, as, for instance:

"When the stars begin to huddle,
The earth will soon become a puddle."

While this maxim sounds foolish, it contains the germ of excellent forecast. The scientific reason behind the couplet is that when a mist, due to the beginning of condensation, forms over the sky the smaller stars cease to be visible, while the brighter ones shine dimly with a blur of light about them, each one looking like a small confused cluster of stars. Hence the idea that stars can "huddle" together at one time and be separated at another.

FORWARD TO THE LAND

BY DR FRANK CRANE.

OVER and over again we are made to see the need of getting the people to the land and away from the congested cities. Everybody is convinced; there's no need of argument; it's a matter of "How?"

The deep instinct of men pulls them to cities, away from the farm. The question is, How can we make country life attractive enough to reverse this pull?

And now comes an organization that calls itself the "National Forward-to-the-Land league," which seems to have an intelligent program, claims to have capital behind it, and exploits a lot of good names.

Its plan is (1) to encourage the taste for agriculture by teaching land-lore in public schools, particularly in night schools, where many adult immigrants attend. In this they ought to have, and will have, the hearty co-operation of the school boards.

(2) To secure tracts of land, to be bought up by the league and sold to settlers upon easy payments. There is no difficulty here. Thousands of acres are gladly offered both by railroads and other land owners at attractively cheap rates, some of it actually given, to encourage increase of population.

(3) To organize settlements or country communities, where rural life will be made less lonesome and more alluring by means of social, educational, and amusement features. Instructors in the art of agriculture will be supplied. Community banks are to be established. Organizations for the profitable joint handling of produce will be formed. Every effort will be put forth to give to open air life that neighborly element it lacks.

(4) Capital is to be secured for the purpose of lending the necessary money to communities of settlers so that their farming may be profitable. Many men of wealth stand ready, provided the enterprise is on a sound basis.

The league has sensible ideas. It is not a charity. It is a co-operative idea. It aims to show people how to get together to help themselves.

The whole land-selling business has been demoralized. Hundreds of investors have been duped. They have bought farms where later they have found conditions to be unbearable. They have lost their all. Railroad land agents, syndicate land agents and all sorts of land agents have operated, with no check to avarice or misrepresentation.

The league purposes, first of all, to give those who want to farm accurate and reliable information. Expert analysis of the land will be made. Reliable reports on land values and market advantages will be furnished. The co-operation of others will be secured. In this way the land-seeker will be protected and encouraged.

A bureau of information is to be opened in New York City at once, and similar bureaus in other cities soon. It is proposed "to assist in making it possible for the humblest man or woman to buy a home without fear of misrepresentation."

There is hardly one other thing so greatly to be desired as to get the people to the land. In so far as the league shall assist in this it will have the good wishes of us all.

DO YOU REALLY THINK?

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE.

ALL mankind may be divided into three classes. The first of these is made up of people who think energetically and effectively, testing every proposition by the principles of logical reasoning.

The second class comprises people whose thinking as a rule is confused and weakened by their prejudices and prepossessions.

And into the third class fall people with little continuity or effectiveness of thought, and with a marked tendency to accept the thoughts and suggestions of others.

Reader, to which of these classes do you belong?

It is a question worth putting to yourself seriously, and answering as candidly as you can. For your habits of thought may mean the spoiling of your whole life.

If you can honestly say that you belong to the first class, then you are indeed to be congratulated. In that case you are a real thinker, one of a select and sadly small group.

The truth is that most of us do real thinking only occasionally. We are, without realizing it, slaves to our emotions. If we are not abnormally prejudiced, the chances are that we are unduly impressionable.

And though, to be sure, we have thoughts, they as a general thing are neither well co-ordinated nor effectively directed.

An eminent psychologist once said to me:

"The thinking of most people is largely a sort of dreaming. Ideas pass through their minds in haphazard fashion, without stimulating to earnest reflection. They are mentally inert, accepting whatever thoughts the moment chances to bring, but seldom pondering them."

It is this characteristic of the mass of mankind that makes PSYCHIC CONTAGION such a universal and dangerous force.

Because of the absence of real thinking, because of the tendency to uncritical acceptance of ideas, charlatans and tricksters in religion, politics, medicine, and business find it easy to impose their self-enriching ideas on so many of their fellowmen.

The religious impostor, the political demagogue, the medical quack, and the fraudulent adviser, flourish only because people DO NOT REALLY THINK.

For the same reason, despite the progress of civilization, social immoralities, vices, and weaknesses continue on a large scale.

If people really thought the world would soon be rid of sexual dissipation, excessive drinking, gambling, and political blackguardism.

For the good of society, therefore, as well as for your personal benefit, I urge on every reader of these lines to cultivate the habit of using freely and fully the reasoning powers with which God has endowed him.

Don't let your mind be a mere receptacle for the odds and ends of thought that happen to fall into it.

Use it as it is meant to be used—as a DYNAMO FOR THE CREATION OF DEVELOPMENTAL ENERGY.

Summer Clouds.

Like castle dreams, ye wander in and out
The sky's blue fields, as one, demure, devout,
Aimlessly goes, he knows not how or where,
The chartless road of never-ending doubt.

From out that vale where childhood's memories keep
The byways green, I often look and weep,
When I discern how many castles fair
Ye set for me along youth's golden stair,
Which, with my host of broken idols, sleep.

And yet ye go, like gods of liberty,
Laggard or fleet, unfettered, wild and free:
Ye bring the breezes to the scorching corn,
Ye cool the brow where life is weary-worn
And bind upon my soul your mystery.

Clouds of the summer, speak to me and tell,
Are ye the castles where the lost souls dwell?
In all your moving through the sky about
Are ye impelled by Time's old monster, Doubt?
Alas! before I have one faint reply
The castle fades into the bluest sky.

CHARGES AGAINST JUDGE RUSSELL NOT SUSTAINED

House Committee Finds Allegations of W. T. Moyers Are Without Foundation

After hearing from witnesses for eight hours Saturday concerning the charges brought against Judge R. B. Russell, of the court of appeals, by W. T. Moyers, a stenographer, lawyer and former secretary of the late Judge Roan, a committee of five members of the house of representatives announced that "not a single charge had been sustained by the witnesses for what you might term the prosecution, and there is no necessity for prolonging the investigation. In other words, Judge Russell was completely exonerated.

The hearing was held in the prison commission's office on the third floor of the capitol. The office was crowded with men and women. Representative Connor, of Spalding, presided as chairman of the legislative committee.

Every one of the thirteen witnesses introduced were called by Mr. Moyers, who conducted his own case. Attorney George Westmoreland, of Atlanta; Judge Hal H. Cobb, of Athens; Judge Horace Holden, of Athens, and Warren Grice, former attorney general, of Macon, friends of Judge Russell, voluntarily represented him. At the conclusion of the testimony of Judge A. J. Cobb, the last witness, these attorneys stated to the committee that they considered that not one of the charges against Judge Russell had been sustained and they were willing to let the hearing end without introducing witnesses or evidence.

Moyers' charges were made in a pamphlet issued by him a month ago. The chief of them was that Judge Russell took part of the money due Miss Marion Bloodworth, his stenographer. Miss Bloodworth, on the stand, said that the only time the judge had drawn any of her money was once at her own request when she was ill.

The morning witnesses were Miss Bloodworth, Miss Willie Bellah, Judge Ethridge Powell, formerly of the court of appeals, and Hamilton Douglas, Jr. Judge Powell testified as to the abilities and high integrity of Judge Russell.

Hamilton Douglas, Jr., Moyers' last morning witness, told Moyers: "I was completely outraged when I found that you had put my name in your pamphlet."

Judge Ben H. Hill, former judge of the court of appeals, now judge of the Fulton superior court, spoke in the highest terms of Judge Russell. A young lawyer named Baumstock was the next witness. He was put up to chaff Hamilton Douglas, Jr.

Judge Peyton L. Wade, of the court of appeals, was the next to take the stand.

Judge Wade spoke of the dismissal of Moyers as secretary to Judge Roan. He said that Judge Russell had told him that Judge Roan thought he ought to dismiss Moyers; he said that Moyers had talked to him (Judge Wade) about his relations with Judge Roan, and that his answer to Moyers was:

"I told you that you did not show Judge Roan proper respect, and that, if I had been Judge Roan, I would have kicked you out of the office."

Judge Wade said that Moyers' manner to Judge Roan was disrespectful, and that Moyers answered Judge Roan sharply, in a manner that he himself, who was several years older than Moyers, would never have used to the latter.

Considerable humor was injected into the hearing at times.

Moyers asked P. W. Derrick, the sheriff of the court of appeals, what he had heard the judges say about him.

"I never heard the judges say anything about you at all," answered Derrick.

Judge A. J. Cobb, of Athens, for ten years judge of the supreme court, was the last witness.

SOUTHERN HAS ABOLISHED MANY GRADE CROSSINGS

Fifty-four Have Been Eliminated on Atlanta to Washington Line

Fifty-four out of seventy-three grade crossings, in connection with the double track work, the Southern railway has had under way in Virginia and North Carolina the past fiscal year on 102.4 miles of the Atlanta-Washington line, have been eliminated, it was announced Saturday in a statement given out from the office of H. W. Miller, vice president of the company in Atlanta.

By the building of underpasses 20 crossings at grade were eliminated, by overhead bridges 19, and by changing the direction of public highways 15. The 9 which remain are so located as to make their elimination physically impossible, or they involve prohibitive damages to abutting property.

In all construction work involving the location or double tracking of its lines it was stated that the fixed policy of the Southern railway would be to separate all important highway crossings of the revised lines wherever practicable.

M'CART READY TO FACE TRIAL ON MURDER CHARGE

Preacher Will Be Tried for Crime Committed 45 Years Ago

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COVINGTON, Ga., July 24.—"I have made all other arrangements with both God and man but this one thing, and I want to get this settled before I die."

With these words Rev. W. H. McCart allowed himself to be arrested here last week for killing, forty-five years ago, his neighbor, Dock Smith, a farmer near Starrsville in Newton county. Next week he will go on trial in the superior court.

Since the killing of Smith in 1870 McCart has been a wander on the face of the globe. First he was in the western part of America, later going to the South Seas and the Orient. He has been a laborer, a government secret service man and for the past several years a minister of the gospel engaged in missionary work in the Hawaiian Islands.

"Some months ago he returned to Georgia, knowing that the grand jury had indicted him in 1870 and that a warrant was out against him, charging murder. He has been visiting at his sister's home in the western part of the county since his return, making no secret of his identity. Last week officials dug up the old warrant and McCart was arrested by Deputy Bud Neely.

McCart is lodged in the Newton county jail, spending his time reading books and papers until he goes to trial. He will be defended by King and Johnson, attorneys. Colonel George Napier will conduct the prosecution.

The killing for which McCart must answer is said to have been caused by Smith striking McCart's mother while McCart was away from home.

VERDICT OF $1,250 FOR CHILD'S DEATH SUSTAINED

Court Holds Child Under Three Years of Age Can Render Service to Parents

For the first time, is is said, in the history of legal procedure in Georgia, it has been held that a child under three years of age is capable of rendering service to its parents and that the parents are entitled to recover damages for loss of said services.

This decision was made by the state supreme court last week in affirming a verdict for $1,250, won by B. F. James, of Durand, Ga., in his suit against the Central of Georgia railroad.

James' child, aged two years, ten months and twenty days, was killed at Durand in 1912. When he sought to bring suit several lawyers refused the case because no court had ever held that a child under three years of age was capable of rendering service. Finally it was taken by Attorney Lawton Nalley, of Atlanta, who, after two years' litigation, in which the case was carried to the supreme court twice, has won a final verdict for his client.

The supreme court held that the question of rendering service was a question for the jury to determine and that it would not attempt to hold that a child of the age in question was incapable of rendering service to its parents.

Attorney N. F. Culpepper, of Meriwether county, was associated with Mr. Nalley.

REV. W. H. M'CART, who faces a murder charge forty-five years old in the Newton county courts next wek. This picture was taken at Honolulu, where McCart was doing missionary work before he came back to Georgia and allowed himself to be arrested.

GRANDMA ROSSER DIES AT HOME IN EATONTON

She Was in Her Ninetieth Year and Famous Over the State

EATONTON, Ga., July 24.—Mrs. Amaryllis Marshall Rosser, known in many homes throughout Georgia affectionately as "Grandma Rosser," died at her home here after an illness of several weeks. Mrs. Rosser was one of Georgia's best known and most loved women, and a woman of distinguished ancestry, being the great-granddaughter of Daniel Marshall, the founder of the First Baptist church in the state. Daniel Marshall was also a Revolutionary patriot of note.

About four years ago, upon the celebration of her birthday, "Grandma Rosser's" natal day was made the occasion of a public reception at the First Baptist church of this city, where, irrespective of denominational lines, friends and relatives joined in doing honor to her beautiful life.

The newspapers of Georgia at that time carried her picture and full stories of her life as one of the state's most noted women. She was in her ninetieth year, and yet one of the most remarkably preserved women in spite of her years.

LUCIUS P. HILLS' WILL CONTESTED BY BROTHER

Contends Provision Providing For Public Arts Building Null and Void

If Lucius Perry Hills, deceased, soldier, author, poet and pedestrian, had not been also an art connoisseur and had not had faith that the city of Atlanta ultimately would erect a public art building, this story relating to litigation over his last will and testament never would have been written. For there would have been no litigation.

The late Mr. Hills left a will, section 11 of which directed that the residue of his estate should be held in trust as the nucleus of a fund for the erection of a public art building in Atlanta, "some portion of which shall be devoted to works of painting and sculpture and that a space upon the walls of such portion be provided for the hanging of paintings and autographed photographs which may be in my room at No. 81 Summit avenue, and I direct that this provision remain in force indefinitely as I have all faith that the city of Atlanta will ultimately have such a building."

George Brewster Hills, who was named by his uncle as administrator of the estate, has executed every other provision of the document to the letter, and the residue of the estate approximates $15,000. The will provided that this should be held indefinitely as the "nucleus of a fund for an art building."

But Edward Sherman Hills, of Johnson City, Tenn., brother of the late Lucius Perry Hills and father of George Brewster Hills, the administrator, has demanded the residue of the estate, wherefore the litigation.

Edward Sherman Hills, the sole heir at law, contends that the sections of the will disposing of the residue of the estate are null and void because they are indefinite and are incapable of execution.

The administrator hesitated to yield to the demands of the sole heir at law, and the Atlanta Art association filed an intervention by way of objecting to diverting the residue of the estate from the channels marked out for it in the last will and testament of Lucius Perry Hills.

All parties of the litigation, including Clifford L. Anderson, amicus curiae, agreed as to the facts in question and agreed further that Judge George L. Bell, or the Fulton superior court, without a jury, should determine the issue; that is, construe and interpret for all time the contested provisions in the will.

Judge Bell heard the case last week, and now has it under advisement. He probably will render a decision this week, possibly Monday or Tuesday.

The Atlanta Art association, numbering among its membership many prominent citizens, has petitioned the court to appoint a trustee to take cnarge of the residue of the Hills estate, and proceed to erect a public arts building, as section 11 of the will provides. The association shows that the city of Atlanta has set aside a site in Piedmont park for the erection of an art building, and that citizens have subscribed, though not paid in, $15,000 toward such a structure.

Your Joys are at Stake On Your Tires

For Your Own Sake, Know the Goodyear

The facts are in favor of Goodyear tires. The verdict of Motordom favors them. For years they've outsold any other. And their users this year have increased by the thousands.

Why Not All Men?

Then why don't all men use them, when they stand for what all men want?

The main reason is lack of comparison. Men start with one tire and cling to it. When troubles come they think that all tires suffer like misfortunes.

Of course, no tire is exempt from mishap and misuse. But in average service tires differ very widely.

Note These Facts

Goodyear Fortified Tires have five great features which no other tire employs. These combat rim-cuts, loose treads, punctures and skidding in matchless and efficient ways.

They have other features adding strength and wear which few makers now embody.

These extras will cost us on this year's output $1,635,000. Our 1915 betterments alone will cost us $500,000 this year.

Our anti-skid tread—the Goodyear All-Weather—is double thick and tough. We add an extra tread instead of roughing our regular.

And that, on our output of All-Weathers this year, will cost us $1,000,000.

Yet this year's Goodyear price reduction will save our users some five million dollars. And that was our third reduction in two years, totaling 45 per cent.

Fortified Tires is more than a name. It's a fact—a very costly fact to us. It's an economical, trouble-saving fact to you.

We are saving tire users many millions of dollars by building tires in this way. We are winning new users faster than ever before. May we not, through good service, have a chance to win you? Any dealer will supply you.

BECKER WITNESS CAUGHT IN LIE, SAYS WHITMAN

Governor Declares Murphy Talked With Condemned Man July 20

(By Associated Press.)

ALBANY, N. Y., July 24.—The personal appeal of Joseph Murphy, a Sing Sing convict, to Governor Whiteman to save the life or stay the execution of former Police Lieutenant Charles Becker, sentenced to be electrocuted next week for instigating the murder of Herman Rosenthal, failed of its purpose today.

The governor said he "had caught Murphy in a lie today," and branded as untrue Murphy's entire story that he had overheard Jack Rose, "Bridgie" Webber and Harry Vallon, three of the most important witnesses against Becker, conspire three years ago in the Tombs prison to place the blame for the murder upon the condemned man.

Murphy, shackled to Deputy Warden Johnson, of Sing Sing, was hurried to the mansion and back to the railroad station in one of the state automobiles. The irons were loosened during the conference.

A transcript of the talk was sent to District Attorney Perkins, of New York, tonight. It will be used during the hearing before Justice Ford Monday on the application of Becker's attorneys for a new trial on the ground of new evidence. Murphy's story of the alleged plot in the Tombs forms one of the bases for the application.

During the conference the governor discovered that on July 2 Murphy had talked with Becker in the death cell in Sing Sing, to which he gained admittance by posing as a singer of the Mutual Welfare League of the Prison. The following day W. Bourke Cockran, attorney for Becker, was informed by Murphy of the alleged conspiracy three years before.

Murphy told the governor that although he overheard the alleged conspiracy in 1912, he had not mentioned it to any one prior to June 21 of this year, except to a fellow convict named Wallace. The reason advanced for his reticence was that he did not want to bring notoriety to his family, the governor declared.

TWO MEN ARE DROWNED WHEN BOAT IS CAPSIZED

David McDaniel, Prominent Dodge County Resident, One of Victims

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

EASTMAN, Ga., July 24.—News reached Eastman this afternoon of the drowning of David McDaniel, a prominent young man of Dodge county, and a man by the name of Evans, when the boat in which they were fishing turned over in the Ocmulgee river near Lumber City this morning about 8 o'clock. Up to late this afternoon neither body had been located.

McDaniel was about 22 years old and is married, being the son of W. T. McDaniel, a prominent planter of Dodge county, living 7 miles from Eastman. McDaniel and his young wife left here Thursday, going through the country to Lumber City to visit relatives and he and Evans were in a boat fishing when the accident occurred which cost both men their lives.

W. T. McDaniel left this afternoon for Lumber City to help locate the body of his son.

Castle Set fire

ROME, July 10.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The castle of Duino, set on fire during the bombardment of Monfalcone, near Triest, by the Italians, was a most interesting survival of mediaeval times. Situated on a cliff rising sheer from the sea, it was constructed in the fifteenth century.

Y. M. C. A. SPORTS

The second of the three championship games between school B No. 1 and B No. 2 classes, was played Saturday, school B No. 1 coming out victorious in all events. The first of these games, played last Thursday, brought 13 points to B-1 and 33 points to B-2, which makes the standing now, 49 points for B-1 and 41 points for B-2. Competition was keen through Saturday's games, although B-1 managed to win out in the events. In the volley ball game, the score was tied up until the last minute of play, and it was then B-1 forged ahead.

The final games, to be played Monday, will consist of the following events: Volley ball, buck relay, plunge and 15-yard swimming relay. Attendance will count 1 point for each boy present. The final winger and class championship is still in doubt.

RECORD BROKEN IN MEN'S MEET.

The monthly swimming meet in the men's department was held last night in the association's pool. There were a number of spectators, who were repaid for their time in an acquatic exhibition of rare excellency. Following is a list of events, winners and records:

Plunge, G. Bonnell, 40 feet, 1st; S. I. Hartley, 38 feet 6 inches, and W. H. Lee, 29 feet 6 inches.

Twenty yard swim, Hartney and G. D. Dunn tied for first, time 10 4-5 seconds; Bonnell, 3d, 11 seconds.

Running broad dive, L. L. Schelpert, 1st, 17 feet 6 inches; S. I. Hartney, 16 feet 6 inches; Bonnell and Dunn tied for third, at 16 feet.

40-yard back stroke—G. H. Bonnell, 1st, time 33 seconds; Hartney, 34 3-5 seconds, and J. Tyner, 3rd, 44 3-5 seconds. It is a rule in back swimming that the contestant must touch the finish wall with both hands before the race is over. If Hartney had done this, his time would have been much shorter, probably tying with Bonnell.

100-yard swim—Bonnell, 1st, time 1 minute 12 1-5 seconds, (which breaks the previous association record for this event, held by Walter Dubard, at the time of 1 minute 18 4-5 seconds), Hartney, second, time 1 13 1-5; Dunn, time 1:25 seconds.

The tub race proved to be as ludicrous an affair as ever, only two, out of all the contestants entering, having the good fortune (?) to finish the race without capsizing. Mr. L. L. Schelpert, who won this race, climbed into a common wooden tub and paddled a distance of 60 feet in 1-5 seconds. Mr. Dunn finished in 1 minute and 46 seconds.

VOLLEY BALL WED. NIGHTS.

On next Wednesday evening there will be played the third round of games in the big Volley Ball league, now running full blast. These games are open to the public, which is invited to attend them. Games start promptly at 8:15 and are over at 9:05. If you are not a volley ball fan, come once and you will be; if you are one of the fans, this word is sufficient.

MEXICO CITY IS HELD BY BANDS OF INDIANS

Business Houses and Bake Shops Closed--City in Need of Food

MEXICO CITY, July 18.—(By Courier to Vera Cruz.)—The city is in the hands of a band of two hundred Indians. Zapata forces in retreating have torn up the railroad to Cuernavaco and Toluca.

All business houses and bake shops are closed, and even the well to do find difficulty in buying food. The relief committee is unable to help.

The foregoing is the latest word to come out of Mexico City. It was sent one day after Carranza forces evacuated the capital to attack an approaching Villa column and although Zapata forces were reported to have reoccupied the city at that time, the reference to the city being in the hands of Indians may indicate that the main body of Zapata troops again has withdrawn, or that the Indians are part of that force. Cuernacaco and Toluca are nearby. The former was made Zapata headquarters after the evacuation recently.

MODIFIED DEMANDS OF STRIKERS ARE REFUSED

Hope of Early Settlement Now Off, Is General Belief

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 24.—Efforts to settle the strike of 1,500 Bayonne oil workers, which has been in progress for a week and has been marked by serious riots and the killing of three strikers, failed tonight when the Standard Oil company of New Jersey notified the men that it would not accede to their modified demands. The strikers then voted not to return to work on Monday. Nearly 6,000 more men from the Tidewater company's plant, thrown out of work by the strike, also will remain idle.

In their demands the strikers expressed their willingness to accept a fifteen per cent increase in wages with a 54-hour week or to return to work on Monday, leaving the several points in dispute to be decided by a board of arbitration, that would later be appointed.

On the company's answer hinged the question of whether the strike would continue or the strikers return to work with some six thousand more men from the Tidewater company's plant, who have been thrown out of work by the strike at the Standard plant.

The only disorder of the day occurred late today when a crowd of 400 men attacked Max Leazer, a retired United States army soldier, mistaking him for a guard. A riot call brought the boulevard motorcycle policemen who wielded their clubs putting the disturbers to flight.

One City License Is Used by Seven Venders of Peanuts

The discovery that one license has been serving seven peddlers of peanuts caused License Inspector Charles L. Woodall Friday afternoon to take part in three wild chases, but resulted in the addition of $120 to the funds in the city treasury.

Inspector Woodall, with his assistant, W. W. Thompson, went up to a vender of peanuts and asked for his license.

"Wait and I will run to my room and get it," he answered. Soon the peddler appeared with a license. But when the next peddler made the same answer, Inspector Woodall became suspicious, and followed him. Instead of going to his room he went up to the owner of another peanut stand. As they saw the inspector approaching both ran, and Mr. Woodall chased one of them for five blocks before he caught him. He continued the same tactics until he had found that seven men were using one license. After they had been captured each peddler was willing and able to pay the $20 license fee.

BODY OF LINDEN BATES IS WASHED ASHORE

Lusitania Victim Is Identified by Documents in Coat and Mark on Linen

QUEENSTOWN, July 24.—A body washed ashore at Kilcolgan Gateway on the Irish coast has been identified from documents found in the coat pocket and from the name on the linen as that of Lindon Bates, Jr., who went down on the Lusitania.

A body recently washed ashore in County Limerick, Ireland, was at first believed to be that of Lindon W. Bates, Jr., son of Lindon Bates, vice chairman of the American commission for Belgian relief, but later it was said the indentification was incorrect.

Young Dothan Lad Playing He is Dead Almost Makes Good

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DOTHAN, Ala., July 24.—Charles, the seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Faulk, of this city, underwent a most unusual experience Saturday when he was in some way placed under hypnotic influence while playing with his little brothers at the family home. When efforts to awake him failed his parents became alarmed and called in two physicians who worked with the little fellow an hour and a half before being able to break the influence.

The children were playing "making believe they were dead." When it came Charles' turn to play "dead" he stretched himself on the floor and the other boys made motions over him as are employed by hypnotists and told him that he was dead. When told to get up Charles did not move. Efforts to make him get up failed and his father went to see about him. When he was unable to arouse the little fellow the family became alarmed and phoned for physicians.

"The doctors said that the child had been put to sleep by auto suggestion by one of the children. The child remembers nothing of his experience and suffered no ill effects.

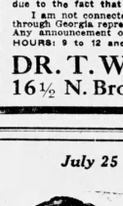
IMPROVED METHODS CURE OBSTINATE DISEASES

READ WHAT SOME OF MY CURED AND SATISFIED PATIENTS SAY



Science is on the wing. Treatments used one year ago are back numbers now. To be a TOP-NOTCH Specialist requires not only skill and energy, but capital. The public is not satisfied with the doctor who sticks in the OLD RUT. I am prepared to give my patients the benefit of all the great discoveries as soon as they are perfected. Don't come to me because you read my STRAIGHTFORWARD announcements or because I have cured some of their friends.

Every testimonial is on file in my office. I never publish testimonials without consent of patient.

EXTRACTS FROM A FEW OF MANY SWORN TESTIMONIALS.

T. L. Davidson, 301 Crew street, Atlanta, Ga., says: "About five years ago Dr. Hughes cured me of a chronic case of Kidney and Bladder Trouble after many doctors had failed."

R. W. Statham, 1114 Candler Building, Atlanta, Ga. says: "Dr. Hughes cured me of a case of Eczema that had resisted the best efforts of other doctors."

T. F. Beall, Lafeyette, Ala., says: "Dr. Hughes cured me of a chronic case of Constipation and Piles without cutting, pain or inconvenience, and I consider the money I paid Dr. Hughes the best investment I ever made in my life."

I have used Salvarsan and Bacterins in hundreds of cases. Each case I treat now gets the advantage of this vast experience. In unskilled hands these remedies cure; in inexperienced hands they are worthless.

Rheumatism, Acne, Skin, Abscesses, Bronchitis, Carbuncles, Bowel and Liver Trouble, Gall Stones, Kidney and Bladder, Blood Disorders, Piles, Varicose Veins, Weakness, Nervous Debility, Catarrhal Discharges and many other diseases of men and women are cured. Whatever your ailment, call.

I will examine you; if necessary make a chemical and microscopical analysis of secretions to determine pathological and bacteriological conditions. Your case may be one that has heretofore been considered practically incurable, but it will yield to this new method of treatment when intelligently and skillfully administered.

CALL TO-DAY—DON'T DELAY. A friendly talk and thorough examination will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving you money as well as years of suffering. Everything confidential. A large measure of success attained by me in treating obstinate conditions is due to the fact that I personally examine every patient.

I am not connected with any other Doctor Hughes traveling around through Georgia representing himself to be the original Atlanta specialist. Any announcement of mine will be signed.

WHAT IS JACOBS' LIVER SALT?

Jacobs' Liver Salt is a scientific combination of lithium phosphate, sodium phosphate and other chemically pure salts found in the far-famed and costly mineral waters of Europe. It contains these salts in exactly the right proportions as determined by long study and practical trial. With it a superior mineral water can be made in every home easily and cheaply. A teaspoonful in a tumbler of water affords a pleasant, sparkling dose—far ahead of the natural waters in its medicinal action on the liver, the bowels and the kidneys, and, particularly, in its power to eliminate uric-acid and similar poisons.

Thousands of people by the use of this remedy have been able to rid themselves of rheumatism, kidney trouble, biliousness and other diseases arising from the causes stated. The reason why it succeeds in cases where other measures have failed is that, in conception, it is a rational remedy—it reaches and removes the cause which other medicines do not. It is plain that any attempt to remove the consequences of uric-acid accumulation (that is, rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, etc.) must be directed (1) toward removing the excessive uric-acid from the blood and tissues; (2) toward preventing the deposit of crystalline urates in the tissues; and (3) toward attempting to re-dissolve and break up these deposits after they are once formed. And this leads to the question which agitated medical men for over a century: "What can be done to dissolve uric-acid after it has been deposited, and what can be done to hold it in solution and finally expel it from the system? If we can learn this it will mean that we can successfully cure rheumatism, sciatica, gout, gravel, kidney trouble and a long list of diseases which afflict mankind at the present time."

Long Looked-For Remedy

When Jacobs' Liver Salt was compounded the question was at last answered; the most searching tests to which this remedy was subjected convinced medical men that the long-sought antidote and eradicator of uric-acid had been found.

POSTAL COMPANY PLANS EXTENSIVE IMPROVEMENTS

New Service Has Been Inaugurated in City and Southeastern Territory

The use of its telegraph lines for long distance telephone messages has just been inaugurated in Atlanta, and the southeastern territory by the Postal Telegraph company, and in the course of time the company proposes to extend and equip the new service to such an extent that it will come into general public use.

The beginning recently of certain construction work necessary to put in this telephone service in Atlanta has resulted in the calling of a special meeting of the council board of electrical control for next Tuesday afternoon.

City Electrician R. C. Turner has granted the company a permit to carry its underground wires under Decatur street to Moore street, and to erect an overhead line from there out Decatur to Spring street.

Citizens along the thoroughfare, according to Mr. Turner have voiced some objection to the installation of a new set of telephone poles, and the board has been called together to consider this complaint.

Mr. Turner says that the Postal system, before it began the installation of its competing telephone service, had been doing business over the Southern Bell company for its telegraph wires.

Now the city electrician says that if a new agreement between the two companies to use the same poles is not reached before the meeting that the board will probably take the preliminary steps to force all companies having overhead wires on business streets to remove them for some distance, to be later determined, and to place their wires underground.

The Postal company's venture is attracting much attention, since with the new service installed the wires can be used simultaneously for telegraph messages and telephone conversations. The result which will make this possible is that in which the company has placed its telegraph wires running between the same points.

Between most of the principal cities here every the Postal has two or more telegraph wires already in operation, and thus it is able to establish long distance telephone service merely by installing telephone equipment.

For the present the company will have telephone equipment only in the cities, thus making it necessary for those to use the Postal long distance, but this will be offset, the company believes, by making the rates considerably lower than existing long distance telephone rates; while in time the company will extend its telephone equipment to offices of persons and firms who are sufficiently large consumers of long distance telephone service to warrant the installation cost.

The Atlanta office now has long distance telephone service with Augusta, Birmingham, Charleston, Memphis and Nashville.

"DON'T LET HER SINK!" CRIED CHIEF MATHIESON

Leader of County Police Has Exciting Time in Convict "Cage"

"Don't let her sink, boys! Don't let her sink!" cried Chief Mathieson, of the police, walking in his sleep out of his bunk and down the aisle of one of the new convict "cages" at the honor camp Thursday night.

"What's the matter? Who's sinking?" called out William A. Hansell, Jr., superintendent of public works, waking violently from a sound sleep. He saw the chief, pajama-clad, in the aisle, doing his hands swimming fashion.

"Don't let her sink, boys! Hold her up!" the chief was shouting.

"Hey, this isn't a shipwreck," yelled Warden Girardeau, rising up in his upper bunk and looking down at the chief. The chief woke up.

"I must have been dreaming," he said. "Where am I?"

"You're standing up in the aisle of a convict cage, waking us up and shouting, when you ought to be sound asleep in your berth," said Commissioner Tom Winn, in his most accusing, sleepy manner.

Chief Mathieson confessed at breakfast that he was dreaming that they were all on a boat, a big boat, and that he just was either going to slide or dive over a waterfall as high as Niagara. He didn't remember getting out of his berth.

It all happened at the Sandy Springs honor convict camp Thursday night, when the county commissioners and officials went out to enjoy a night's rest in the comfortable new portable camps or "cages" that have just been installed for honor convicts. With the exception of the outburst by the chief and a fight between two katydids on the floor, everything was quiet during the night.

STRIPLING IS PROMISED PARDON; M'NAUGHTON MAY BE FREED ALSO

Fate Spins Strange Web Around Attack on Leo Frank at State Prison Farm at Milledgeville

BY LINTON K. STARR
(Staff Correspondent.)

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., July 24.—Promise of a pardon for one convict serving a life ter mon a murder charge, hope of a pardon for another convict serving a life term on a murder charge, as the result of a governor's investigation of an attack by a third convict serving a life term on a murder charge upon the life of a fourth convict serving a life term on a murder charge—

Such is the web that fate has woven at the Georgia state prison farm near this city.

This morning as Governor Nat E. Harris walked into the lobby of the main prison building a little 6-year-old girl, with golden curls and tears in her bright blue eyes, ran up to him and caught hold of his hand and said:

"Governor Harris, won't you please let my papa out. Mama is sick and we've got nobody to work for us."

The governor reached down and lifted the child in his arms, and tears came into his eyes too, and he patted her on the cheek and said in a husky voice:

"Tell your papa, baby, that I'm going to pardon him before my term expire. I can't say just when, but my term expires in two years, so it won't be so very long."

And the little girl threw her arms around the old Confederate veteran's neck, and hugged him and kissed him, and asked him to put her down so she could run and tell her papa the great good news.

Gently the governor placed Bessie Lucile Stripling on her feet, and a few minutes later her father, T. Edgar Stripling, once police chief of Danville, Va., was wild with rejoicing.

After a time he broke down completely, and became delirious, and screamed when spoken to, so that they had to take him away by himself and let no one see him.

NERVES ARE SHATTERED.

"I am a physical wreck and my nerves are shattered," he cried, with tears running down his cheeks. "If the governor doesn't let me out in sixty days I'm afraid it will be no use. My wife is sick—no work, no money. I can hardly believe the governor is going to pardon me. So many times I have hoped, and then my hopes were shattered. My daughter has hardly recovered from the effects of taking carbolic acid not long ago—grieving for me. I'm afraid she will try it again."

In 1897 Stripling was convicted of the murder of J. B. Cornett and was sentenced to a life term at the state prison farm. Two years later he escaped. Under the name of R. E. Morris he settled in Danville, Va., joined the police force, moved his family there, and in the course of time was promoted to be chief of the police department. Something over two years ago he was recognized by a Georgia man passing through Danville, was arrested and brought back to Georgia, and in spite of appeals to two governors, Brown and Slaton, was committed to the prison farm to serve the balance of his life.

Today his wife lives in Columbus, Ga., with a grown daughter, Miss Annie Lee Stripling, who attempted suicide a few weeks ago. Another grown daughter, Miss Ruth Stripling, and little Bessie Lucile, live in Milledgeville near the prison farm, where they can see their father and cheer him in his gloom.

Thus came to pass the promise of a pardon for Convict No. 1 in this strange quadrangle of fate.

PLEAD FOR M'NAUGHTON.

Almost before little Bessie Lucile Stripling was out of sight on her way with the "good news to papa," three convicts were ushered into the lobby where the governor stood. Approaching him respectfully, they placed in his hands a petition for the pardon of Dr. W. J. McNaughton, signed by 137 of the 156 inmates of the prison.

"The only reason we haven't got all the names, your excelency," they said, "is because we just started the petition last night and haven't had time to get around to them all."

Inspired by Dr. McNaughton's prompt work in saving the life of Leo M. Frank when J. W. Creen cut his throat last Saturday night while Frank lay asleep on his cot, the prisoners started the appeal for executive clemency and signed their names to a petition reciting Dr. McNaughton's innumerable kind ministrations to them.

"Whenever we have been hurt, whenever we have been sick," they told the governor, "he has come to us and healed us and cured us, and always his smile has brightened our servitude."

Again moved to the depths of his big, warm heart of Governor Harris received the appeal from the men in stripes, asking mercy not for themselves but for a fellow convict, and promised them to give it full consideration.

Dr. W. J. McNaughton, a prominent physician of Emanuel county, and a widower, boarded at the home of Fred Flanders, at Covena, Ga., in that county, and on June 14, 1910, Flanders died.

WIFE WAS SUSPECTED.

Suspicion arose against Dr. McNaughton and Flanders' wife. They were jointly indicted for murder, on the charge that they had poisoned Flanders with arsenic. The trial of Mrs. Flanders was put off from time to time and finally the case against her was nolle prossed. Dr. McNaughton was tried, found guilty of murder and sentenced to be hanged. He protested his innocence at every stage of the case. Feeling was so high against him among the dead man's friends that he was removed to the Chatham county jail at Savannah for safe keeping.

His lawyers appealed his case to the state supreme court and lost, appealed to the United States supreme court, appealed to the trial court for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence—and finally, failing in these appeals, they asked the prison commission for a recommendation to executive clemency: R. E. Davison and E. L. Rainey, of the prison commission, voted for a full pardon. T. E. Patterson voted for commutation of sentence to life imprisonment. Governor Slaton adopted the latter recommendation and Dr. McNaughton, in the fall of 1913, was sent to the state farm at Milledgeville to serve his sentence.

And thus hope was raised for Convict No. 2.

From the McNaughton petition the governor passed to the task that took him to the prison—the task of investigating J. W. Creen's attempt to kill Leo M. Frank by cutting his throat last Saturday night.

Creen, whose home is in Columbus, Ga., where Stripling's wife now lives, has killed two men, and in the second case is now serving a life term for murder.

Leo M. Frank, probably the most famous prisoner in the United States today, has served a little over one month of his life sentence on the charge of murdering Mary Phagan in the National Pencil factory in Atlanta April 26, 1913.

THREE-POUND TOMATO RAISED IN COLLEGE PARK

They do grow tomatoes out in College Park. George Aderholt brought one to The Journal office yesterday, a three-pounder. He had weighed it on the government scales at the postoffice.

The tomato was really three in one. The round sides had grafted onto each other until they formed one big vegetable with the stalk sticking up through the middle.

Mr. Aderholt says that tomatoes weighing one pound grew on the same bush which produced the three-pounder.

My Dear Mr. Peacock:

I want to congratulate you upon the record made at Sewanee by Mr. William Hinman, one of your pupils. Hinman has naturally a brilliant mind and throughout his course with us has given evidence of the very thorough preparation for a college education he had received at your school. In this day of careless and superficial work in the secondary schools it is a delight to encounter a boy so well trained as this young man from your school.

Very sincerely yours,
WALTER HULLIHEN, Dean.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
SAVANNAH, Ga., July 24.—A Georgia branch of the Southern Settlement Development organization will be formed in Georgia, as a result of a state-wide agricultural meeting here today. J. Ward Motte, president of the Savannah board of trade, will be chairman of the committee in charge, and there will be a director named from each congressional district.

Clark Howell, of Atlanta, fathered the motion to launch a Georgia branch of the Settlement organization in Georgia.

S. Davies Warfield, Baltimore, president Southern Settlement and Development organization outlined its purposes. Branches he said were being organized in the south and results secured by establishing desirability of settlers. Organization he said, is primarily being used as clearing house for colonization purposes. First get settlers, then make their work successful by transferring assistance instead of leaving strangers in strange land to work out their own salvation. He promised cordial support of parent organization to the Georgia branch of the organization.

G. Gunby Jordan, Columbus, spoke on "the European war and its ultimate effects upon the cotton industry." He said, "We have succeeded in marketing a great crop this season despite the war in Europe and will probably be able to do so next season." He advanced the idea that England might buy the new crop.

Governor Joseph A. McCord, of the Atlanta fedral reserve bank, discussed "the banker and the farmer," and told of the work of the regional bank toward helping the development of the agricultural industry in Georgia.

FAVORS ATLANTA FOR NEW BRANCH FACTORY

Sales Manager of Ink Fabrics Firm Considers Locating Here

W. F. Thurmond, of Muncie, Ind., general sales manager of B. D. Emanuel & Co., large manufacturers in Muncie of all kinds of ink fabrics, including ribbons for typewriters, adding machines, cash registers and other simiiar machines, it in the city, looking over the field with the view of establishing a branch factory in Atlanta.

Mr. Thurmond has had conferences with Harvey Johnson, secretary of the industrial bureau of the chamber of commerce, and is now studying with Mr. Johnson all of the phases of the proposed factory.

The Emanuel plant at Muncie does a very large business throughout all the states of the middle west, and in other parts of the country, and is ranked as one of the most successful institutions of its kind in the United States.

A noteworthy feature of Mr. Thurmond's plan is that his company is asking for no financial aid of any character, but if the conditions appear favorable, the company will start its own factory with its own capital and begin work.

"I am much pleased with Atlanta," said Mr. Thurmond Saturday morning. "I think it highly probable that my company will establish a factory here, but naturally I want to look around a little. I know of the splendid reputation Atlanta bears all over the country as a city of push and progress, and I know that as a distributing point it is unexcelled anywhere. My people only want a fair showing and fair encouragement in a trial of their products on the assumption that they are as good as the same products of other makes and with equitable prices, and I believe that we will be able to show that we can meet these two conditions. Satisfaction on these points will mean the establishment of the factory in Atlanta."

Mr. Thurmond is stopping at the Winecoff hotel, where he will be for several days.

MEDIA, Pa., July 24.—The automobile presented to Dr. Anna Howard Shaw by New York suffragists was sold here today to pay taxes. It was bought by the Woman's Suffrage society of Delaware county and returned to Dr. Shaw.

GEORGIANS TESTIFY TO MAYR'S REMEDY

Lives Redeemed and Fortunes in Health Are Recovered.

Most of the problems of health originate in the stomach. Most of these ailments can be cured. Thousands of people right in the state of Georgia are needlessly suffering from stomach troubles, while thousands of others have found health by the use of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. The first dose of this remarkable remedy is proof. Here are the words of two Georgians who have used it:

B. DUNCAN, 136 W. Peachtree St., Atlanta, Ga.—"I took one bottle of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and it did me so much good I must continue the treatment."

SALISTA THOMAS, 55 La. France St., Atlanta, Ga.—"I have taken your remedy for five weeks. I feel like I hardly know my strength—my appetite is fine."

Mayr's Wonderful Remedy gives permanent results for stomach, liver and intestinal ailments. Eat as much and whatever you like. No more distress after eating, pressure of gas in the stomach and around the heart. Get one bottle of your druggist now and try it on an absolute guarantee—if not satisfactory money will be returned. BORROWS AUTO TRUCK AND RUNS DOWN BOY

Cecil Dunn, Aged Three Years, Has His Leg Broken

Cecil Dunn, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Dunn, 37 Curran street, was struck by an automobile truck belonging to B. Bettis, a meat dealer, and badly injured late Saturday afternoon in an accident at the corner of Marietta and Curran streets.

According to the report of the police the truck was driven by Charles Weinberg, of 38 Curran street, who had borrowed it from Mr. Bettis, in order that he might make a trip toa corner drug store for a package of cigarettes.

At the corner of Marietta and Curran, Mr. and Mrs. Dunn with their little son, were crossing the street when the truck struck the child, knocking him to the pavement and breaking a leg.

The police say the machine did not stop and Mr. and Mrs. Dunn, on foot, gave chase. Fireman of engine company No. 16, stopped Weinberg, against whom the police docketed a case charging reckless driving.

R. A. BROYLES TO RUN FOR CITY COUNCILMAN

Citizens Launch His Campaign for A. W. Farlinger's Place

Following a call of a number of citizens of the Fourth ward upon him at his home Saturday night, Robert A. Broyles consented to become a candidate for council from the Fourth ward in opposition to Councilman A. W. Farlinger, whose term will expire early next year.

About a hundred citizens of the ward launched Mr. Broyles' candidacy at an open-air meeting in a vacant lot adjoining 279 North Boulevard Saturday night.

Following this meeting, which unanimously indorsed Mr. Broyles, those attending it marched in a body to Mr. Broyles' residence and asked him to become a candidate at the fall primary. Mr. Broyles refused at first, but his callers stood pat and finally he was won over.

Mr. Farlinger, as a member of the city council, has stood by Mayor Woodward consistently, and has been one of about half a dozen members of council who have consistently supported the mayor's policies.

ANNIVERSARY OF BURNS' DEATH TO BE OBSERVED

Burns' Club Will Hold Exercises at Cottage at 3:30 o'Clock Sunday Afternoon

The one hundred and nineteenth anniversary of the death of Robert Burns, July 21, 1796, will be commemorated by members of the Burns club of Atlanta and their friends with appropriate exercises Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Burns cottage.

At the same time exercises will be held in memory of the deceased members of the club, particularly those who have died since this time last year. The exercises will be held in the pavilion near the cottage and are open not only to members, but to all who know and love the works of the Scotch poet.

Rev. H. R. Bernard, D. D., will deliver the invocation, and there will be songs by Miss Minnie McLean, Frank Wheat and Mrs. Sybil Owen Hartley. Eugene Oberdorfer, president of the club, will deliver the introductory remarks. There will be an address by Rev. J. Wade Conkling, D. D., on the "Spirit of Burns." Judge Marcus W. Beck will speak in memory of the late George S. May, who died last August, and H. H. Cabaniss will talk of the late Judge John R. Wilkinson, who died April 7.

JR. O. U. A. M. WILL ENJOY PICNIC NEXT SATURDAY

Bathing, Foot Racing and Dancing Will Be Order of Day

For the "good of the order," a picnic will be given at Jester's old mill Saturday, July 31, by the Riverdale, Kenwood and Morrow councils of the Junior Order United American Mechanics.

George M. Nappler and Colonel Walter P. Andrews will speak. Boating, bathing, foot racing and dancing are some of the features scheduled. There will be a ball game at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and a big dinner will be served. All members of the order and the public is invited.

Jester's old mill is located a mile and a half north of Jonesboro on the National highway.

DR. STEPHENS TO RESIGN AS MEDICAL DIRECTOR

Dr. Adkins to Be Offered Place at School Board Meeting

Although it was not officially announced, it was reported Saturday that Dr. H. G. Stephens, medical director of the public schools, would tender his resignation at the next meeting of the board, which will be held sometime this week.

Under the reorganization of the school system, the salary of the medical director was reduced from $2,000 to $1,800 a year, and he was required to give his whole time to the work, instead of only part of it. Dr. Stephens is eminently satisfactory as far as the board is concerned, but he could not afford to give his whole time to the school work.

The position, it was said, will be tendered to Dr. W. N. Adkins.

Another question which will be discussed at the meeting will be the proposed change in geographies taught in the school. Those who favor the change argue that it is made necessary by the European war.

There is also much opposition, but nothing can be done until the board meets.

COULDN'T WAIT UNTIL AUGUST TO BE WEDDED

Now Mr. and Mrs. Riedmeyer Are Among the Newest Newlyweds

They were not to have been married until next month, but they decided Saturday that July 24 was close enough, and now Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Riedmeyer are among the newlyweds registered at the Hotel Winecoff.

Mrs. Riedmeyer, who until Saturday afternoon was Miss Starr Bradley, of 8 Boulevard Terrace, informed her parents Saturday morning that she and Mr. Riedmeyer had decided to be married in the afternoon.

After the first shock of the surprise was over, no objection was offered, and the wedding took place at home as described elsewhere in the society column.

FOR SALE—REAL ESTATE FOR SALE—REAL ESTATE

TO THE DWELLERS IN TENTS

A MAN who lives in a rented house can not call it his home. He is at the mercy of his landlord. He has no home. His rent receipts are worthless, and having no value, they can't be negotiated even for a crust of bread. He is no better than the dwellers in tents.

I CAN PROVIDE YOU WITH A HOME. HOW?

HERE IS my plan: A beautiful, new, well-built bungalow with all modern improvements, including porcelain plumbing, tile bath room, combination gas and electric fixtures, containing large living room, two bed rooms, attractive dining room, cozy kitchen, etc., will be turned over to you in six weeks from date.

ONE MONTH FREE.

YOU OCCUPY the house for one month free. After that you make me a small cash payment and then $20 per month with interest on each note at 7 per cent. You keep all your paid notes and when the last one is settled, bring them to me and a warranty deed will be given you to your home.

FOUR HOMES ONLY ON THESE TERMS.

I WILL dispose of only four homes on these terms. If you want one don't delay but see me at once and I will arrange all details to your satisfaction. When I say to your satisfaction I mean just what I say. If you need three bed rooms there will be very little change in terms. I will fix it to suit you.

LOCATION ATTRACTIVE. PRICE.

ROSEDALE PARK: This was the McLeod-McDowell property. Since it was taken over by Hamilton Douglas and myself we have christened this fine property "ROSEDALE PARK." The inside streets will be graded and excellent improvements made. On South Boulevard, McLeod, Rosedale, Marion, Confederate, Atlanta and Home avenues. Right at Grant Park. PRICES: On account of the sacrifice prices at which we are selling lots in Rosedale Park we will save you $500 to $1,000 on your home secured from me and still you get the liberal terms stated above.

ARE YOU A BUSY MAN?

IF YOU can't leave your work send your wife to see me and I will furnish any other information desired. It's the opportunity of your life to secure a home under an arrangement that means the salvation of your family.

IF YOU DIE WE PAY YOUR WIDOW.

IN CASE of your death during the first year we will cancel two years of your future notes and present them to your widow. This means that two years of your monthly notes are insured and it may be that it can do even better. This is a special arrangement with each individual home purchaser.

EASY TO SECURE A HOME.

MY PLAN makes it mighty easy to secure a good home at a bargain price and on such terms as never presented before. This proposition is open for a limited time and you should be the first to take advantage of it.

BARGAINS IN LOTS.

ON $450 lots you pay $45 cash and $12 monthly.
ON $600 lots you pay $60 cash and $15 monthly.
ON $1,000 lots you pay $100 cash and $20 monthly.
THESE lots are worth $750, $1,000 and $1,500.

Rocks Rolled Down Mountain Effective As Weapon of War

Tyrolean Soldiers Resort to Primitive but Successful Method of Warfare Used in Napoleon's Wars

INNSBRUCK, Tyrol, July 24.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.) While both Germans and Austrians are fighting with 42-centimeter cannon, and with weapons that are the last word in the art of the arms manufacturer, the Tyroleans who have been drawn into the war by the entry of Italy find that the weapons used in the Napoleonic wars are still effective, and are using them with what is reported as great success.

The old "weapons" are nothing less than huge boulders which they are rolling down, avalanche-wise, onto the Italians as the latter attempt to storm the heights along the Austro-Italian frontier. They are proving quite as deadly as any shells have done in this war.

The avalanche of rocks was first used successfully in the battle of Belfore on June 14. The Austrian forces consisted of grandarmerie and Tyrolean sharp shooters, whose forefathers had fought a hundred years ago in approximately the same place.

The third company of the 71st Italian infantry regiment began an attack on Belfore, attempting to come up along the ravine. Before they knew it Long before they were at the top however the downpour of boulders began.

Many of the Italians were killed at once, others were severely wounded that they were captured. Those who could scrambled to one side of the ravine or the other, where they became easy marks for the bullets of the Austrians.

Sergeant-major Reyrer of the gendarmerie, who inaugurated the stone avalanche plan, has been decorated with the golden bravery medal, the first of its kind to be bestowed on the Italian front.

BRITISH WILL REAFFIRM PLEDGE TO KEEP FIGHTING

Anniversary of Declaration of War Will Be Observed Throughout the Empire

(By Associated Press.)

The pledge will be embodied in the following resolution, approved by Premier Asquith:

That on this anniversary of the declaration of a righteous war this meeting of citizens of ..... records its inflexible determination to continue to a victorious end the struggle for the maintenance of those ideals of liberty and justice which are the common and sacred cause of the allies."

Meetings have been arranged throughout the empire. Cabinet members are co-operating in the arrangements.

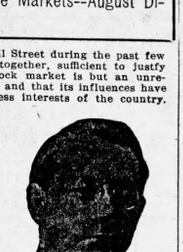
Speculation in War Stocks May Lead to Demoralization of Whole Market--Investors Should Avoid These Stocks--Better Feling in Foreign Exchange Markets--August Dividends Show Small Increase



NEW YORK, July 24.—Events in Wall Street during the past few months have been almost, if not altogether, sufficient to justfy the popular impression that the stock market is but an unrestrained and unrestricted gambling centre, and that its influences have been anything but inspiring to the business interests of the country. This would be absolutely true were it not unfair to ascribe to the stock market in general the wholly indefensible tactics of a band of unprincipled and unscrupulous speculators. Thus it may be said that the most demoralizing aspect of the European conflict, insofar as its effect upon America can be traced, has been the indiscriminate manipulation of the stocks of "war order industrials," many of which will never produce the smallest fraction of the profits that are attributed to them. With every rumor of war orders, real or fancied, professional operators are on the alert to juggle the stock of the concerns in question in the hope of unloading on the unsuspecting public when the fruits of their operations are safely within their grasp. The result is that while there are individual instances of quick profits on lucky turnovers the average investor has but little opportunity to come out of the transaction with as much money as he had when he went in. Whether or not the unusual plethora of money has contributed to any large extent to this new speculative tendency is problematical, though the general assumption is that idle money, like idle children, is not overzealous in choosing its employment.

Influences from two important sources may be expected to considerably counteract these speculative tendencies: the banks, which are becoming more cautious in loaning their funds on "war stocks" as collateral, and the managers and directors of the "war industrials," who are not anxious to have their properties made the football of a gambling market. The following announcement from a member of the executive committee of the Crucible Steel company "at the request of many stockholders seeking some explanation of the sharp advance of the stock" is significant: "The common stock is in the hands of people who evidently intend to hand it to others at the highest price at which it can be sold, and this evidently is the reason for the large misstatements made about war order contracts. Year before last the Crucible Steel company made a profit of almost $5,000,000. Last year the company made about $1,000,000, and was obliged to suspend its preferred dividend. This year the company will make not to exceed $2,500,000. It requires $1,750,000 to pay its preferred dividends. There is outstanding in unpaid scrip and accumulated dividends on preferred stock $7,300,000. With large expenditures necessary to finish its new plants (including that in Syracuse) I can see no reason why the common stock of the company should be able to pay dividends for a good many years to be worth its present price." Leaders in the stock exchange are agreed that big sales do not always indicate a healthy market, especially when the risks are as great as at present.

The speculative element is also taking stock in the probability that the war will be of long duration, and that its prolongation will mean a still greater increase in war orders and larger opportunities for stock manipulation. This, however, is not the attitude of those who make up the great majority of financial and business leaders. The best interests of the whole world, America included, lie in the termination of hostilities as soon as the guaranty of permanent peace can be given. The war has now lasted a year, and still there is talk of a long war, probably two or three years at the least. Against this uncertainty of war stands the fact that in some respects this country has never been better prepared to go forward in trade at home and abroad. The path of trade, however, is never entirely smooth in time of war, and a financial and business viewpoint which takes count of that fact and of other inevitable effects of war, while at the same time giving due weight to those favorable factors which underlie the business situation in this country, is the viewpoint which commends itself to those whose interests lie not in violent market fluctuations, but in the actual upbuilding of industry, of trade, and of credit. Conservative traders are waiting for President Wilson's note to the German government. It is believed that this note will be framed so as to end the controversy regarding the sinking of the Lusitania and that the president will notify the German government that its future actions alone will receive consideration. The president will not declare war or authorize the commission of an act of war, but will create a diplomatic situation that will make any future attack by German submarines on American ships or American citizens on the high seas an act of war on the United States that will automatically rupture diplomatic relations. Wall street believes that the neglect of the German government to reply categorically to the president's former note on the Lusitania case forces him to put an end to the written controversy at once.

EUROPEAN FINANCE AND FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

Tuesday was an eventful day in the London money market, the 10 per cent instalment of the big war loan, calling for about $300,000,000, being due. This is in addition to the $150,000,000 that was paid in last Saturday. Moreover, British investors showed a disposition to take advantage of the extra 4½ per cent discount allowed by the treasury department to all who would pay their subscriptions in full instead of on the instalment basis. According to London cables, over $1,000,000,000 was paid over on Tuesday, the preparations being so complete that little or no effect was noticeable either in the London money market or the New York stock exchange.

Indeed, it may be assumed that we have nothing further to fear of foreign liquidation of American stocks, this process having been completed insofar as its damaging effects upon our markets are concerned. Sterling exchange is below the ordinary gold import level, this situation evidently having been brought about by some private arrangement between London and American bankers for the control of the gold situation. It will be remembered that last autumn an important meeting of international bankers was held in London, when an agreement was made to take concerted action whenever necessary to control the gold movement. At that time the market had just recovered from the effects of sensational reports made by the British government to the effect that America owed London many hundreds of millions of dollars which the London bankers asked should be paid in full. The alleged debts finally proved to be no debts at all, but merely represented European holdings of stocks and of bonds that had not matured. Neither of these classes of securities were debts. The stocks and bonds could, it is true, be sold if they were offered at a sufficiently attractive price. But there was no reason for American investors or bankers to take them, except the prices were attractive. It was found that a fair amount of short term bonds matured by the end of 1914. These were duly paid and after that the balance turned in favor of this country, owing to the heavy exports of war materials, and the restriction of importations of merchandise as a whole.

INVESTMENTS.

After several weeks of inactivity, investment bankers are unanimous in reporting a better feeling in the bond market. Predictions have been made that during the remainder of the summer favorable bond market conditions will be experienced and that prices will continue to advance. This assumption is based on the fact that European liquidation has practically ceased, and that funds which might otherwise be employed in commercial enterprises will for the present be diverted into investment channels.

According to the reliable compilation of the Journal of Commerce, American investors will receive during August $120,820,764, representing dividend and interest disbursements. This compares with $118,092,928 in August a year ago, or an increase of $2,727,863. Of the grand total dividends will furnish, $56,520,764, a decrease of $2,072,264. Industrial corporations will pay out to stockholders $25,643,495, a decrease of $1,645,004, as a number of companies either reduced or will omit dividends. Interest payments will call for $64,300,000, against $59,500,000 last year, the increase being due to new bond and note issues.

Wall street believes that the outlook for the resumption of dividends and increased payments to stockholders in various corporations is more favorable than for quite a while. Large disbursements that have been announced from time to time by companies that have benefited by war orders are expected to be followed before a great while by the declaration of heavier payments on the part of iron and steel and copper, as well as by some other companies. In this connection it is reported that the Western Union Telegraph dividend is to be increased from 5 to 6 per cent, and the Union Carbide company is expected to raise its quarterly rate from 2 to 2½ per cent, while it is believed in the financial district that the directors of the International Nickel company at their meeting next month will declare a dividend of 5 per cent, making 10 per cent paid to stockholders since the beginning of the current fiscal year on April 10.

Judge Men by Their Money

We know by hearsay when a man is rich; we have to find out for ourselves whether he is simple and kindly and brave. But our judgments are worth nothing to ourselves or anyone else unless we make them for ourselves, unless they are based upon what a man does rather than on what he has; and there is nothing which hinders us so much from exercising our own judgment as the reverence for money. It hides from us our own greed and the greed of others. It makes us think there is peace where there is a sharp material war. And this war, not purely material, opens our eyes to the nature of the other. It will have one good result at least if it keeps them open.

WHITMAN DOESN'T CREDIT CONVICT'S BECKER STORY

Sing Sing Inmate Said He Heard Gunmen Planning to "Frame" Condemned Man

(By Associated Press.)

ALBANY, N. Y., July 24.—After a two hours' conference here today with Joseph Murphy, a Sing Sing convict, Governor Whitman declared he did not believe Murphy's story of overhearing Jack Rose, Bridgie Webber and Harry Vallon planning to "frame-up" former Police Lieutenant Charles Becker. Murphy admitted, the governor said, that he had talked with Becker in the Sing Sing death house the evening of June 20, and on the following day Murphy wrote to Bourke Cochran informing him of overhearing the alleged "frame-up."

The guards who had permitted Murphy to enter the death cell would be dismissed, the governor said.

IDAHO KIDNAPPER SAYS HE NEEDS THE MONEY

Lon Dean Captured After Escape of Wealthy Prisoner, E. A. Empey

(By Associated Press.)

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho, July 24.—Lon Dean, a sheep herder, who admits he kidnapped E. A. Empey, was lodged in jail today by cowboys, after a hard ride to save their captive from lynchers. Dean was captured on Sheep mountain last night after Empey had escaped. Dean, a slight man, five feet four inches tall, said:

"I took this means of getting money, as I thought I could do more good with it than those who had it. I had not thought of anxiety the kidnapping of Empey caused the family."

Dean said he had worked for Empey five years ago and had been planning the kidnapping for some time. After abducting Empey at the point of a gun at his ranch forty miles from here, several days ago, he took him to a hut on Sheep mountain, five miles from the ranch. Empey's young son was sent to notify the family that Empey would be killed unless a ransom of $6,000 in gold was deposited at a designated spot. The ransom was raised yesterday and would have been paid had not Empey escaped while his captor was asleep.

LOCAL OPTION LEGISLATOR IS DEFENDED BY MOTHER

Mrs. Naomi P. Bale Answers Requests That She Oppose Pending Measure

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ROME, Ga., July 24.—Mrs. Naomi P. Bale, a well-known W. C. T. U. leader of north Georgia, has come to the defense in the public prints of her son, Representative John W. Bale, of Floyd county, author of a measure pending in the house of representatives to place prohibition statutes upon the books of the state.

Mrs. Hale, in a letter to a local newspaper, declares that she has been receiving anonymous communications requesting her to take a stand against her son. She announces that she is not in sympathy with his ideas, but that he made an open and square fight on local option principles, and that he merely carrying out his contract with the people. She takes a hot shot at some of his enemies by saying, "I must prefer an open local optionist to a prohibitionist with a jug in his closet."

PEOPLE BUSY PREPARING FOR MOVING DAY

RENTING AGENCIES STILL BUSY WITH AUTUMN TENANTS

They Have Inquiries for Locations Ranging From Small Houses to High-Class Apartments and Business Places

APARTMENT HOUSES AND BUNGALOWS IN DEMAND

Demand for Apartments Answers Argument of Over-Supply--Description of Some of Them Shows Convenient Arrangement

The week has been extremely active with the renting agents, who have been waiting on tenants who are getting ready for another year, either renewing present leases or signing new ones. Moving day is on September 1.

From now until that time the agents will have their hands full answering inquiries about locations and showing them to prospective tenants.

The inquiries apply to every possible class of locations, from the smallest houses to the high class apartments and buiness locations. It will be seen from the accompanying illustrations that apartments are much in demand. In fact apartments and bungalows constitute the main demand.

Among the apartment houses that are being shown are some which were built this season and will not be ready until August. The suites range anywhere from two to eight or nine rooms.

Living in apartments these days is an extremely comfortable proceeding, as descriptions of some of them, which follow below, will show. In addition to all the conveniences, apartments have the advantage of being compact and having everything on one floor.

The popularity of apartments would answer the argument that the town is likely to have too many. The demand for them is extremely keen. It is a condition, too, that is not local, for this popularity applies to all American cities.

The agents are also offering a greater variety of houses than ever before, and at extremely reasonable rates of rental. They can offer desirable ones in every section of the city.

There never has been a time before when the public has had a wider choice of every kind of rentable location, whether residence or business.

The accompanying illustrations show some of the apartment houses in which space is now available for occupancy by September 1.

The Byron apartments, at West Peachtree and Linden streets, contain 21 suits of two to six rooms each. This building has both freight and passenger elevator services, which is operated day and night. The Rivers Realty company handles the renting of this building.

The Morningside apartments at Highland avenue and Virginia place, are being handled by the Forrest and George Adair realty company. This is a new building. It has fifteen apartments in all, with all the conveniences. Forrest and George Adair are in charge of the renting.

The Piedmont Park section is becoming notable for its high-class apartment houses. One of these is the Piedmont Park apartment house at 126 East Eleventh street, which is another new building. This has the advantage of exposure on Piedmont park. The building contains 27 apartments of various sizes. Smith, Ewing & Rankin have charge of the renting of this apartment house.

PETROGRAD, July 25.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Prince Scherbatoff, the new minister of the interior, in a recent speech to a gathering of newspaper men who were invited to the home office, said that he did not believe in a heavy fettering of the freedom of the press even in wartimes, and declared that he purposed to ask representatives of the war office, the admiralty and the ministry of the interior to discuss the whole question with the leading newspaper editors, in an effort to reach a more satisfactory arrangement than that in force at present.

The mere fact that the minister personally met and talked with the representatives of the newspapers marks a surprising departure from tradition.

THE ROSSLYN APARTMENTS. This building, owned by Edward M. Durant, is on Ponce de Leon avenue at Durant place. It contains fifteen apartments, with all the conveniences. Forrest and George Adair are the renting agents. This apartment house is located on a main thoroughfare and is comparatively close in, with good car service.

PIEDMONT PARK APARTMENTS. This building is at 126 East Eleventh street, with an exposure on Piedmont Park, and is one of the handsome new apartment houses in this exclusive section. The Piedmont Park apartment house contains 27 apartments of varying sizes and the latest modern conveniences. Smith, Ewing & Rankin are the renting agents in charge of this building.

THE BYRON APARTMENTS, among the most popular in Atlanta. The building is located at West Peachtree and Linden streets and contains 21 apartments of two to six rooms. The building has freight and passenger elevators and every known convenience. The E. Rivers Realty company has charge of the renting.

WHY LANDLORD SHOULD PAY FULL COMMISSION

Renting Agent Tells How He Argued Successfully Against Proposed Reduction

Next to the problem of cutting rent commissions is the problem of convincing a landlord why he shouldn't insist on it.

Some agents adopt a high and mighty independent manner and sometimes get away with it. One agent, however, hit upon a convincing argument, which is repeated for the benefit of the fraternity.

A landlord asked him to handle his houses for him, but suggested that 3 per cent was entirely enough commission. Five per cent is the regular rate.

"I took this landlord to my desk," the agent said, "and solemnly drew a diagram. I showed a street with two houses, one of which was vacant and owned by the landlord who wanted the reduction, and the other, also vacant, owned by a landlord who paid the full commission.

"'I have a tenant who likes that street,' I told the landlord," the agent went on. "'If I take him out to see those two houses, would it be natural for me to recommend your house, for which I would get only 3 per cent commission, or the other man's house, for which I get the regular commission?'"

That particular landlord chose to pay the full commission, and the agent declares he has got a good deal of business on just that argument.

KISER PREFERS ATLANTA TO HOME IN CALIFORNIA

Realty Agent, Back Home, Advises People to Continue to Live Here

Marion C. Kiser's advice to a man contemplating living in California is to stay in Atlanta. Mr. Kiser, with his family, has just returned from a trip to the two California expositions and various points on the Pacific coast.

Mr. Kiser was very much impressed with conditions in the states of Washington and Oregon, which he considers superior to California, although less exploited. He gives as his reasons the fine crop and fruit yields of those states, although he says that it was Georgia apples, and not Washington's, that took the blue ribbon.

He thinks that California is suffering from overexploitation. He noted a lot of idle labor, and said that prices were high. He thinks the Atlanta climate is better than the boasted California article. He found that Los Angeles was unbearably hot at times and that San Francisco was unpleasantly cold.

"In 'Frisco," said Mr. Kiser, "they tell you that Los Angeles has the hookworm, and in Los Angeles you are told that 'Frisco has the T. B. People told me there that fortunes couldn't just be picked up; that they had to be worked for.

"California's trouble, it seemed to me, was that she was living too much on tourists. Outside of the large cities there isn't the necessary population. Farming can't be made uniformly successful under an irrigation system.

"I met some people who had gone to California to live who said they would be glad to return."

Mr. Kiser said, however, that he was convinced on his return that Atlanta needed a city market, more parks, and a more systematic plan of streets.

GERMANY SINKS MANY NORWEGIAN STEAMERS

Many Papers Denounce Government for Not Protecting Sailors and Citizens

CHRISTIANIA, July 10.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Although the German government officially has declared its willingness to pay full damage when Norwegian boats have been "accidentally" torpedoed by German submarines, reports of the sinking of Norwegian steamers are becoming so numerous as to offer serious complications.

Many of the leading papers denounce the government for not doing what it ought to in order to protect Norwegian sailors and citizens. No word has been published from the government regarding what steps it has taken or how it has protested.

The Tidens Tegn says that it now is necessary that the government break its silence and let the people know what it has done and is going to do in order to stop these continued encroachments, and "protect our flag, our sailors and peaceful travelers."

The Morgenbladet says: "While our sailors are met by insidious death, while our flag is offended and Norwegian ships are torpedoed without warning, the government and parliament are busy discussing whether the language we are talking is real Norwegian or whether the hymns and prayers are to be discontinued in public schools. About those events that fill everybody with uneasiness and wrath they say nothing."

The Aftenposten says: "Everything is all right in Norway! Germany, however, by reasons we do not understand, is torpedoing our merchant ships, but what does it matter? In the parliament the meetings are more quiet and undisturbed than ever, nobody seems to be affected or anxious. At the same time our farmers are up against a crop failure; the daily bread is dear for the common laborer and everything seems to be uncertain—but with the government everything seems to have a rosy hue!"

The Shipping Gazette points to the American note to Germany, "which contains the same questions and requests which Norway, as a neutral country, must demand from the German government."

The Real Estate Field

Three-Story Building on Peachtree Street Is Leased—West Peachtree Street Corner Apartment Site Brings $15,000. North Pryor Street Lease—Building Value for the Month Now $541,474—Small Real Estate Sales Reported

Two leases and a sale were featured in Saturday's real estate announcements.

George P. Moore has leased to J. H. Falks, the restaurant proprietor, the three-story building at No. 142 Peachtree street, which adjoins the Atlanta Trust company building on the north.

Mr. Falks had already leased the ground floor. He has taken over the lease on the entire building, which has about seven years to run, and will open a dining room on the second floor above his present lunch room.

APARTMENT SITE SALE.

Paul P. Rose of the Empire Trust and Safe Deposit company sold for Dr. Marion McH. Hull to Mrs. Alline Timmons a large vacant lot at the northeast corner of West Peachtree and Seventeenth streets.

The consideration was $15,000, all cash except a loan. The lot is 111x155. Mrs. Timmons is now building a three-story apartment house, to cost $45,000, on this lot. It was erroneously stated that this building would be at Peachtree and Seventeenth streets. It is on West Peachtree street.

ANOTHER LEASE.

Benjamin D. Watkins had leased to the Williams Printing company a part of the top floor of the Rosser and Porter building at No. 61 North Pryor street.

The term of the lease is for five years. The consideration was not named.

BUILDING VALUE $541,474.

A $20,000 building permit was issued Saturday for the Gordon apartments at Lee and Oak streets in West End.

This makes the value of July building permits already issued $541,474, which compares with $495,000 for the whole month last year.

A permit for $38,500 will probably be issued Monday for the Thurmond building on Whitehall street between Hunter and Mitchell, adjoining the Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose property. This, which is the last large application on file, will bring the month's total to $580,000. The week's routine business will easily increase the value to $600,000 or over.

August will start off with $65,000 worth of work for the high school building on South Pryor street and the branch library on Georgia avenue. Building has struck a fast stride, and from now on will continue to show an increase, especially as we will soon compare with the war period last year.

SMALL SALES.

John S. Scott has sold, for Mrs. Gertrude S. Walker to R. L. Brightwell two vacant lots on Holderness street, north of Sells avenue, in West End, for an aggregate consideration of $1,500. The lots are 44x235 each.

BREAKING OUT ON BODY ITCHED

So Bad Could Not Sleep. In Little Red Pimples. In Two Weeks Entirely Well

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My little boy suffered two weeks with some kind of a breaking out all over his body. It came in little red pimples and itched so bad he could not sleep at night or in the day. He was cross and fretful all the time and would scratch and irritate his body all over.

"I saw Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertised and I bought some. In two weeks he was entirely well.

"My little girl suffered with bad eruptions all over her head about three weeks. Nothing did any good until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and she was perfectly healed in two weeks." (Signed) Mrs. Mollie Rushing, Tylertown, Miss., Feb. 1, 1915.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

WHILE mountain and shore and a journey to the far west have claimed many of Atlanta's social set a goodly number have preferred to remain at home. The social life of the summer though necessarily quiet has been very pleasant from the informality that has characterized the majority of the gatherings. The presence of a number of attractive visitors has proved an incentive for much of the informal gaiety that has centered about the country clubs. The wind-swept terraces of the Druid Hills Golf club, the Piedmont club, the East Lake Country club and the Capital City Country club have witnessed many bright assemblies and have proved as delightful as far away mountain resorts. The Chinese evening at the Capital City club Wednesday will inaugurate a new form of entertainment that will be as novel as it will be pleasing, and the next few weeks will witness the transformation of the picturesque roof garden into scenes of rare beauty. The cherry trees of old Nippon laden with their wealth of fragrant blossoms, the quaint bazaars of India with their changing aspects of light and color, the dreaming sphinx and ancient pyramids on the banks of the far away Nile with perhaps a glimpse of Cleopatra's barge will each in turn prove a picturesque background for club members and their friends at the dinner dances which are proving such bright events of the summer season.

AN interesting engagement announced today in The Journal is that of Miss Mildred Moultrie, of Rome, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Moultrie, to Mr. Frank Garrett Louthan, of Richmond, Va., their marriage to take place early in October. The pretty bride elect is the granddaughter of the late Dr. Luther Rice Gwaltney, of South Carolina and Georgia, one of the south's lamented divines and noted educators. Her maternal grandmother was Sophia Bonham Lipscomb, a niece of ex-Governor Bonham, of South Carolina, and a close relative of ex-Governor Pickens, of the same state. She is a descendant of the Moultries of Charleston, S. C., and Revolutionary fame. Mr. Louthan is a member of an old Virginia family and is engaged in the successful practice of law in Richmond, where he will introduce his bride to a wide circle of friends.

Welcome!

Your new Nunnally's Store will open at No. 101 Peachtree Street, TUESDAY MORNING, July 27th. Special music and souvenirs have been provided for the occasion.

To invite you to this opening is like inviting you to attend your own party, for this beautiful new store is but the outgrowth of one which you have known and frequented as the center of Atlanta's social life for more than a decade.

The furnishings are beautiful and artistic without strained effect. The woodwork is rich, dark mahogany; the light effect is as soft and mellow as the moonlight; the fountain is the "last word" in soda dispensing equipment; the candy cases are ice cooled and dust proof, and the tables and chairs have been selected with a special view to comfort.

In fact, we believe the entire store is just as you would have it, and we hope you will find pleasure in meeting your friends here for rest and refreshment.

VISITOR FROM ATHENS

—Photograph by Lenney.

MISS ANNETTE WEBB, OF ATHENS.

Miss Webb was a pretty visitor of the past week, and with her hostess, Miss Charlotte Wilkins, was a popular figure at the dances attended by the college set.

Retrospect of the Past Week

AT many of the informal dances of the week at the various social clubs, a score of pretty visitors have added much to the pleasure of the bright occasions, innumerable small parties having been given in their honor.

Mrs. Edwin Moritz has been the feted guest of Mrs. W. S. Elkin, and another pretty matron who has received charming attentions is Mrs. William H. Burwell, of Sparta, who is with Mr. Burwell at the Majestic hotel during the legislative session. Mrs. Lucien Cocke, of Roanoke, Va., has divided her visit with her many friends who have entertained informally in her honor, and Mrs. Elliot Cheatham, of Washington, D. C., has been honor guest at a series of informal parties during her visit to her mother, Mrs. Bartow Blount.

Two lovely young girls representing the college set who have been popular figures at the informal dances were Miss Jean Ashcroft, of Monroe, N. C., the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Andrews, and Miss Elizabeth Rose, of Knoxville, Tenn., who has been delightfully entertained as the guest of Miss Patty McGehee.

Miss Frances Rowland, of New York City, who is spending the summer with relatives, has been honor guest at several luncheons during the week, and Miss Katherine Hagan, the guest of Miss Marie Ridley, received charming attentions during the past week.

MONDAY afternoon there was an informal gathering of Lucy Cobb students and alumnae at the summer home of Mrs. M. A. Lipscomb at Tallulah Falls. A pleasant feature was an address by Miss Mildred Rutherford, of Athens, whose historical interests carry her to many cities in this state and other southern states. For the benefit of those who do not live in Athens, and have not seen the school for several years, Miss Rutherford told of the many additions and improvements, and spoke of the progress of the schools under the present principals, Misses Gerdine and Brumby.

She spoke of the plan of the alumnae to hold reunions at Athens during commencement and to have each year an alumnae banquet. Mrs. Lipscomb was assisted in the entertainment of her guests by her daughter, Mrs. W. D. Ellis, Jr., of Atlanta. Delightful refreshments were served by her granddaughter, Miss Virginia Lipscomb, and Miss Dorothy Hodgson, of Athens.

The guests were Mrs. Goldthwaite, of Mobile; Mrs. Groover, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Miss Kennard, formerly of Athens, but now living at Turnerville, Misses Burns, Lambert and Hill, of Clarkesville, and Misses Julie, Lily, Sarah and Elizabeth Moss, Miss Dorothy Hodgson, the Misses Morton, and the Misses Holliday, of Athens.

AN event of Tuesday morning, which centered the interest of a wide circle of friends was the wedding of Mrs. Della Foreacre Sneed and Mr. Blewett Lee, of Chicago, which was solemnized at 10 o'clock, at the residence of the bride, in Ansley Park. The wedding company assembled only the immediate family and the attendants were Miss Julia Brantley, niece of the bride, and Mr. John King Ottley, a life-long friend of the bridegroom. The impressive ceremony was performed by Rev. W. Hanson Pulsford, of Chicago, and the bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. William Foreacre, of Charlotte, N. C. Mr. and Mrs. Lee left for a visit to Canada before going to California where they will be until September when they will take up their residence in Chicago.

The al fresco setting of the marriage of Miss Rebecca Candler and Mr. John M. Goodman, which took place Tuesday evening, made the event one of picturesque beauty.

Rev. Lewis T. Wilds, of Fayetteville, N. C., the bride's brother-in-law, performed the ceremony and the wedding attendants were Mrs. Lewis T. Wilds, matron of honor, and Mrs. Caroll Weisiger, of Louisville, Ky., Mrs. Harry Auracher, of Chicago; Mrs. John Scott and Mrs. Henry Earthman.

Mr. Scott Candler was best man; little Misses Lucia Pope and Rebecca Harman, ribbon bearers, and Caroline McKinney, flower girl.

The approach to the altar arranged at the rise of a grassy slope, was an aisle of white pillars festooned with garlands of green vines studded with tiny electric globes. The surrounding trees were hung with softly shaded lights and about the spacious lawn were illuminated stands of flowering plants and groups of handsome palms and ferns. An orchestra rendered bright music during the reception which followed the ceremony and punch was served from a flower laden table placed under the trees.

Upon their return from an eastern wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Goodman will make their home in Edgewood.

A PLEASANT occasion of Thursday was the birthday dinner given in honor of Mr. Frederick J. Paxon by Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connally at their home in West End. Mr. Paxon was the recipient of many congratulations and messages of esteem from his many friends and the occasion proved one of delightful hospitality the guests including Dr. and Mrs. John E. White, Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Brown, Mr. and Mrs. John Spalding, Miss Cora Brown and Miss Sally Eugenia Brown. In the evening Mr. Paxon was again honored with a dinner party when Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hartman entertained six guests at their home on Bedford place. After dinner Mr. Paxon's Bible class of the Second Baptist church called in a body to offer congratulations to their teacher. Later a watermelon cutting was a pleasant feature of the evening.

MUCH of the social life of the past week centered at the clubs which furnished bright diversion with their usual series of tea dances and dinner dances. The roof garden parties at the Capital City club on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, brought together large crowds.

Happenings in the World of Art

In view of the local interest awakened by the recent salons and art exhibitions given by the Atlanta Art association the news of an art competition in which all Americans are eligible to take part will be received with interest. The following outline appeared in a recent issue of the New ork Sun:

Details of the competition for the Saltus prize of $100 have been made public by the Institut Francais aux Etats Unis, or the museum of French art, under the auspices of which the competition is to be held. This year the prize, which is offered every second year, will be for a painting, although it may be for a work in sculpture, architecture, music, painting or literature.

The competition will be open to all art students of an American university, college or art school, resident of the United States and under 25 years of age, who shall have made application to compete to the executive secretary of the museum of French art on or before August 1, 1915. The subject will be a decorative composition in oil, symbolical of the progress of the fine arts in France, on canvas, size 68 centimeters (27 inches) broad by 86 centimeters (34 inches) high. This program constitutes an agreement between the musuum of French art on the one hand and each competitor on the other, to the terms of which agreement each competitor gives assent by the fact of submitting a painting in competition, and hereby agrees to be bound by all the provisions and conditions set forth in this program.

PRIZE AWARDED.

The Museum of French Art agrees to pay to the author of the painting placed first by the jury the sum of $100, and to award to the author as well the museum's medal immediately after the decision of the board of trustees. The jury which will judge the paintings submitted in competition will be composed of Robert Henri and Charles Hoffianer.

The trustees of the Museum of French Art will convene to make the award of the prize, and, after receiving the report of the jury, they will thereupon open the envelope bearing the number of the painting placed first, and will award to its author the prize in the competition. Immediately after making the award the trustees will notify the author of the prize and will send a copy of their report to each competitor. The painting shall not be made public, reproduced or publicly exhibited, until after the award by the trustees. The painting to which the prize shall have been awarded will remain the property of the Museum of French Art. After the decision of the jury has been reached in the competition all other paintings will immediately be returned to their authors.

DETAILS OF COMPETITION.

All paintings, properly packed, must be addressed to the trustees of the Museum of French Art at their office, 599 Fifth avenue, New York City, and delivered at said office, expressage prepaid, not later than November 1, 1915, at noon. All the paintings shall be unsigned, but in the wrapper of the painting shall be placed a card bearing the name and adress of its author enclosed in a plain envelope sealed and addressed to the trustees of the Museum of French Art. All the paintings will be removed from their wrappers by the executive secretary, who will give to each painting and its sealed envelope a number, by which it shall be known to the jury until the award, at which time the chairman of the board of trustees will open the envelope bearing the number of the premiated painting, and will forthwith award to its author the first prize in the competition.

An event of Friday afternoon was the piano recital by the pupils of Mrs. Lillie D. Caldwell at her home at 363 East Georgia avenue.

A beautiful event of the midsummer season will be the reception at which Governor and Mrs. Nathaniel E. Harris will entertain Wednesday evening at the executive mansion in honor of the general assembly. Adding to the pleasure of the occasion will be the presence of many of Governor and Mrs. Harris' friends from Macon and south Georgia.

Assisting in receiving will be Mr. Asa G. Candler, recently appointed colonel and chief of aides to the governor's staff, and Mrs. Candler, ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown and Mrs. Brown, Mr. William H. Burwell, speaker of the house, and Mrs. Burwell, Senator G. Ogden Persons, president of the senate, and Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Wallace, of Marietta; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Harris, Mr. and Mrs. John Harris and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hazelhurst, of Macon, and Miss Margaret Luttrell, of Washington City.

Mrs. Frederick R. Jones, of Macon, and Miss Alice May Massengale and Miss Ethel Massengale will serve punch.

LITERARY GOSSIP OF BOOKS AND AUTHORS

"The Lost Prince" is the title of Frances Hodgson Burnett's new novel which the Century company will publish shortly. The hero is a prince who does not know he is one, though he has always the noble image of a prince before him; and he makes his way through Europe in the guise of a stalwart little tramp, secretly carrying a sign and a message to stray men in crowded streets, at palace gates, in forests and on mountain sides—he himself ignorant of all but that he must obey and pass on in silence.

Though the legend of which the Lost Prince is the central figure belongs to an actual country, yet his beautiful "Samavia"—like the mythical land of Zenda—may not be found in any atlas.

A variety of reasons have led Louis Untermeyer, author of "Challenge," to make a long summer stay at Kennebunkport, Me. "First and least serious," he writes, "it makes me feel 'literary'—for we are entirely surrounded by Longfellow's 'stern and rockbound coast' (or was it Whittier's?); flanked on our right by the Boston Transcript, and cut off in the rear by Booth Tarkington, Margaret Deland and other mere novelists with summer homes. Then for extra inducements, there are the deep pine woods, the ditto Atlantic and the even deeper blueberry pies of Mrs. Toothacker. Then also there is the canoeing, which is sine qua non, and the walking, which is summa cum laude, and Goddwin's ice cream soda, which is nascitur non fit."

Little feet are no longer the fashion in the aristocratic circles of China; and it has come to pass that the Chinese ladies, on the rebound from ancient customs, are proud in proportion to the largeness of their shoes. So says Gardner L. Harding, author of "Present-Day China," which the Century company will publish early in the autumn. The woman suffragist is abroad in China, Mr. Gardner goes on; and there are vast cotton mills that run night and day, child-labor, soldiers in the most modern khaki suits, and oil fields covered with countless derricks. The China revealed by Mr. Harding, who returned from that country early this year, is said to be not at all the China that is in the minds of most Americans.

Oliver Onions is still engaged in composition with the English army, but is making efforts to get to the front as a private in the ranks. He was offered a commission as captain in the home defense troops, but declared that he would rather black boots at the front than be a major general at home. He is a year over the age of the present volunteers, however, and has been unable to get to the front, though an important politician endeavored to have a special post established for him. Meantime, with sanitation, transport, food, etc., he is kept decidedly busy.

Macon Girl Successful in Motion Pictures

It was a pleasure to many Macon friends last evening to recognize Miss Martha Drake in the picture, "Wormwood," shown at the Princess theater. Miss Drake, who has only recently been connected with the motion picture world, has enjoyed unusual success in her chosen profession. Taking the part of Miss Progress as leading lady with the Reliance Film company, she enjoys the privilege of meeting prominent people of America, as well as an extensive tour of the country, visiting the most important cities and places of interest throughout the United States, the plot being similar to that of "Our Mutual Girl," which attracted so much attention last winter.

Miss Drake is now in the Adirondacks, resting, after a strenuous week in which a picture was made when she made a daring leap into Lake Erie. Later she goes to Oswego and The Thousand Islands.—Macon News.

Dancing Party

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Spurlock gave a dance Saturday evening at their home on Georgia avenue in honor of Miss Tilly Woolvin, of Abbeville, Ga., who is the guest of Miss Fay Slaughter.

The house was decorated with palms and midsummer blossoms, and ices were served during the evening.

Mrs. Spurlock wore a gown of yellow chiffon and lace. Miss Elvena Neal, who assisted Mrs. Spurlock in entertaining her guests, wore a dancing frock of yellow crepe de chine, and Miss Woolvin wore a becoming gown of green chiffon.

Seventy-five guests were entertained.

All This Week In Atlanta Movies

Many Fine Features, Firstclass Comedies and Book Plays Feature the Week, With Atlanta's Favorites in Hero and Heroine Roles

Marguerite Clark is at the Grand in a new play, "Seven Sisters." The Grand also shows "The Blindness of Virtue" and "The Puppet Crown," both new to Atlanta.

The Montgomery has Mary Pickford in her two greatest pictures, "Tess of the Storm Country" and "The Eagle's Mate."

The Alamo 1 has Charlie Chaplin in a couple of comedies, a Pathe feature and other good films.

"Dr. Rameau" is at the Strand, together with "The Second in Command," John Drew's old success, starring Francis X. Bushman. "Satan Sanderson" is another good Strand picture.

Three World films, "Across the Pacific," "When It Strikes Home" and "The Laurel," an underworld play, are among the Victoria's offerings.

The Alamo 2 has rebooked "The Juggernaut," and also has "Dorothy Donnelly in "The Thief," "Graustark" and other features.

They are all first-run pictures at the Vaudette, Roscoe Arbuckle in a new Keystone, Mutual stars like Dorothy Gish and Vivian Rich, Helen Holmes in a railroad drama, and two corking serials, "The Diamond From the Sky", and "The Romance of Elaine."

"BILL" OLDKNOW, ATLANTA MAN, IN MOVIE AT ALPHA.

Billy Beard starts his fourth great week at the Alpha Monday—a week packed to the brim with pictures as attractive as Billy himself. There is another episode of "The Broken Coin" Monday; Mary Fuller Tuesday, and also a ripping comedy in which "Bill" Oldknow, of Atlanta, appears; a "Who Pays?" drama Wednesday, and such stars as Elsie Jane Wilson, Hobart Henley, Cleo Madison and Billie Ritchie on other days.

The manager has appended a little note to Tuesday's program, sent to the editor. It says: "This is our Bill, head of the Consolidated Film and Supply company. He does not like to be called Bill."

And so, friends, it is William Oldknow, not "Bill," who is at the Alpha Tuesday in a comedy, "Behind the Screens." The Atlanta man is featured along with Eddie Lyons, Victoria Ford and Lee Moran. The picture was taken at Universal City and is a riot. It shows Mr. Oldknow working.

On the same day Mary Fuller is at the Alpha in "Jeanne of the Woods," a Victor drama. Monday's picture is "The Face at the Window," the Fourth Episode in "The Broken Coin," the Gold Seal serial.

"Today and Tomorrow" is the title of the eighth drama in "Who Pays?" the Pathe series of twelve separate and distinct pictures based on twelve vital problems of life. The story of "Who Pays?" appeared last week in the daily Journal. Ruth Roland and Henry King are the stars. "For the Commonwealth," the ninth drama of the series, begins Monday in The Journal and will run throughout the week. It will be shown Wednesday week, exclusively at the Alpha.

Thursday at the Alpha Elsie Jane Wilson returns to the screen in "Bound on the Wheel," a three-act Rex drama; Friday Cleo Madison and Hobart Henley, long-time stars in different companies, appear in the same picture, "The Flight of a Night Bird;" Saturday Billie Ritchie stars in "Life and Moving Pictures."

And, of course, Billie Beard all the week.

MARY PICKFORD IN GREATEST SUCCESSES AT MONTGOMERY.

Mary Pickford is at the Montgomery four days this week in her two most famous pictures, "Tess of the Storm Country," and "The Eagle's Mate." The former will be shown Wednesday and Thursday, the latter Friday and Saturday.

For Monday the Montgomery has booked George Barr McCutcheon's famous romance play, "Graustark," in which Beverly Bayne and Francis X. Bushman are the stars. Tuesday the picturization of "David Harum," featuring William H. Crane, will be shown. This classic by Edward Noyes Westcott makes one of the tenderest and most graceful movies ever seen. It is worth while from beginning to end.

The two pictures in which Mary Pickford appears at the Montgomery made "the most popular girl in the world" her reputation. It was in "Tess of the Storm Country" that she first won to favor and in "The Eagle's Mate" that she clinched it.

The producers have refilmed both features throughout, so that they will be as good as new for Montgomery patrons.

In each picture Mary Pickford takes an entirely different role from the other. In "Tess" she is the wild little girl of the marshes, clad in rags, as fanciful as a fairy, as timid as a deer.

In "The Eagle's Mate" she is the girl of the Blue Grass, won by the fire and force of a mountain man who carries her off on his saddle-bow in the midst of a feud just as Southerner of old. Mary Pickford is said by those who have seen this picture to be far more attractive here than in any other she has ever appeared.

CHAPLIN, HART, KEYSTONES AND MUCH MORE AT ALAMO 1.

A Keystone or a Charlie Chaplin comedy every day, a sensational Pathe feature and William S. Hart in a western drama, are among the good things offered by the Alamo No. 1 this week.

The Pathe feature is in two reels Monday—"Where the Trail Led," produced with a caste which includes Dorothy Davenport, Lee Hill, Ben Harding and Rupert Julian. The story is of Jim Harding, rancher, who has gambled away his money. Jules Valdez, a notorious road agent, finds Jim's wife unconscious by the roadside and takes her home, where Jim conceals him from the sheriff's posse. In his lawless way Valdez strives to repay Jim by holding up a gambling joint disguised in Jim's clothes. His successful attempt results in the arrest of Jim. He is about to be hanged, but Valdez steps forward and gives himself up to save his benefactor's life. Besides "Where the Trail Led" Monday, the Alamo 1 will show a Charlie Chaplin scream.

Other Chaplin films are booked for Thursday and Saturday. The Keystones are: "Gussle's Wayward Path" Tuesday; "Fatty's Plucky Pup," a two-reel special, Wednesday; "The Beauty Bunglers" Thursday; "Do Re Mi Boom" Friday; and Ambrose's Nasty Temper" Saturday.

Another great feature Saturday is William S. Hart in "The Taking of Luke McVane," a two-reel Kaybee drama. Hart is at his best in this stirring western story and few movie fans will want to miss their favorite.

FOUR FINE FEATURES FILMS AT THE STRAND THIS WEEK.

Four big features are on the Strand program this week: Frederick Perry, Monday and Tuesday, in "Dr. Rameau," a Pox Film feature; Francis X. Bushman and Marguerite Snow, Wednesday and Thursday, in "The Second in Command," the play which John Drew made famous; Orrin Johnson, Friday, in "Satan Sanderson," and a Mutual Masterpicture, Saturday, 'Milestones of Life," with Mignon Anderson.

With Frederick Perry, star of "On Trial," "Dr. Rameau" appear Jean Sothern, Stuart Holmes, Dorothy Bernard, George Alison and other stars. The story is of a famous Paris surgeon, risen to the pinnacle of his profession from the very ranks. His wife is dead, and her memory to him is the most sacred thing on earth. One day he discovers that she was unfaithful to him, and that Pamela, the girl, is not his child. He drives Pamela from the house in a gust of rage. Later, deathly ill, Pamela sends for him. Her pleading overcomes his bitterness and he works like a fiend to save her for a life of happiness and love.

Francis X. Bushman is one of the most popular movie stars in the world. His appearance at the Strand Wednesday and Thursday in "The Second in Command" is a real event. Associated with him is beautiful Marguerite Snow, William Clifford, Lester Cuneo, Helen Dunbar, Marcia Moore and other stars. "The Second in Command" was originally produced by Charles Frohman, and with John Drew in the lead, it was the season's rage. As Colonel Anstruther, the role which Drew made famous, Francis Bushman does wonderful work. The story is an unusual love interest wherein Colonel Anstruther's brother officer tries to take from him by unfair means the heart of the girl Anstruther has won. The denouement is reached on the battlefields of Africa, where the English are fighting the Boers.

"Satan Sanderson," in which Orrin Johnson stars at the Strand Friday, became famous when Mrs. Rivers wrote the book, and doubly famous as a play. Mr. Johnson plays a double role in this notable picture.

KEYSTONES, MUTUALS AND GOOD SERIALS AT VAUDETTE.

First-run Mutual dramas of the best, two exciting serials and a number of classy comedies, make up an attractive program at the Vaudette this week.

Monday Roscoe Arbuckle, "Keystone Fatty," appears in a two-reel riot, "Fido's Tintype Tangle," in which Roscoe employs his lively little pet terrier to good effect. Francella Billington also is booked Monday in "Tangled Paths," a two-reel Majestic drama.

Aeroplanes, submarines and many other interesting inventions are being used to film "The Romance of Elaine," the popular Pathe serial. Tuesday's installment at the Vaudette is a corker. Pearl White and Lionel Barrymore are, of course, the stars.

Two other great features are booked for Tuesday: "When the Tide Came In," a two-reel Kaybee drama, and "Man's Genesis," a Biograph film in which Mae Marsh, who made a wonderful reputation in "The Birth of a Nation," takes the lead.

A two-reel drama, "The Phantom Extra," starring Louise Glaum and Richard Stanton; "The Straw Man," a Majestic drama, and "Outcasts of Society," made by the Thanhauser company, are on Wednesday's program.

Vivian Rich, the beautiful brunette who has won fame with the Mutual companies, appears Thursday in "The Newer Way," a two-reel American drama. Other stars Thursday are Elsie DeWolf in "The Pretender," a two-reel Reliance drama, and "Billie's Rescue," a Majestic farce.

Another installment of "The Diamond From the Sky," the Flying A serial, is at the Vaudette Friday, starring Lottie Pickford and Irving Cummings. On the same day pretty little Dorothy Gish is seen in "The Little Catamount," a Majestic mountain story.

Another of the Helen Holmes railroad romances is on the program Saturday. It is "The Fate of Number One." Clara Williams and Margaret Gibson are also stars Saturday in "When Love Leaves."

MARGUERITE CLARK AT GRAND IN A BRAND-NEW FEATURE.

Love, adventure, moral, and a bit of everything else that interests people who have clean red blood and who want entertainment that is to the point without the padding, is the makeup of the trio of features that will be offered this week at the Grand. There is nothing on the program that has ever been seen in Atlanta before, and as a matter of information, there is not a picture on the program that can be seen anywhere in the world before it has been released to the Grand.

Marguerite Clark is perhaps the best known and best liked of the stars who will appear during the week, but Edna Mayo is going to make her first local appearance in a big feature. Ina Claire will appear for the second time in screen history and Carlyle Blackwell will return to the camera acting field along with other real players.

The first two days of the week will bring Marguerite Clark in a Daniel Frohman production of Edith Ellis Furness' "Seven Sisters." Suppose there were four marriagable daughters in your family and the youngest insisted on snatching away her elder sister's matrimonial opportunities? That's the story. Miss Clark simply flits through the scenes, now gay and flippant, now serious and flippant, again mischievous and hoydenish. Yet in all her appearances she is irresistible.

Edna Mayor, in her first big feature in Atlanta, is the attraction Wednesday and Thursday. "The Blindness of Virtue," an Essanay production with Miss Mayo as the star and Bryant Washburn at the head of a fine supporting company, will entertain hundreds of Atlanta people. The play is a question. It has been condemned, and it has been indorsed. In some places it has been prohibited and in others the authorities have tried hard to hold the play over and get parents interested.

On Friday and Saturday the many who admire Carlyle Blackwell will flock to the Grand to see his hero support to Ina Claire in the Lasky production, "The Puppet Crown," a story of a rich young American and a royal princess. It is a story of the tiniest kingdom in Europe, and the prettiest princess.

THREE ATLANTA FAVORITES AND SCENE FROM ROMANCE PLAY. Mary Pickford is at the Montgomery in "Tess of the Storm Country" Wednesday and Thursday, and "The Eagle's Mate" Friday and Saturday. At the top, right, is Edna Mayo, star in "The Blindness of Virtue," at the Grand Wednesday and Thursday. William Oldknow, the Atlanta man, in a comedy, at the Alpha Tuesday, is shown in the center, and below is a scene from "Graustark," at the Alamo No. 2 Wednesday.

"ACROSS THE PACIFIC" ONE OF BEVERAL VICTORIA FILMS

The Victoria theater has arranged three big feature films on its program this week and a number of strong dramas and entertaining comedies.

Monday there will be shown the World Film feature, "When It Strikes Home," written and produced by Charles K. Harris and starring Grace Washburn, Edwin August and Muriel Ostriche. It is in five splendid acts, a stirring story by the author of "After the Ball" and other famous song hits. The plot is of a rich man's son who marries a dancing girl on a bet, and of the second generation.

"The Reaping," a two-reel Selig drama, is at the Victoria Tuesday, together with "Cartoons in the Kitchen," an Edison comedy; and "A Lily in Bohemia," Vitagraph drama.

That thriller which made your blood jump years ago at the Lyric theater, Charles E. Blaney's success, "Across the Pacific," is at the Victoria Wednesday. The picture play is in five acts, produced by the World Film corporation. From America to the Philippines the action runs, telling how Elsie, Joe Lane's sweetheart, disguised as a volunteer, follows him "across the Pacific" with the aid of Willie Live, a war correspondent, and rescues him at Blockhouse No. 7. "Across the Pacific" is melodrama, but good, clean melodrama that will please everyone who sees it.

Another World Film feature, "The Lure," is at the Victoria Friday. It, too, is in five reels, a story of the underworld. Bob McCauey, celebrated detective, in search of a girl who has been kidnaped and taken to a dive, meets Sylvia, an attractive sales girl, and falls in love with her. She refuses to let him call and he loses sight of her. Sylvia, her job gone, her mother dying for lack of food, calls on a "fine lady" who has offered her employment. In the "lady's" house she is trapped and driven to a life of shame. There Bob, searching for the kidnaped girl, finds her, and thinking this was the reason she refused him denounces her. But Sylvia explains, and after many hair-breadth escapes, Bob rescues her.

ALAMO NUMBER TWO OFFERS GREAT FEATURES THIS WEEK.

Noted feature films will be seen at the Alamo No. 2 this week, including "The Juggernaut," that massive V-L-S-E production which is booked for a return engagement because of hundreds of requests Manager Murray has received.

Monday's picture is "Temper," a three-reel Essanay feature in which Henry B. Walthal and Ruth Stonehouse, two prime favorites with Atlanta movie fans, are the stars.

Tuesday the twelfth episode of "The Goddess" will be shown. This wonderful serial starring Anita Stewart and Earl Williams, was written by Gouverneur Morris and is unique among screen productions. It is shown exclusively at the Alama 2 every Tuesday.

"Graustark" is the feature at the Alamo No. 2 Wednesday. Francis X. Bushman, the matinee idol, is the star, together with Beverly Bayne. The picturization of this romantic novel by George Barr McCutcheon shows all the court intrigue, plot and counterplot, love and adventure, which made the book the best-seller for six seasons.

Dorothy Donnelly is at the Alamo 2 Thursday in "The Thief," the famous play by Henri Bernstein. Dorothy Donnelly made the role of Madam X, the most dramatic woman's part of the modern stage. She is the most famous Madam who ever appeared and in "The Thief" she has such another opportunity to grip the audience.

"The Juggernaut" has been seen in Atlanta before, but it appears the local fans can't get enough of it. Many requests have been made of Manager Murray to book it again, and he has arranged to do so Friday. Those who have not seen this exciting feature in which a whole railroad train plunges off a bridge, will not miss it this time.

MOVIE EXHIBITORS WHO ADVERTISE SHOWS WIN

So Says Publicity Expert for Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc.

B. Lee Smith, manager of the publicity department of the Atlanta branch of the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc., has written the following article for The Journal on "Why Motion Picture Exhibitors Should Advertise Business."

When the motion picture exhibitor realizes the value of advertising and places a systematic campaign, just as other concerns of a commercial nature have builded by publicity, the industry will then take its place in the front ranks of commerce that the enormous investments and expenditures of the producer and exhibitor alike would justify.

In the first place, the exhibitor should let the public know that these pictures are to be seen first at his house only. He should advertise this fact and keep it ever before the public. When a production of unusual merit is released, he should double his space, calling especial attention to this particular feature and the actors who participate in it.

The motion picture fan keeps fully up with the times on the subject of plays and players, and it is a fact that thousands of them can give more information as regards actors and the different producing companies than the exhibitor himself. The exhibitor keeps in close touch with his own releases, giving little time and attention to others, unless the case be one of unusual interest, while the fan is interested alike in all actors and producers.

Of course they have their favorites, but they are interested in motion pictures to the extent that they read the newspapers, magazines and bill boards, never letting an opportunity pass to gain information on the subject. Take a gathering of women, for instance, and often the conversation will turn to motion pictures within five minutes after the meeting, and two-thirds of the time spent together is taken up in the discussion of plays and players of the silent drama.

The future will demonstrate that the motion picture exhibitor who plans and executes a systematic campaign of advertising will be the one who plays to the largest business and makes the greatest success.

It matters not how far time has removed you from childhood, you will never forget the thrill produced by the big circus poster when it made its appearance, and today, as then, you will stop and read the posters fo the motion picture, and unconsciously be moved to see that particular picture, for some scene will appeal and touch the chord that impels you to seek the house that shows it.

The combination of newspaper and poster advertising, carried out consistently, will pay larger dividends than any other one thing next to the excellence of the pictures and the comfort of the house.

The Atlanta district is next in importance to New York, and it is here the great opportunity of consistent advertising is overlooked, not that the exhibition is not as fully alive, but because of the many duties that fall to his lot, he has not taken the time to go into the matter fully and determine the great benefits to be derived.

PAMPERED SOCIETY GIRL HEROINE OF PATHE FILM

Pathe's "Who Pays?" a drama of the week, "Today and Tomorrow," is a record of procrastination.

"Do it now" was a phrase that was as meaningless to Julia Monroe as was the word necessity. Rich, wilful, spoiled, she knew time only as a tedious something that was to be spent as amusingly as her extravagant fancy dictated. When love came, it made but one change—her time became to her a precious gift to be spent delightfully in her lover's presence.

Trouble came in the form of old Monroe's discontented employes. They grumbled and fretted in a way that was a warning to their employer. He sent Lee Payne, his daughter's lover, to the city to get food, and get it quickly. In the city Lee met Julia, and when she heard of his mission she disregarded its importance as she always did anything that stood between her and her pleasure. The minutes grew to hours, and still he petulantly used all of her charm and power to keep him by side. Torn between love and duty, he betrayed his trust when he needed most to be firm. In vain the men at the oil works waited for the promised food. Night came. Led on by a trouble-making malcontent they broke loose and tried to vent their anger on the employer they believed had lied to them. One spark of flame where it would do the most harm destroyed his plant. Morning, and the arrival of an armed guard were the only things that stood between the oil king and the Great Beyond. The "reliable" employe was cast out, a stigma forever on his name, and the girl realized too late the part she'd played in blighting her future happiness and his.

Pathe has acquired the exclusive picture rights to another William J. Locke novel, "Simon the Jester." Its production will feature Edwin Arden.

NO MORE MOVIES FOR FORSYTH THIS SUMMER

The Forsyth theater is dark this week and will be until vaudeville returns to its own, about the latter part of August or the first of September.

The exact opening date depends more on the situation in other cities than it does here. When the Forsyth closed this summer, it was doing a land-office business, but the big acts which Atlanta likes refused to come this far south for only one week. And there were no other southern cities which could support them.

The Forsyth management has refused to substitute poorer class of vaudeville and after experimenting with the movies for two weeks without any phenomenal success, decided to give the theater itself a vacation until the regular theatrical season.

Chicks Tie Up Game in Eighth, Win in Ninth

Crackers Get 3-Run Lead in First Inning and Look Like Winners Until Thompson Loses Control in Eighth

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 24.—Mike Andreen, hitting for the ejected Jimmie Keeley, ripped out a homer to left field with none out in the ninth, and fittingly brought to a close as stormy an afternoon as has passed at Russwood in a day. Memphis as a result trimmed the Crackers, score 4 to 3. At time that Andreen's great blow arrived, Keeley, Williams and Jenkins were watching the game from the "outside" and Billy Smith was seated in the stands. With Chesterfield bubbling over it is doubtful if enough players would have left to finish the game had it gone many more innings. Atlanta practically presented it to Memphis through the extreme generosity of her twirlers who were a trifle wilder than the proverbial March hare. And at the same time three runs which the Crackers scored in the opening inning were the result of a high wind that blew two easy outs into safeties.

McDonald first up cut a single to left and was sacrificed to second. Lee lifted a fly to right for what looked to be a certain catch, but the wind carried the ball far to the right and after Stewart, cuffed a 50-yard sprint he dropped the ball. Moran followed with a fly of the same sort and McDonald and Lee scored. Manning fanned but Kaufman drove a single to left scoring Moran. Keeley was on the job thereafter and the Crackers failed to even raise a rumpus.

The big noise arrived in the eighth when Thompson walked Allison. With one ball on Cruthers he was yanked and Perry hurried in. Perry immediately filled the bases and was pulled out, Day entering. His first offering was a wild pitch that scored Pete. He then decided to walk Lord to get to Schlei who forced Cruthers at the plate. Eibl also hit to Williams who threw low to Jenkins. This latter juggled the peg and Stewart was called safe. The row then started and lasted for fully 15 minutes. When Keeley took his turn at bat in the ninth he turned around to object to a called strike, but before he could say anything he was ordered off the field. Andreen then entered with the rap, and all was over.

Ed Manning, Cracker Outfielder, Has Batted His Way To the Lead of Swatsmiths of the Southern League

Capital City Club Plans State Golf Tournament

An invitation golf golf tournament looking toward the determining of a state champion in individual competition as well as a team champion is the plan of the Capital City club, of Atlanta, for their Brookhaven golf course. This plan proposes that the tournament be staged over the Brookhaven course the first or second week in October. Within a few days invitations will be mailed out to golfers throughout the state to enter this tourney and to take part in the organization of a state golf association.

There are some eight or ten golf clubs in Georgia at present, including the four in this city, one in Macon, Augusta, Savannah, Athens, Rome, Albany and Athens, and possibly others. Already no less than four states of this immediate section have organized state associations. Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina and Alabama all have state associations, the latter having just completed organization at the Roebuck invitation tournament, which came to a close Saturday afternoon. No state in the south has taken up the game more enthusiastically than Georgia, nor can any state boast a larger delegation of high-class players than Georgia, and the movement should meet with the hearty approval of players from all sections of the state.

As stated above, the Capital City club proposes to stage this tournament along about the first or second week in October. The Atlanta Athletic club, the Druid Hills Golf club, and the Ansley Park Golf club are expected to heartily join in the plan, and, furthermore, invitations will be extended to all clubs in the state as well as to golfers in cities and towns where there are no clubs. By October 1 the Capital City club will have completed the new club house now under course of construction. It will accordingly be well prepared to act as host to such a gathering of golfers as is expected to accept the invitation to play here, and to take part in the organization of a state association. A handsome cup will be offered for the winner of this tournament, and he will be heralded as the state champion. And also a cup will be offered for the winning team.

Meantime the Capital City club is planning a few other stunts in a golfing way for the benefit more especially of its own members. Beginning on September 1, the club will dedicate its new eighteen-hole course. At that time a tournament for the club membership will be staged and a handsome trophy offered by President Ed H. Inman for the winner, who will also earn the title of club champion.

Beginning with September 1, the club proposes to accept both lady members and junior members for golfing privileges. During the past such memberships have not been accepted because of the fact that the course included but nine holes, and was therefore limited in its capacity. In spite of this fact, however, the course has proven a very popular one. For instance, in the tournament for the F. E. Mackie trophy the qualifying round for which was played on Saturday no less than four flights of sixteen players qualified.

With the addition of the extra nine holes, the popularity of the course is bound to increase by leaps and bounds. The addition was very carefully laid out, with the aid of several experts, and for more than a year "Scotty" McKenzie, professional at the course, and the golf committee have been working diligently to put the course in the very best shape possible. By September 1 it is expected that the full course will be in excellent shape, and it will compare favorably with any course in the south.

Manager Billy Smith Was on Point of Turning Slugger Back to Browns at One Time

By Innis Brown

Every time Ed Manning steps up to the plate and slams a drive to the outfield for a hit, or beats out a slow roller in the infield, Manager Billy Smith shudders to think how near he came to turning Sir Edward back to the St. Louis Browns early in the season. For it sis a fact that he came within an ace of sending the former Auburn football and baseball star back to Manager Branch Rickey not long after the season opened.

But now? Well, Manning is doing nothing more pretentious these days than leading the Southern league in hitting. The latest figures submitted to the players of the league show that Manning has built up an average of .321 for games played through Wednesday of the past week, and that carries a lead of 2 points over Briscoe Lord, the portly pilot of the Memphis Chicks.

The fact that Manning is clubbing away with the best in the league is nothing new. Atlanta fans know that for some time he has been swatting the ball with a vengeance, and that when he isn't slamming it on a line to the outfield he is dumping down teasing bunts, or dragging slow rollers past the pitcher's box and beating them out for hits. But this stuff about his being sent back to the Browns has at least one kink to it, that local fandom knews nothing of.

It was along about the middle of May that Manager Smith was sorely puzzled over just what to do with the talent he had on hand. He had tried Manning out at second early in the spring, and he didn't seem to fit in there exactly. Also he had worked him in the outfield. About this time Billy Lee was added to the forces, and Rumler had been sent to the outfield, and Manning brought in for a trial as a flinger.

The club was still holding to Timon Bowden, so that all told there were some five outfielders in sight with Bowden, Moran, Lee, Manning and Rumler. This was entirely too many, and somebody had to be cut off. In fact, it was evident that two men would have to be released, unless some other combination could be worked out. Manager Smith was just on the verge of shipping Manning and Bowden back, keeping Rumler in the outfield with Moran and Lee, using Jenkins and Smith as catchers, with Potts and Tullos to fight it out for third.

However, it soon became apparent that neither Tullos nor Potts would do at third. About this time, Manning confided to Manager Smith his belief that he could cover that third bag satisfactorily. Accordingly he was given a trial. He held down the job for several weeks. His fielding was nothing to enthuse over, but he began to prove very conclusively that he could hammer that baseball, and the fellows who can hit the ball can most always get a job, regardless of whether or not they can do anything else. Eventually Manager Smith decided to bring Rumler in from the outfield to split the receiving work with Jenkins, and it was Manning who was dispatched to the right field berth to fill his place. He has been there since, and will remain there until the end of the season, barring accidents.

But a new angle developed in Manning's case a short time ago. In fact on the last trip of the Lookouts to this city, it was learned that all the time the Crackers were pondering over whether to hold on to Manning, Moose McCormick and his Lookouts were anxiously waiting for a chance to nab him, if waivers were asked on him. Secretary Senter, of the Lookouts, stated that his club was just waiting, and that no pains would have been spared to land the big fellow if the Crackers had made a move to send him back to St. Louis.

Manning is one of the most natural hitters in the Southern league. He stands up to the plate well, takes a healthy cut at the ball, and uses as much snap in his wrists as any batter in the league. Golfers know that it is wrist motion that gives distance to a drive in their game, and the same applies in baseball. Furthermore, Manning is one of the most versatile clubbers in the league. He can swing as hard as any batter in the league, or failing in this method, he can drop down a bunt and leg it to first almost as fast as the best in the league.

Atlantians Win Tennis Honors

Carlton Smith Captures Singles Title in Cotton-States Tourney--He and McMillan Win Doubles

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 24.—Atlanta took all the honors in the Cotton States Tennis Tournament, when Carlton Smith defeated W. V. Bartlett, of Birmingham, in the final round in the singles, and then turned around and, coupled with his partner, Vernon McMillan defeated Brooks and Bartlett in the doubles. The final match being finished at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

The best tennis ever seen on a Birmingham court marked the play in the doubles and a splendid gallery followed all through. The first set in the singles came back strong, taking the next two sets, 6-3 and 9-7. The local players fought their way gamely through the fourth set, winning 6-2. The last set was the best of the match, the Atlantians winning 6-4.

Carlton Smith won permanent possession of the Montgomery Country club cup, having won it three times and Smith and McMillan took a one year lease on the Montgomery cup for the doubles.

Bob Jones Wins Golf Tourney At Birmingham

Atlanta Lad Captures Cup in Invitation Tournament Staged by Roebuck Club--Defeat Birmingham Player in Extra Hole Match

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 24.—Bob Jones, of Atlanta, thirteen years old, won the first flight of the second annual invitation tournament of the Roebuck-Springs Golf and Auto club from William Badham Saturday afternoon, defeating him on the twenty-first green after the longest and most interesting first flight match ever played in Birmingham. The last five holes brought forth several excellent shots which were applauded roundly by the large gallery who followed the golfers from the first tee.

Young Jones was forced to play the three extra holes in par to take the match. One down on the first hole, Badham had to play an uphill game all the way, and when his ball struck in the cup after fifteen foot putts on the twentieth hole, it was thought for a second he had won the match, but the ball bounded and laid dead to the hole for a four, which was just sufficient to halve the hole.

The first round of the match did not bring out very good golf, both players getting into a lot of trouble and putting badly. The second round, however, repaid the gallery for its close attention to the match. Bob Jones had Badham one down practically all the way round, and the players came to the eighteenth green in this position. Badham took the eighteenth with a par four, wnile Jones' second shot went into the bunker and forced him to a six.

The match was ended on the twenty-first green, when Jones pitched a mashie shot almost dead to the hole, and Badham snot short into a trap. Jones was down in two putts for the hole and the match.

This brought to a close one of the most successful tournaments ever held in Birmingham. There were 114 entries from all over the south, and several of the best golfers in the Southern association took part in the tournament.

Birmingham took nineteen of the twenty trophies offered, Knoxville two, New York one, Atlanta one and Nashville one.

George Adair and Robert P. Jones lasted until the semi-finals Saturday morning. Jerry Adair went out in the second round, being defeated by Bob Jones. Robin Adair and C. V. Rainwater defeated W. K. Griffith was also defeated in the second round.

Local golfers and enthusiasts were highly pleased to learn of the fine playing of "Little Bob." The youngster has been playing great golf all this season. He put up a fine showing in the southern championships, and but for a bit of tough luck would have shown even better than he did. He was put out of the championship flight by Commodore Heard. Bob had the bad luck to catch the commodore when the veteran was at the top of his game, and was beaten after doing an 82 for the difficut East Lake course.

But even this was not all. Having been forced into the second flight by his defeat at the hands of Commodore Heard, Bob set out to win the second flight trophy. He worked his way to the final match in this flight, and appeared a good choice to win out, when another player went crazy and beat him out. Young Clark, of Nashville, broke the course record to trim the local lad in that final match.

C. T. Dunham, a comparatively recent addition to the golfing colony here, and an expert, who is qualified to speak from his knowledge of experience, expresses the belief that Bob is the most phenomenal player to be found anywhere, all things considered. This lad of thirteen years is today playing a game that would be a credit to any golfer anywhere. He will be a wonder, if he continues to develop, and improve his game as may reasonably be expected, is what Dunham thinks of him.

Evers and Umps Each Draw Fine

BOSTON, July 24.—Captain John Evers, of the Boston Nationals, and Umpire Quigley were each fined $100 today because of a dispute during the Chicago-Boston baseball game last Thursday when Quigley struck Evers, claiming the Braves' captain had stepped on his foot. According to President Tener, who announced the fines, Evers was penalized for not taking his base when the umpire called four balls, and Quigley for failure to handle the situation properly.

Honie Zimmerman, of the Chicago, team, also was fined $100 for "improper conduct" on the field during the same game. Zimmerman's penalty resulted from remarks he addressed to Umpire Emslie.

Errors by Columbus' Infielders Allow Macon to Score Easy Victory-Series Now Tied

MACON, Ga. July 24.—Until the eighth inning today's game between Columbus and Macon for the South Atlantic league championship was close and hard fought. The Columbus infield blew up then and the locals scored four times on one hit and several errors, Macon winning by a final score of 8 to 3. Chancey hit a home run and two-base hit and walked once in four times at bat. Only fielding of the highest quality prevented more hits from being marked up against Robertson.

The championship series now stands 1 and 1, with two games already tied. Monday the teams play in Columbus.

D. Robertson Proving Star For McGraw

Former Southern Leaguer Fast Becoming One of Giants' Leading Hitters—Has Also Improved His Fielding Wonderfully—Has Regular Job Nailed Down

NEW YORK, July 24.—Down in Marlin last March a baseball writer obtained the briefest interview ever given by John McGraw.

"Tell me," said the chronicler, "what kind of a ball player will Dave Robertson be when he develops, and will he ever develop?"

"Robertson," replied McGraw, "is just as good a ball player as he wants to be—right now."

"You said a mouthful," said the scribe. "I get your meaning the same as if you told it to me in many words. Much obliged."

And forthwith the scribe wrote a couple of columns about Robertson.

If Dave Robertson is just as good a ball player as he wants to be, he certainly must want to be a mighty good ball player now.

In the last two weeks the Virginia medical student has gone to the front rapidly. And now, all of a sudden, a lot of people have discovered that he possesses unusual talent.

Robertson can hit. He can hit 'em far, and he can beat 'em out. His fielding, which has hitherto been rather amateurish, has greatly improved. He has a great arm, although he doesn't know how to use it to the best advantage. But he is learning. Ambition has apparently been awakened in this young man, and he is trying to make a serious business of baseball. There are many famous doctors, but few wonderful ball players. Robertson hopes to be a great ball player first and a great doctor afterward.

HUGGINS PASSED HIM UP.

Last spring Miller Huggins, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, had the pick of the New York outfielders in exchange for his claim on Pitcher Poll Perritt. He picked Bob Bescher, the highest salaried fly chaser of seven then under contract with the Giants. Bescher is batting .260 with the Cardinals. Robertson is doing .317 for the Giants.

When Huggins visited McGraw in Marlin to make the trade Robertson was among those he treated. He declared that he would quit the game sooner than play in St. Louis. But Huggins did not see any possibilities in Robertson. Hug had played with Bescher in Cincinnati, and felt that Sir Robert was just the man he needed to replace Lee Magee.

When the season opened Jim Thorpe was assigned to right field for the Giants. Jim failed, and then Jack Murray went to work. Murray was distinguished. Thorpe and Murray were later turned loose.

"I would have played Robertson from the start," says McGraw, "but he came up from the south with a sore arm. Even when he did get in the game he was handicapped in throwing. Davy has a wonderful arm. He had it when he was a pitcher in the Tidewater league in Virginia, and, if he had not hurt his shoulder playing football that winter I believe he would have been a wonderful pitcher. But football ruined his arm for that. He always could hit, and he is getting faster on the bases since he is learning how to utilize his speed."

McGraw discovered Robertson as a hitter more than two years ago. One day Wilbert Robinson, who had charge of morning practice at the Polo grounds, reported that Robertson, hitting against fast ball pitching in the morning, had driven a fly ball into the left center field seats. The present manager of the Dodgers was amazed.

It is not likely that Robertson will ever make such a long hit against real pitching, but that blow proved his driving ability. When he "gets a halt" now he can rule a ball as far as anybody in the National league.

IMPROVES IN BUNTING.

Recently Davy has worked hard to perfect himself in the art of bunting. He has wonderful speed from the home plate to first base. Ball players assert that he can outsprint any man in the league over the first half of the course.

Versatility in hitting is one reason for Ty Cobb's success. Robertson is trying to copy Cobb in some respects. A batter who keeps the infielder guessing as to whether he intends to hit a ball hard or bunt has a decided advantage over a straight hitter. If the infield moves in, he can drive past the fielders; if it moves back, he can bunt.

Aptitude in bunting unexpectedly is raising Robertson's batting average. In a recent double-header Davy went to bat twelve times. Two of his hits were bunts that he deliberately put to first base. He scored the winning run in the first game after hitting a triple, and the winning run in the second game after bunting safely.

In twelve tries the Virginian made five hits. Furthermore, 18,000 spectators were ready to swear that he defeated two other bunts in the first game. Opposing pitchers made both those plays on him and Emslie called him out. One decision in particular let Emslie in for severe censure.

It is well for the Giants that Robertson has gone to the front at this time, as Shortstock has slumped until he is hitting below .200, and Burns is doing only .270. Such pitching as the Giants have been favored with since the torrid weather set in, and a better outfield batting punch, will soon bring results. It has, in fact, done so already.

Start Your FORD Or Any Other Light Car From The SEAT

With the famous Sandbo Starter—a wonderful invention—the starter that always starts, winter or summer, no matter what the temperature. Sold on a guarantee to start any motor that can be started by hand cranking — for Fords, Maxwells, Metzes, Saxons, Studebaker Fours and all light cars.

Throw Away Your Crank

Attach the Odd-shaped Wheel—then you can start your car from the seat every time. In one revolution this odd-shaped wheel gains six inches over the ordinary crank. That's where we have the big leverage—the increased speed over hand cranking—that's what makes the the logical starter. It "turns the motor over" and turns it faster than anyone can possibly spin it by hand. It gives the engine a complete revolution.

Paige Erecting New Factories

Enlargement of Plant Now Well Under Way—Increased Demand Necessitates Completion Immediately

The enlargement of the factory of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company, announced some time ago as a step necessary to meet increased demand, is now well under way, construction having been started on the big addition which will double the capacity of the plant. The building is being rushed to completion as fast as possible.

It is already apparent that this step was absolutely imperative, as the prospects for the new season just opening are such that the Paige company believe its resources will be strained to the utmost. Two announcements for 1916 were recently made—the launching of the new Paige five-passenger Light Six ("Six 36") and the issue of a new edition of the Big Six ("Six-46"), the seven-passenger model. The response was immediate and of such a nature that the officials are congratulating themselves on the steps already taken to increase their output.

"We believe," says Harry M. Jewett, president of the Paige company, "we are in for our biggest and most profitable year. While we have reduced the price of our Six Six $100, and are offering a new Light Six, a five-passenger car, that is a regular Paige through and through, we do not attribute the immediate interest shown in these cars entirely to the matter of values offered. There is every indication throughout the country that the year is to be a prosperous one. This is due to the splendid condition of the farmer, the fact that general business is, and has been for some time, on the upgrade and to the supreme confidence of the people in the ability of the powers that be at Washington to keep us out of serious international difficulties. It's going to be a big year for every manufacturer who has the right product at the right price."

Goodyear Tires Still Winning

Goodyear Cord tires have just figured honorably and conspicuously in two more events of importance in the motor world. Goodyear cords were the equipment of the Packard Twin Six that established some new records for stock cars under touring conditions at the Chicago Speedway last Saturday.

With seven passengers, top and windshield up and Ralph DePalma at the wheel, a big Twin Six flashed around the track at 69.8 miles an hour for ten ten miles. The test was timed and verified by officials of the Chicago Automobile club and the A. A. A. and the result is heralded as a new world's record.

Another Twin Six, two passenger, top and windshield down, did ten miles at 72.7 miles an hour—another record. Packard officials present were enthusiastic over the life and performance of the tires, which gave absolutely no trouble.

Another Goodyear cord tire performance of note was in connection with the Marmon car recently driven from Indianapolis to the coast—a trip in which many condition were encountered that were a real test of tires and their ability to withstand hard usage. At the conclusion of the trip the following telegram was sent from San Francisco to the Marmon factory:

"Came through O. K. Distance covered 3,200 miles. Original tires on car. Only one tire change necessary, that on account of picking up nail on roads. Tires in perfect condition and good for return trip. Show practically no wear."

"These tests," says James E. Taylor, Goodyear branch manager "back up our contention that in the Goodyear cord tire we have achieved a great triumph out of our experience of eleven years of cord tire building."

King Motor Car Rex of All Autos

DETROIT, Mich., July 24.—Although the King Motor Car company is not making a "mid-season announcement," as they term it, they have just notified their sales organization of an eight-cylinder, three-passenger roadster to be marketed in conjunction with their touring car. This roadster, painted a crimson lake touched off with black is mounted on the regular King eight 124 inch wheelbase chassis and has a three-passenger body.

The car is particularly roomy for passengers and has large carrying space in deck.

While the King Motor Car company is discounting announcements at a time that they claim the pulse of the purchasing public should not be disturbed, it has just come to light that improvements have been made from time to time in the King eight. The bore of the motor was increased from 3 3-4 to 3 7-8 inches. Larger valve ports are used in the present King eight motor than in the motor when the car was first announced, also a larger intake manifold and a large and improved type Zenith carburetor.

Officials of the King Motor Car company claim that with these improvements, no change which would better the King product could be made. The changes in the motor cut down the profit of the King factory, but it was decided to continue the car at the same flat price of $1,350.

Experts Join Knight Forces

The Willys-Knight division of the Willys-Overland company has been further strengthened by the addition of two men widely known throughout the automobile trade.

Of these two men John F. Toole will look after the Willys-Knight interests throughout the south, making his headquarters in Atlanta. Mr. Toole is thoroughly posted in Knight motor construction, having gained his knowledge through his long connection with the F. B. Stearns company. He resigned the position of Atlanta branch manager of the Locomobile company to take up his new duties for the Willys-Knight.

The other recent addition to the Willys-Knight force is Mr. A. W. Barber, one of the veterans of the automobile industry. Mr. Barber who is widely known, was for years prominently identified with the Stevens-Duryea company and at the time of the dissolution of that organization was the San Francisco branch manager.

J. P. Headly Gains Rapid Promotion With Maxwell

There have been many successes in the automobile industry; many have risen from mediocre positions to places of high authority and prestige since the inception of the motor car, but few there have been, who in the space of one short year have climbed from the lowest rung of the sales ladder to the highly responsible post in the sales organization of one of the largest automobile manufacturers.

That is what James P. Headley, of the Maxwell, has done. A little over a year ago he became connected with the Maxwell organization as salesman in the state of Georgia and now he is announced as assistant sales supervisor of the zone number two of the Maxwell Motor Sales corporation. His territory covers all eastern states south of Washington, D. C., with twelve district men and several hundred dealers upon his sales staff.

Headley, who is a thoroughly experienced automobile man, is of southern birth and possesses those sterling qualities of frankness, squareness and loyalty that go so far toward making and holding friends of worthy products.

His record in Georgia and a part of South Carolina, in the face of the worst business depression this country has ever seen, is considered nothing short of phenomenal and it has served to bring to the attention of the big chiefs in Detroit the fact that in Headley, they had a man capable of big work.

His old dealers are rejoicing with his friends in Atlanta that he is not taken entirely away from them, while his new lieutenants are congratulating themselves upon the possession of such a splendid man as their manager. His headquarters will still be in Atlanta, but his new work will keep him constantly upon the road.

In his appointment of C. P. Hennessey to fill the vacancy at the Atlanta warehouse, caused by his own promotion, Headley has given to this territory a man who has every quality to successfully replace him. Henessey is already well known and well liked by the southern automobile trade, both for his personality and his ability, and with the assistance of R. W. Little the Maxwell interests in this section are well prepared for.

Headley and Hennessey have been spending several days together since the recent Detroit convention, perfecting plans for the promotion of sales following the 1916 announcement, which it is claimed, will cause another Maxwell sensation among the dealers and motorists.

SOLON COLLIER OPPOSES SPECIAL TAX ON MOTOR CARS

BY D H. COLLIER.
(Represen a ive From Stephens County, Toccoa, Ga.)

In beginning, I want to say that I don't own an automobile myself, and the chances are that I will never own one, on account of being a poor man, but I do think that we ought to treat all justly and right, the rich as well as the poor. I do not see how we can do this by putting the special tax on all the automobiles.

We all know the automobile is the forerunner of the Good Roads movement in Georgia, which has been of more benefit to the farmers than all else combined for the last fifty years, for the reason that we can carry at least three times more with our teams over the road than we could a very few years ago. Of course, automobiles are not entirely the cause of this—it is the careful inspection in the building of the good roads in Georgia, and not only building but maintaining. The automobile has a tendency to better the road instead of cutting it like the narrow tires do, and cause the water to wash them away.

I was going down Monday morning, and I had a conversation with Dr. "A." He told me that he always dreaded to see summer time come on, on account of having to drive his horse so hard; that whenever he arrived at the home of his patient he was so fatigued he had to rest before he could treat his patient. Now, he says, it is a pleasure. He can drive his car to his patient, his mind perfectly composed, and treat the patient immediately after arriving, and he says he thinks he has saved quite a number of lives by so doing. He also thinks that the automobile has served the question of living in the country and still having a physician within reach of a call, as the automobile has made the distance of ten or fifteen miles as near as two miles would be with a team of horses.

I also think that owing to the difference between automobiles and other vehicles that the ad valorem tax ought to satisfy the state without the special tax.

The fact that automobiles have led the roads into remote rural districts has increased the real estate in these sections in value from 50 to 100 per cent. You get to considering the number of automobiles used in the state of Georgia, and what they cost, and then compare the increase in real estate they produce, and this should balance and equalize all tax without this special tax.

Apperson Makes "Chummy Car"

First Innovation for 1916 Season in the New Auto With Four Passengers Sitting Together

To Apperson Brothers Automobile company belongs the honor of bringing out the first practical innovation of the 1916 season—a real four-passenger roadster which is very aptly designated the "chummy car," as all four passengers are seated in a single compartment.

It is a radical departure from the conventional type of roadster, the seating arrangement being unique.

The driver's seat is divided from that of his companion by an aisle-way, while immediately back of these seats are two cornering seats with ample foot room in the aisle.

There are only two doors, entrance being had to the "chummy seats" through the passage way. The entire absence of mechanical contrivances or folding seats, augurs well for the success of this innovation and the "chummy seats" are said to be fully as comfortable as the rear seat in a touring car.

The problem presented by the top is solved in a very skillful manner. It is made to fit snugly along the backs of the rear seats and protects all four passengers completely, while, when folded, if it is desired, the dust cover may be extended as a deck over the rear seats, protecting them from dust and giving the appearance of an ordinary two-passenger roadster.

A wealth of space has been provided for the storage of luggage and a much easier riding position is claimed for the occupants of the "chummy seats" than the rear seat of a touring car, as they are located well forward of the rear wheels.

Both eight and six-cylinder chassis have been provided for the new roadster and the long wheel base—128 inches—and pleasing lines give it a very prepossessing appearance.

Rich Offer for Gotch-Stecher Match

Business men of Hastings, Neb., are said to be trying to raise a purse of $25,000 for a wrestling championship match between Frank Gotch and Joe Stecher.

Stecher is the chap said to have the most powerful pair of legs in the business. He wins his bouts with a body and scissors hold.

Gotch has been quoted as saying he would return to the game and wrestle Stecher if guaranteed $25,000, win, lose or draw.

A motorcycle club is being formed among the riding population of Joliet, Ill. The club will be affiliated with the F. A. M.

Police Commissioner Steves, of San Antonio, Tex., has purchased 8 motorcycles to supplement his mounted squad. The motorcycles will be distributed at eight separate stations, and will be used to answer hurry calls.

Mike Donlin Hero In Picture Play

NEW YORK, July 24.—The Arrow Film corporation, of New York City, has completed arrangements with Mike Donlin whereby the famous son of swat will be featured in a five-part photoplay entitled "Right Off the Bat."

The scenario, which is by Albert S. Le Vino, follows closely the big moments in Donlin's life, from the days when he was a small town lad, crazy about baseball, to the time when he achieved his ambition and became a Giant.

Ford Owners to Get Rebate on August 1

A great many Ford owners in this vicinity will receive a rebate of $50 from the Ford Motor company, on August 1. In a number of instances these owners have declared their intention of adding $25 to the rebate check, for the purpose of purchasing the Gray & Davis starting-lighting system.

This plan will result in adding still greater efficiency to the Ford car; at the same time presenting a good investment, as there is no doubt but what the addition of electric equipment greatly enhances the intrinsic value of the car.

French Soldier Requests Hupmobile Catalogue

An unusual request for a catalogue has been received by the Hupp Motor Car company, of Detroit, Mich., from a soldier at the French front. Soldier-Hupmobile enthusiast does not mention his location, probably because of military orders, but gives his division. The Hupp company forwarded the catalogue, requesting that if same was received that the company be informed of the fact. The inquiry was received at the Hupp factory, July 6, from Second Lieutenant S. F. French, Fifty-first battery, Second brigade, R. S. A., Sixth division, B. E. F., France.

Alabama Man Tells Of Hupp's Durability

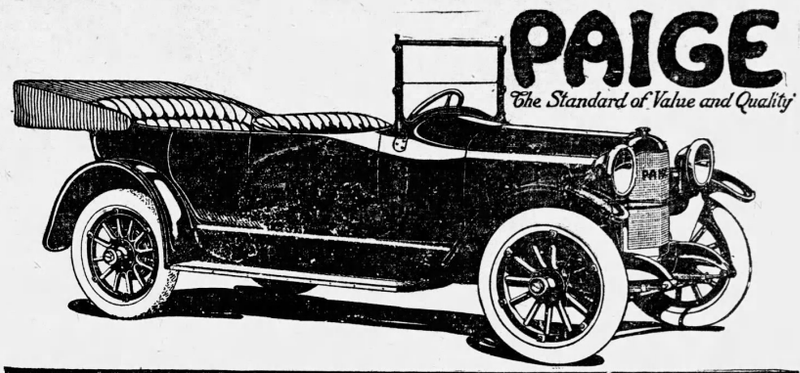
The durability and efficiency of the Hupmobile is shown in a letter just received from M. L. Mount, Brantley, Ala., in which he says:

"I have just finished my tour in Florida and Georgia of 1,800 miles, and want to compliment the Hupmobile for its efficiency. I have owned it just two years, but I have cared for it well, and have made this trip through all classes of roads. I have not had any trouble whatever. My car gives the most excellent services that one could ask for."

Britain's Hupp Agent Is Officer at Front

The British admiralty has been in such great need of all types of water crafts that owners of private yachts, in many instances, have turned their vessels over to the government for naval use. One of these cases is that of Harry Whiting, of London, whose private yacht Aurora is now in regular use for coast guard work.

Whiting has been made a lieutenant in the British navy. In times of peace Mr. Whiting is head of Whiting Ltd., 324 Euston road, London, distributors for Hupmobiles in the British Isles.



A NEW LIGHT SIX $1095
Every Inch a PAIGE

HERE you see illustrated the new Paige Six "36."

Here you see the latest addition to a distinguished line of cars—a true Paige every inch of it—a car built to realize an ideal—a car that must not and cannot be judged from the standpoint of its astounding price alone.

When we say that this new Paige Six "36," has been built to realize an ideal we are speaking accurate, literal truth.

From the very beginning it has been the unfaltering purpose and policy of the Paige Company to build high class, dependable motor cars.

It has been the purpose and policy of the Paige Company to achieve a Standard of Quality and Value—not merely a standard of Price.

If you happen to know an owner of our larger, seven-passenger Six "46," you know precisely what we mean when we speak of Value and Quality.

All of the careful manufacturing, all of the painstaking attention to detail, all of the sturdy, reliable qualities which characterize the larger Six and have made it a pre-eminent Six of the year will be found in this newer and smaller five-passenger Paige Six "36."

The New Paige Six "36" Is Here

We realize that there are a vast number of people who do not require a large seven-passenger car.

But all of these people want a "Six," for they know that this is the day of the "Six" in quality cars.

Furthermore, they want a "roomy" car—a luxurious car—a "smart" car—an economical car.

In a word, there is an enormous demand for just such a car as the new Paige Six "36"

Glance at the illustration on this page and you will see that—from the radiator to tire carrier—this car is a five-passenger reproduction of the larger Six "46."

This body design has proved to be a sensation of the year No amount of money could buy more graceful lines or smarter appearance.

Inside the car you will find a great, big, comfortable tonneau and a broad driver's seat with upholstery of genuine leather which means ease and freedom from crowding for all of the five passengers.

Like the larger Six "46" you will find this car equipped with the world-famous Gray & Davis starting and lighting system.

Like the larger Six "46" you will find this car equipped with cantilever springs which insure easy, comfortable riding no matter what the road conditions may be—a velvety acting cork insert multiple disc clutch—force feed lubrication system and the unequaled Rayfield carburetor.

When you raise the hood of this car, you will see an accessible, powerful six cylinder motor—3"x5"—which is a crowning achievement in motor construction.

We might attempt to tell you about the performance of this remarkable power plant, but we much prefer to have you ride in the car and establish the facts for yourself.

Then, you will realize what true six-cylinder Flexibility and Power really mean.

For the first time, perhaps, you will experience the indescribable sensation of riding in a car that is practically throttle controlled—a car that travels smoothly at a slow walking pace or the speed of the winds without change from high gear.

Low First Cost "Upkeep" Expense

Best of all, this is a car that any man can afford to drive. The Six "36" weighs but 2600 pounds and is equipped with oversize 4-inch tires. With this car you can enjoy true six-cylinder motor comfort without the penalty of excessive "upkeep" expense.

Space will not permit us to name even one-half the surprisingly good features embodied in the latest Paige.

But—accept our assurance—there is a tremendous surprise in store for you when you first inspect this car.

Then—and only then—you will appreciate what a truly great achievement it represents.

Then, we predict, your first query will be—"How is it possible to build such a car for $1095?"

Cobb Leading By 70 Points

Tiger Star Has Wide Margin Over E. Collins, Who Is Next Among the Regulars

Of course Ty Cobb is still leading the batters of the American league. This was to be expected. But the surprise offered by average for the past week is the margin by which Tyrus tops the list. He has a lead of exactly seventy points over Eddie Collins, who comes second among the regulars in the league. Eddie Cicotte, and Babe Ruth, a couple of hurlers drop in between Cobb with his .408 and Collins with his .338, but neither has played in as many as 25 games.

Cobb's batting mark ha dropped one point from what it was one week ago. But if he has slipped even one point in his hitting, his base running continues on the upgrade. The Peach swiped 60 bases for games played through Wednesday of the past week. He lacks but one of the big stolen sack many bases as both Fritz Maiel and Eddie Collins together, this pair holding second and third places respectively in this department of play. The Yankee speed merchant has swiped 37 while Collins is credited with 24.

The batting of the Detroit Tigers is the most striking feature of figures on batting of the league. It is quite evident that a lack of pitching is making the going hard for the Jungaleers, because they are slugging for a team average of .272, including pitchers and all. They stand fifth in fielding, just four points behind the leaders in this department, which ought to prove very conclusively that pitching is what Jennings needs to land his bunch home in front. In addition to Cobb, who is leading, Veach Crawford, and Catcher Baking, Veach Crawford, and Catcher Baking, are batting over .300 while the other regulars are well up in the list.

American league players appear to overtop the National leaguers in all department of offensive play, save one. They lead in runs scored, hits made, total base hitting, batting mark, and stolen bases. But the National league boasts the leader in home runs. In fact no player in the American league had hit more than four circuit wallops this year.

Some three or four have this distinction, including Pitcher "Babe" Ruth of the Red Sox. Luts Boone of the Yankees, who is hitting only .204 also has four homers to his credit.

Manning Leads League Batters

Cracker Outfielder Crowds Past Bris Lord—Lee Is Fourth, Team as Whole Weak With Stick

By virtue of the hard and timely clouting which he did during the closing days of the recent home stay of the Crackers, Ed Manning boosted his batting average up until he now stands at the top of the hitters of the Southern league, or at any rate for games played through Wednesday of the past week. Up to that date Manning was hitting for an average of .321, having a margin of two points over Briscoe Lord, in second place.

Doubtless for the first time this season the Crackers can boast of two swatters whose combined averages total higher than any other pair representing another club in the league. Manning, with .321, and Billy Lee, with .310, are one point better than Bris Lord and Press Cruthers. Lord is two points shy of Manning's mark, while Cruthers has a lead of one point over Lee. In spite of the fact that Manning and Lee show a better total than any other two sluggers in the league, the Crackers are far down in the list in team hitting. Roy Moran, with .279, has an average for the local outfield better than .300, and Jenkins is well up, with .279. But the rest of the Smithies range far down in the list. The infield is woefully shy on stick work.

Figuras as a whole show, however, that heavy hitting is at a premium in the league this season. Only seven players are hitting as much as .300, and only one, Manning, is over the .320 mark. Compared with the heavy sticking of past seasons, this does not stack up very formidable. Paulet continues his good work for the Vols, leading in total bases as well as in the highest number of hits. Reilly, with 56, leads in runs scored. Dolly Stark, with 28, has stolen the most bases. Red McDermott's 6 home runs top all others.

Daubert Holds Tight to Lead

Dodger Star Has Margin of 12 Points Over Doyle—Three Giants Hitting Over .300

Efforts of the other heavy hitters of the National league have failed again to dislodge Jake Daubert from the league leadership in hitting. The Dodger captain continues to lead the field, and for games played through Wednesday of the past week, he has a margin of 12 points over his nearest rival. He shows .337 against .325 for Larry Doyle, the runner-up.

A study of the batting figures for the league makes the standing of the New York Giants something of a puzzle. Mcgraw's club stands second in hitting as a club, and furthermore, is the only outfit in the National league race that boasts of as many as three regulars who are hitting better than .300. In addition to Captain Doyle, both Merkle and Robertson are well over that limit.

The long distance hitting of Saier and Cravath continues to stand out above anything else in the field. Saier tops the field in total base clubbing by a good margin. In fact, he is 20 points higher than Cravath, who comes second. The Cub first baseman has made 90 hits for a total of 164 bases. Cravath's 80 rape has netted him 141. Saier, in addition to leading in total bases, tops all in runs scored with 54, and in stolen bases with 22. Cravath's especial claim to distinction is his feat of driving out 14 home runs.

The work of the Cincinnati club as a team, both at bat and in the field, appears to prove that the Reds are either drawing very poor flinging or else they are using their ability rather poorly. The Rhinelanders are tied with the Pirates for the lead in fielding as a club, and rank fourth in club batting, yet they are in last place in the club standings.

Strange Records Of Baron Stars

Perryman Drafted After Winning but One Game in Ten

BIRMINGHAM, July 24.—There is one incident in the career of Emmet Key Perryman, the latest Baron recruit, that probably is without a precedent. The elongated right-hander twirled for the Richmond club in the Virginia State league in 1912. In the first nine games that he operated he encountered a defeat. After nine successive reversals Perryman won the tenth game.

Immediately after winning his first battle it was announced that he had been purchased by the New York Nationals. However, the lanky Georgian did not report to the Giants, as he was studying for the ministry.

Another member of the Barons experienced a bizarre experience in obtaining a major league trial. In 1913 Edson Hemingway, who is now cavorting at first for Birmingham, was playing for Ludington, in the Southern Michigan league. The pitching staff was badly crippled, so the manager, in despair, requested Hemingway to pitch. He gamely assumed the task and surprised his mates by pitching a two-hit game. A scout of the St. Louis Browns happened to be present at the game and subsequently recommended Hemingway to Branch Rickey for his pitching staff.

So when Hemingway reported in Florida and did not show any tendency to loosen up his pitching arm, for he mingled with the infielders, Rickey took him to task. When Hemingway informed him that he was an infielder, the St. Louis manager was dumbfounded. However, he gave Edson a chance in the infield and then forwarded him to Nashville, where he developed into a very capable infielder.

By LONGSHOT.

"The Campbells are coming," also the Smiths, —owns, Thompsons and about every other clan that one would expect to find represented among seven or eight hundred persons—all are headed for the G. A. H.

Don't you know what that means? Our suspicions were correct; you're not a trapshooter, therefore, you are just the fellow we're looking for to tell you what you were about to miss by not planning your vacation to take in the Grand American (Trapshooting) Handicap at Chicago, August 16-20, inclusive.

Of course, you would probably hesitate to break into the game in such shooting company as will be present at the annual tourney, but as a spectator—if you are a "sure enough" sportsman—you will see a sporting classic that shades every other event on the calendar of American games.

Imagine any other sport—golf, tennis or what not—with an entry list of 750 amateurs and 50 or more professionals, and that for good measure. We say "imagine" for certainly such a thing has never come under your observation and only could in the "made-in-America" game of trapshooting—the game that, measured by the number of contestants outclasses every other.

We are in doubt as to where Chicago got the appellation of "Windy City," and we will admit that the western burg talks big before it does a scheduled thing, but we also know that the doing is usually a heap bigger than the talking, so, after all, the Illinois town is really modest and when her hustling people tell us that there will be daily galleries of 25,000 to 50,000 we believe that the estimate is conservative.

Every day of the five there will be an event that alone would make the meet notable and the combination is just about as big as you would ever expect a sporting event to be. A summary of the program runs: Introductory shoot, national amateur (single-target championship, national amateur (double-target) championship, preliminary grand American handicap, grand American handicap and consolation handicap. And we have not included the professional matches, the joker-trap events and other unofficial affairs.

A detailed description of each major number on the program would consume more than the allotted space so we select the one that is most unique in sports—the national amateur (single-target) championship. Usually, "champion" means a player—golf, tennis or fighter—who has won the title by defeating another champ, but how different in the gun game. In this case, the first step is to register the highest score of 25 to 100 or more shooters in the annual state shoot—this is done in about forty states—then the championship winners or the runners-up meet at the grand American handicap to decide who of the two score or so state champs is the shooting star of the country—conclusions are tried and a tie score for several shooters results; another try is made and, perhaps, a couple are eliminated and then follows a three-cornered battle which may or may not be settled with a string of targets. Anyhow whoever is the final victor, he wins by sheer shooting ability and not the pot luck which is so often the deciding element in the winning of the championship crown of most other games.

Steen Is Regular; Boland on Bench

Bill Steen, who went fro mthe Indians to the Tigers in June, is going to replace Bernie Boland, youthful hurler, in the ranks of Jennings' first-string pitchers.

Jennings thinks the former Cleveland lander is just about the real thing.

"He has the stuff and he is a hard, willing worker who takes care of himself," said Hughey. That is a boost enough for any newcomer—and Hughey was enthusiastic when he said it, too.

Boland hasn't been hanging close lately to the record he set when he first joined the team. Jennings has made the boy a second-stringer until he can show improved form.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 24.—Announcement was made last night that Jack Bushelman, a pitcher, had been signed by the Memphis Southern association club to replace Lance Chandler, former University of Mississippi player, who was given his uncoditional release. Bushelman recently was released by the Nashville Southern association club.

Covington Fans Strong for Team

COVINGTON, Ga., July 24.—Baseball fans of this city are growing very enthusiastic over the showing of the Covington baseball team and its work to date. Under the management of R. B. Lee the club has now won thirteen games lost four and tied one for the plump percentage of .765. The most spirited contests have been played with Monticello. Eight games have been played with that club, of which six have been won, one lost and another tied. No less than three of these went into extra innings. Covington won one game of twelve innings 7 to 6; lost one of eleven innings 6 to 5, and played a fourteen-inning 2 to 2 tie.

The strong Washington team comes here Monday for three games. Frank Hunt, the Mercer star who was given a brief tryout by Manager Billy Smith of the Atlanta team is pitching for Washington as is Perryman a younger brother of Key Perryman who played with Atlanta last season. The Covington club is anxious to arrange games with the best independent clubs in the state, and asks that any communications looking toward such be directed to Manager B. B. Lee.

CHANDLER SIX $1295

A Plain Talk About Automobile Values

PEOPLE are asking their friends a lot of questions about the relative values of the best known automobiles.

Interest centers chiefly, of course, in the light-weight sixes, because the light weight six is the most popular type of car, and much of the interest centers in the Chandler.

The Chandler cannot supply the entire demand for light-weight sixes, but for thorough, carefui purchasers who want to be very sure of relative values, there are some interesting facts well worth considering.

Such a purchaser will not forget that the Chandler was the first high-grade six selling for less than $2000 and weighing less than 3000 pounds. He will not forget that the Chandler pioneered the way for light-six domination and established the Light-Six Era. That was three years ago. The price was $1785.

The popularity of the Chandler Idea has grown by leaps and bounds ever since.

Other light-sixes quickly followed into the market but the Chandler has occupied a position of leadership all the way. A leadership in quality and price. And now Chandler is building Ten Thousand cars a year and still unable to fill the Chandler demand.

A vital element in the history of Chandler success—and the secret of Chandler high quality and low price this year—is the fact that essentially the Chandler car of this season is the Chandler car of the first season.

There has never been any reason for bringing out a radically new model. The original Chandler. in all its principles of design and construction, was final. From season to season we have refined it and beautified it and added the newest standard features of equipment. And this season we have brought out the really wonderful new seven-passenger body. But, from the mechanical standpoint, the car is practically unchanged. That marvelous Chandler motor—the foundation of Chandler supremacy—has remained untouched.

Standing pat on a model that was, and is, right, we have avoided costly experimentation that must attend the production of new models. We have lowered our overhead to a minimum. We have been enabled to make sensational price reductions from season to season and still give better value.

The world's greatest manufacturer of low-priced cars has built his tremendous success on this policy, and the public knows—you know—it is the policy that gives the purchaser "most for his money."

That is why no other car of like size and character has caught up with the Chandler price.

From $1785 this price last year went down to $1595. And this year down to $1295. In practical effect, Chandler offers you a $1785 car for $1295. And we ask you to try to match its value in any

MERCHANTS' MEETING IN AUGUST OFFERS MANY ATTRACTIONS

Big Entertainment at Piedmont Driving Club on August 3, Many Other Features by Individual Firms

With the merchants' meeting in August now only one week away, talk of this big event is becoming general among the wholesalers, merchants and traveling men throughout the south.

All the travelers coming in to headquarters bring reports with them of big numbers of their merchant friends who express their intention of being present and enjoying the festivities and looking at the big assemblage of fall goods the merchants have collected especially for their visit and of laying in supplies for their fall trade.

All arrangements have been made for the big reception and luncheon at the Piedmont Driving club on Tuesday, August 3. This big occasion will start off the entertainment features of merchants' week. It will bring together the largest assemblage of visitors at any one time during the six days of the gathering. It will be followed by many entertainments given by individual houses; in fact, every visitor who comes to Atlanta during this time will be looked after cordially, carefully and constantly.

Fully 75,000 booklets, showing the advantages of Atlanta as a wholesale market, and the benefits to be derived by the visitors here at the time of the merchants' meeting are now being mailed out to the trade throughout the southern states by individual members of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association. The booklets were prepared under the direction of Secretary Harry T. Moore, of this association, and constitute an artistic and handsome exposition of the features that go to make up Atlanta's greatness as a wholesale center.

One of the points about buying by the retailers for the present fall season is the fact that the buying has been late. This has been noticeable not only in dry goods but in many other lines of merchandise. Conditions have availed to make most of the merchants put off buying until much later than has been the custom heretofore. For this reason heavier purchases are expected during merchants' week in very many more lines than have heretofore been the case.

The wholesalers here have assembled perhaps the largest and most varied stocks of goods that Atlanta has ever known. These will no doubt prove a feast to every buyer who makes the city a visit, and Atlanta's well-known hospitality is a guarantee that his visit will therefore be both pleasant and profitable.

MITCHELL M'F'G CO. DOES BIG WESTERN TRADE

Its Skirts Find Ready Sale in Western States--Home Trade Large

The Mitchell Manufacturing company reports that, not only has business revived, but since the first of March they have been unable to keep up with the orders. This company manufactures poge, garbardine, ratine, basket weave, etc., skirts and are selling them all over the country.

One of the leading merchants of Gainesville, Tex., wrote that of the four dozen skirts they received one month they had sold all but ten before noon and had duplicated the order.

Pollocks, of Riverside, Cal., have sent several orders and sell the skirts as fast as they are received. This shows great enterprise for one of our small manufacturing establishments in making an article to sell readily in the west, middle west, northwest. Of course, the home trade of this company is large.

T. P. A. OFFICIAL URGES FREEDOM OF SEAS FOR COTTON

Says Business of South Must Languish Unless Cotton Moves Freely to All Parts of World--Action Asked

Editor Firing Line: Permit me to call the attention of the traveling and commercial men to the dilemma that confronts the cotton states without adequate market for the crop of 1915.

As is well known, cotton forms the basis for all commercial operations in the cotton states. Within sixty days the 1915 crop should begin to move in the markets of the world. It would seem, therefore, that although congress is not in session, those high in authority should use extraordinary diligence and their influence to prevail upon the president to use heroic means to have the British "Order in Council" so modified as to allow cotton to move without hindrance to all the markets of the world. I do not mean by this to precipitate war with England because war is not necessary to accomplish the desired results.

We see occasional letters in the public press, and hear of occasional speeches by prominent men, suggesting what should be done to get the results that would operate to the best interest of this country, and we also note that the president through the secretary of state, has served England with a note calling upon them to modify their order in council so as to allow the movement of cotton without the hazard to cargoes that has been so much in evidence during the past six months.

According to the usual time that the British authorities consume, before answering this note from our government the cotton crop will be ready for market and demoralized for want of an adequate market before any reply is received

In consideration of the foregoing I feel justified in calling upon all who are high in authority and have influence at Washington to present clearly, forcefully, and systematically to these representatives, the fact that this great section of our government including all branches of commercial enterprises and manufacturers and all of the kindred interest supported by the commerce of this section, are going to suffer great hardships and be forced to the most rigid economy as the result which can and will be avoided if this matter is handled with the earnest vigor that the extreme emergency of the conditions demand. I would not undertake to suggest the exact method by which this can be accomplished, but I have faith enough in our officials at Washington and the justice of the cause, to believe that if they can be convinced that this emergency does exist they will find a remedy, and at the same time, one that will work no hardship upon any of the belligerent nations of Europe.

I realize that responsibilities under the present delicate conditions is without any precedent in the history of this government or any other, and as a patriotic citizen I do not expect, and would not ask that anything be done that would jeopardize the peace with which this great country is so fortunately blessed, but my unlimited faith and confidence in the character and the ability of Woodrow Wilson and the advisers that he has chosen in his cabinet, create within my mental being, the conviction, sustained by every crisis that has occurred within the past two years, that they are equal to the emergency if they get down to work in earnest on this question.

I am writing this letter because of the sympathetic connection and association that I have officially with the class of citizens of the southeast that are going to be most seriously injured unless these remedies are provided in ample time to prevent the congestion and stagnation inevitable to leave the matter as it now stands.

With this ambargo on cotton removed there is every justifiable reason to believe that we are going to have a return to business and a full restoration of business confidence in this section.

Yours very truly,
J. H. ANDREWS,
Press Chairman Ga. Division T. P. A.
Atlanta, Ga., July 24, 1915.

SENOR CARLO BACHER, who leaves in a few days for Argentine South America, where he will represent the J. K. Orr Shoe company of Atlanta.

From Green Beginner Works Up Fine Trade for Firm First Month

In January, this year, Slaughter T. Lambert was clerking in a country town in Georgia, jogging along at work all the time, keeping busy in one way and another.

In February he began road work for the Stephen Putney Shoe company, of Richmond, Va., in Georgia and North Carolina territory, and by using the same tactics "keeping busy" he has been able to roll up a handsome business for his firm.

Mr. Lambert says: "When I started out I spent two or three days having N. K. Smith give me a little coaching, and let me tell you he sure can crowd a lot of experience in a few hours. He showed me how to pack and unpack, and cut out frills, and get down to hard pan hustling from 5 a. m. till midnight. When he turned me loose one morning to catch a 5 a. m. train, he said:

"'Son, you are tackling a man's size job. Don't lose your nerve today; work out this week, and you will be all right.'

"The first three towns I struck every merchant was off out of town attending court. Finally I took an auto at a cost of $6 and went out to see a big country merchant found him at home and sold him $4.50 worth of shoes. When I arose next morning I said to myself, 'Mr. Smith surely told me the truth, but I will stick it out.' So I kept on at it, and when the end of the month came I had sold $7,000 to gilt edge trade and got a letter from the firm congratulating me. This made me feel good, especially so as they had never seen me. I was hired sight unseen, and had to make good.

"At the end of the season I went up to Richmond to look my boss over and see if he liked me and if I liked him, and, let me tell you, I found them all of that old genuine hospitable Virginia brand of kindness that made me fall in love with them.

"I came back and have been working about eleven days to the week since and have had a splendid business."

Mr. Lambert will have a sample room open at the Kimball house during Merchants' week, and has many buyers lined up for the first week in August. He will be with Mr. N. K. Smith at their same rooms, 606 and 608.

SENOR BACHER TO REPRESENT J. K. ORR CO. IN ARGENTINE

Native of That Country Spends Two Weeks in Plant Here Learning Factory Details of Red Seal Shoes

Senor Carlo Bacher has been chosen to represent the J. K. Orr Shoe company in Argentine, South America. Senor Bacher has been spending two weeks in Atlanta in the Red Seal factory, familiarizing himself with all the details of shoe making, particularly with the methods and materials used in making the Red Seal shoes. He will leave in a few days for Argentine and will stop en route at Key West, Cuba, San Domingo and other West India islands. Senor Bacher is a native of Argentine and has represented a Chattanooga manufacturer for the past two years; previous to this he represented lace manufacturers of Milan, Italy. He speaks Spanish, French, German, Portuguese and English.

Senor Bacher is enthusiastic over Atlanta and Atlanta-made shoes. He declares that the Red Seal shoes will undoubtedly sell well in all the tropical countries with which he is familiar. When he leaves on his long journey he may not return to Atlanta for a year. His appointment as Argentine representative is in line with the policy of the J. K. Orr company to expand and increase its export business. It has in the past done a big business in this line, but expects to do more and more in the future.

"UNCLE JEFF" QUITS TEAM; WILL TRAVEL IN AUTO

Sells Wagon Outfit and Buys Ford; Engages Services of Chauffeur

G. G. Jefferson, otherwise known as "Uncle Jeff," the trainless traveler of Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, has sold his team and wagon and invested in a Ford automobile in which he will hereafter make his country trips. For twenty years "Uncle Jeff" has sold goods to the country merchants of Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina. During this time he has made his trips only by wagon and team. He refused to ride on trains, having a strong dislike to that mode of conveyance. He declares that trains are moral corruptors of the country, but the automobile he regards in a different manner, and thinks that the time has come for the adoption of this means of transportation in making his country trips.

For a week Uncle Jeff practiced running his machine at his home at East Point, and was getting along very well until he attempted a trip to Atlanta. When he reached the crowded streets, however, he found that his training as a chauffeur was far from complete. In fact, he was so impressed with his deficiency in that respect that he has been compelled to hire a chauffeur. So the merchants who have heretofore welcomed "Uncle Jeff" when he came driving up with his wagon and faithful team, may now expect him to whirl up in an automobile driven by a chauffeur. This does not call for order change, yielding place to the new.

The first heard from "Uncle Jeff" last week. He had covered much territory and taken many orders.

ZARCO CIGARS CONTINUE THEIR GREAT POPULARITY

Those Zarco cigars distributed by the Lamar & Rankin Drug Co. continue to be trade winners. They are an all-Havana hand-made cigar, introduced only a few weeks ago, but in that time they have attained immense popularity, which shows no signs of diminution. Mr. Johnson, factory representative of Zarco cigars, has been in the city for some time working the trade. He will be here several weeks longer.

"CORNFIELD" WIENERS HAVE BIG GEORGIA TRADE

One of the interesting features of the packing business of the White Provision company is its trade in "wieners." The company began manufacturing of wieners two years ago. Now it sells in Georgia 700,000 "Cornfield" wieners each month.

The sausage department of this firm is headed by an expert, who knows just how the ingredients and seasoning for the wieners should be combined to give them their delicious flavor. Every Cornfield wiener is just like every other Cornfield wiener, and has the same flavor. This uniformity of taste adds a great deal to the popularity of the Cornfield brand.

Not only are wieners now sold at the wiener stands, but the business has increased much beyond this. The use of wieners has become very popular at afternoon social gatherings, and they are served throughout the winter months on such occasions even more generally than turkey. They are used extensively by all hotels, cafes, restaurants and clubs. In fact, after a recent club dance, 110 wieners were served to the automobile guests present on that occasion. It has become quite the custom for automobiles to stop by the clubs, and their occupants have wieners sent out to them. Just a few years ago the sale of wieners constituted a sort of side line with butcher shops. Now it is a staple line of trade in grocery stores, and, as has been said, they have a wide use in clubs and hotels.

"More Cornfield wieners are sold in Atlanta than of all other brands," said W. H. White, Jr., president of the company. "Not only this, but large shipments are made to Savannah, Columbus and other Georgia cities. These shipments go through in our own refrigerator cars or they are sent by express."

Cornfield wieners are made of sausage from the choicest beef and pork trimmings, and they are made and packed under the most sanitary conditions it is possible to attain.

For the purpose of packing wieners the White Provision company buys in Atlanta pasteboard cartons in lots of 100,000. The wieners are packed in ten-pound cartons, and the cartons then are packed six to a case. The wiener business of the White company is only another illustration of trade in a small article being carefully and intelligently directed and amounting therefrom to enormous proportions.

FAIR GOT OVERCOAT ON BROYLES' PROPHESY

The Weather Prophet Abroad Without Either Honor or Warm Clothing

R. A. Broyles, one of the delegates to the national T. P. A. convention at Omaha the first week in June, tells an interesting story of the adventures of an overcoat. One of the features of the adventure is that the overcoat was his, though it proved of no service to him and he went about the streets of Chicago with chattering teeth. This result came about in this wise:

Previous to the departure for Chicago and the Omaha convention, Mr. Broyles advised the other delegates that the weather was so hot overcoats would not be needed at all. But all of the delegates, except W. F. Fair, of Atlanta, refused to heed his advice. Mr. Fair relying upon Mr. Broyles' idea of the weather in the northern latitudes, failed to take anything heavier than a Palm Beach suit.

Mr. Broyles, who had advised against lugging around heavy garments, had a sudden presentment just before beginning his journey, and appeared upon the train bearing an overcoat upon his arm. When, however, the party reached Chicago and the weather was ranging around the frost line and the shivering delegates were hunting steam-heated apartments with great earnestness, Mr. Fair reminded Mr. Broyles of his unfortunate advice. Mr. Broyles, in order to make good, said: "Here, Fair, you take my overcoat and wear it."—an offer which Mr. Fair promptly accepted, leaving Mr. Broyles, the weather prophet, to shiver and shake like a shorn lamb, untempered to the raw breezes of the Windy City.

LEWIS WRITES VALUABLE AXIOMS FOR EMPLOYES

Says Employees Should Be Able to Answer Pertinent Question

BY E. P. LEWIS

If you expect to make a big success in any particular line as an employe, you must ask yourself these questions and be able to answer "yes" to all.

Do I take as much interest in this business as I would one of my own?

Do I find more pleasure in my work than in outside things?

Do I show my fellow men the courtesy I would like to have them show me?

Am I willing to take good advice from others?

Is my policy, "give all I can for what I get?"

If you are able to answer all these questions with a "yes," and find real pleasure in your work, you are in a fair way to win success.

Outside pleasure is only temporary, it wears off as fast as you rub it on, and only creates a desire to indulge in more of the same nature.

Never get the idea you have learned all there is to learn. If you are in the class that has no ambition in life other than leading a comeday-go-day-God-send pay-day-and-Sunday-existence; from a business standpoint, you are not worth breathing space, and the business world would be better off without you.

THIS COTTON CROP TO BE CHEAPEST MADE IN YEARS

N. K. Smith, the well known shoe salesman, says that this cotton crop will be the cheapest crop made in years, and that no matter which way the war goes, that the economy practiced this year will make good times this fall.

He also says that it is a good time now for the government to close the cotton exchange. He declares that it will put cotton down, for the farmers are going to have that to look after and they have learned that they can keep it up, but simply to protect those poor little Wall street gamblers, for they are going to get "bumped" this fall, they are going to depress and depress cotton contracts and then find that they will have to pay 10c for spots.

GRAND COUNSELOR STERN ISSUES COMMUNICATION

Urges All Members to Get Busy for Good of Order

A communication has been sent out by M. Leon Stern, of Savannah, to all the councils of the Georgia-Florida grand jurisdiction of the U. C. T. Mr. Stern is grand counselor of this jurisdiction. He thanks the councils for the honor of the high office conferred on him, and urges every member of the order to get to work now to make this year the best in the order's history.

The communication follows:

"Greetings: I take this instance to thank you for the splendid honor you have conferred on me, by electing me through your representatives, to the highest office in the grand domain.

"I shall, with your assistance, make this grand council show a splendid increase when May, 1916, puts in its appearance.

"A grander body of men never existed than the wearers of the 'crescent and sample case,' and they do things; but we must continue to increase. Our slogan for 1915-16 is 'Get a New Member.' We showed a decrease this year, but conditions are betterings and we have a better opportunity to add to our ranks the sterling qualities of true manhood than ever before.

"Get busy, boys, every one of us must average a new member at each meeting. It's easy—start now, and talk 'Unity, Charity and Temperance.'

"By January 1, 1916, the increase in membership expected by your grand counselor is as follows:

"Atlanta Council, No. 18, 100; Jacksonville, No. 292, 75; Pensacola, No. 332, 50; Gainesville, No. 415, 25; Georgia, No. 287, 80; Augusta, No. 312, 70; Savannah, No. 336, 70; Fulton, No. 505, 100; Macon, No. 200, 75; Classic City, No. 315, 75; Tampa, No. 376, 70; Florida, No. 553, 30.

"This is not too high a mark, so let's reach it, and may the Supreme Counselor of all give you strength and desire to accomplish this, and may peace, prosperity and the blessings of brotherly unity attend your efforts for the advancement of our beloved order.

"Fraternally yours,

"M. LEON STERN,
"Grand Counselor."

CHEEK SAYS CROPS ARE FINE IN NORTH GEORGIA

J. S. Cheek, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, blew into headquarters for a few days last week. Mr. Cheek declares that all the merchants in his territory will be here for convention week. "Not a one I can remember now but what has said he will be here. The people in north Georgia are in a prosperous condition. I never saw such crops of corn. In fact, the finest crops of everything I believe are now growing under the summer sun for the harvest later in the fall.

"I may also add that the merchants' stocks in this territory are in fine shape for fall business. None of them are overloaded. In fact, stocks have been allowed to run low and the merchants will need to replenish them largely for the fall trade.'

CALLOWAY SENDS FIRM NICE BUNCH OF ORDERS

J. S. Calloway, south Georgia traveler of F. W. King & Co., last week turned in a very fine bunch of orders for his firm. Mr. Calloway's headquarters are at Newborn, Ala. He does not get into Atlanta often, but the orders which he sends in speak for him instead.

REVSON INTRODUCING NEW PENCIL SHARPENER

Has Attractive Proposition for Salesmen and Trade on New Era Sharpener

When the Firing Line representative walked into the office of Frank Revson, the well known dealer in bottlers' supplies, he was greeted by the sign, "we have it, can get it, or it isn't made," prominently placed.

"By the way," said Mr. Revson with his usual urbane smile. "That slogan holds good now as never before. You have been the beneficiary of some pretty sharp innuendos on your previous visits—but we have 'em all skinned on sharpness now."

"In other words," explained Mr. Revson, "we have been appointed sole agents for the state of Georgia for a pencil sharpener that really sharpens.

"This pencil sharpener we have been delegated to introduce is called the New Era. It is quite a likely looking machine. Stands six inches high, has a rotary cutting knife, and a wonderful self-sharpening device which prevents it from getting dull. The best part of the propostition is that we give it away absolutely free. Now, the proposition is this: We sell the pencil sharpener for two dollars and give the purchaser absolutely free four dozen Johann Faber pencils. Catch the idea? The proposition can be switched to the pencil sharpener if desired. You can buy the pencils and we will give you the sharpener."

"Our agents have been having great success with this article in the city of Atlanta. And when we get 'em lined up in the state, they're going to have equal success.

"And if salesmen want a good thing," wound up Mr. Revson, "my warehouse latch string hangs out, and we'll put 'em next to the most wonderful proposition in a pencil and sharpener that has been known in a long while."

The company has just received samples of the new product and are highly delighted with it, declaring it is the best peanut food they have ever seen. In due time they expect to have it properly introduced to all their customers.

The Serv-us brand of pure food products continues to enjoy a heavy sale. Their popularity grows wider each day. Among the best sellers under the Serv-us brand are rolled oats. The sale of this article continues constant throughout the year.

What PAYS Is the Main Thing in Business

You needn't blink that fact. We don't want you to.

It is true of ourselves. We are in business for PROFIT—plain, straight PROFIT.

We are a little company of Atlanta Manufacturers making common cause of our efforts to make more profits.

We are doing a little team work.

We are jointly paying for the privilege of telling the public what we make, where we make it, and how good it is.

Our object in life is to make our product as good as we possibly can and to sell as much of it as we can induce people to buy.

Especially HOME PEOPLE.

Home money. Home brains. Home enterprise. Home employes. Home pay-rolls. Home spendings.

Why not more HOME CONSUMERS?

Why shouldn't Georgia people and Atlanta people buy and use the goods that are produced in their own state and town?

Alex Stephens thought they ought to. So did Henry Grady. So does every loyal man and woman who gives the slightest thought to economics—or economy, for that matter.

THE MERCHANT WHO HELPS TO PUSH THE CAMPAIGN FOR HOME GOODS IS DOING LOYAL AND IMPORTANT WORK FOR HIS SECTION AND FOR HIMSELF.

Loyalty is the lever. Loyalty PLUS SELF-INTEREST will lift the load.

Self-interest centers about profits.

Profits: How can the HOME GOODS MERCHANT count on more profits?

This is the way:

The HOME GOODS MERCHANT IS NEAR US, THE MANUFACTURERS. LESS FREIGHT.

HE IS WITHIN TALKING DISTANCE OF US, THE MANUFACTURERS. LESS TIME.

HE IS WITHIN REACH OF HIS SUPPLY. LESS TROUBLE.

Why not buy our goods and train your trade into the habit of buying goods that COST YOU LESS LAID DOWN?

It is easy to do.

You will find the folks responsive if you give them the opportunity.

They've been reading and hearing the HOME PRODUCTS creed pretty steadily and they are more familiar with it than some of you Merchants seem to think.

It is time to make test. Stock with the goods we make. Let your patrons KNOW that you are a HOME GOODS MERCHANT.

You will feel the results.

They will take the form of MORE PROFITS.

And PROFITS are the Main Thing in the mind of the Merchant.

A number of visiting merchants were at the Rosenfeld company's this week, buying goods for the fall season. Particularly to be mentioned was a number of visitors from Chattanooga, Tenn., and Augusta, Ga.

A number of visiting merchants were at Montag Brothers last week inspecting and buying holiday goods. The firm's big new sample room is proving a great convenience to all visitors.

A card received from C. H. Kelley and H. A. Sewell, of Kelley Brothers company, who are taking their vacation at Hot Springs, Ark., states that they are getting along fine and having a big time.

M. O. Nix, of Montag Brothers, returned from a pleasant vacation last week, spent with relatives near Marietta, Ga.

DOBBS & WEY CO. HAVE BIG HOLIDAY STOCK

Will Show Visitors Finest Line of Christmas Goods They Have Ever Carried

When the merchants meet here in August, the Dobbs & Wey Co., will have a big line of holiday goods ready for their inspection. "We have assembled one of the largest stocks of holiday goods that we have ever carried," said W. L. Percy, of this firm. "We have all the latest things in dolls and toys of every description.

"We are looking forward to a big Christmas trade. In fact, the people of the south have not had a real old-fashioned Christmas for some time, but we confidently expect that this will be their portion the coming season, and we are fully prepared for it. We hope merchants from all over the south will be present merchants' week.

"We will certainly be delighted to see them all and will give them the most cordial welcome of which we are capable. We want them all to visit us and look at our fine stock of holiday goods. We are always glad to meet the merchants and to show them as delightful a time as is in our power."

Whereas, It has pleased an all-wise Providence to remove from our midst since last we met Brother E. Y. Culbreath, and

Whereas, All who knew him in a business or in a social way had nothing but encomiums for his manly character and strict degree of honesty in business life, setting an example that we would all do well to emulate, therefore be it

Resolved, First, that we, Post B, in session assembled, join with his young wife, relatives and friends in mourning his sudden and untimely death.

Resolved, Second, That we commend his life and character, young though it was, to our membership and to our fellow-man as being worthy of emulation. Be it

Resolved, Third, that a copy of this preamble and resolution be forwarded to the widow, and a copy furnished to the Firing Lines of The Journal and Constitution, and a copy spread upon the minutes of this post.

LEWIS EXPECTS BIGGEST AUGUST MEETING YET

Says Merchants Will Be Here Looking for Bargains in Large Numbers

E. P. Lewis, of McClure Ten Cent company, was asked by the Firing Line representative if the merchants were coming in large numbers to attend the annual meeting of the Southern Merchants' association this year. He answered:

"The indications are that this will be the largest gathering of merchants Atlanta has ever had. Merchants will be here looking for bargains like countrymen at a pineywoods camp meeting looking for fried chicken.

"A lot of merchants in the south are without staple selling merchandise, because they have been sitting still waiting to see what the outcome would be. And now that cotton is bringing a good price, trade will be better this fall than in years.

"As for ourselves we have cut our prices down very low; this has been done for the benefit of the merchants, as well as to decrease our stock before time to move into our new quarters.

"Jobbers and manufacturers all over the city are going to have some very attractive values, and as this is vacation time, the merchants are looking forward to a few days of pleasure combined with a profitable business trip to our city."

Is Our "Hobby"---Our Business

For thirty years we have had, you might say, our fingers upon the very pulse of this great world commodity.

We have studied the conditions that have governed its declines and inclines in values as the financier studies his stocks and bonds, and the banker his securities, and MR. MERCHANT, let us tell you candidly that if you fail to protect yourself now with contracts for fall deliveries, just as surely you will be forced to purchase your fall supply of SOLE LEATHER STRIPS at greatly advanced prices.

Our buyer is now in the Eastern markets, where we expect to "hedge" against the advance, for awhile, at least.

Will you "hedge" by contracting with us for deliveries from now to December?

War Stocks Continue Active With Several Making New High Records

At the Close Baldwin Locomotive, American Can, Bethlehem Steel and Other Issues Reaping a Harvest of War Orders Were Near Their Best

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 24.—War stocks were active again today and advanced materially, several making new high records. At the close Baldwin Locomotive, American Can, Bethlehem Steel and other issues reaping a harvest of war orders were near their best. Bethlehem Steel gained 7 points, making a gain of 21 points for the week. American Can's new high figure of 1-2 was due to a semi-official report that a $40,000,000 supply contract had been closed with the British government.

Baldwin Locomotive rose to a new high mark on reports that an additional war order in the neighborhood of $30,000,000 had been closed by that company. Old time standard leaders, like New York Central, Reading, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific were neglected.

Bethlehem Steel again was the feature of strength, selling at 209 1-2, the highest price ever paid for a non-dividend paying stock on the exchange.

The current neglect of the railroad issues is due to the uncertainty over the crop outlook and it generally was conceded that little will be doing in the railroad shares until after publication of the August crop report.

National Enameling was heavily purchased in the final dealings and rose 4 1-2 on the alleged big improvement in the volume of the company's business since the war has cut off competition from the Austrian manufacturers.

Changes in the bank statement were close to the estimate made from the known movements during the week.

Trading in bonds was in moderate volume without an appreciable change in prices. Total sales, par value, aggregated $735,000. United States 2s advanced 1-2 on call for the week.

WET WEATHER AND BLACK RUST HAD BULLISH EFFECT

Wheat Closed 1-2 to 3 3-8c Higher—Corn Steady—Oats Up—Provisions Lower

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, July 24.—Wet weather and black rust had a bullish effect today on wheat. The outcome was a nervous close at 1 1-2 to 3 3-8 above last night. Corn finished 1-4 off to 1-4 up, oats at 1-4 to 3-8 to 2 1-2 advance, and provisions with losses of 5 to 37 1-2.

Wheat tended upward almost constantly throughout the session. Shorts were flurried in particular by rains that are interfering with harvesting. The tightening of prices made itself felt heretofore in the July option.

In corn an increase of rural offerings seemed to offset the influences of wheat strength.

Only like wheat, developed notable strength on account of the general rains.

Provisions received inadequate support.

CHICAGO, July 24.—Wheat—Prices have continued to advance as a result of more rain and predictions for showers over Sunday. Late reports indicate considerable losses in Kansas and with increase of farmers to bid and exhaustion in old crop supplies, we believe situation is favorable to holders with possibility of black rust damage northwest still to be reckoned with.

Corn—There has been fair buying of corn by commission houses with firmness in wheat and local buying. The crop is late and with continued wet weather over large part of the belt indications are for good export to market on all setbacks.

Oats—Weather is unfavorable in many sections and damage reports of serious kind are not unusual.

SPECTACULAR TRADING IN WAR SHARES DURING WEEK

Profit Taking Served to Reduce Quoted Values in Most of the Specialties

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 24.—Spectacular trading in war shares marked the active week on the stock exchange, with many new high records in these issues. The extent of the dealings in these stocks was such as to completely dwarf operations in other parts of the list. Profit-taking served to reduce quoted values in most of these specialties, but the speculative mania promises to be renewed unless held in bounds by powerful interests.

Meantime railroad stocks suffered more or less severely, such issues as St. Paul and Canadian Pacific making lowest prices in many years, while others, particularly those in the southern and southwestern territories, fell to quotations never before recorded. Altogether the week's trading was most strongly of unreasoning speculation, although the break in the railway division seemed to have substantial basis in doubtful dividend reports.

The international situation assumed a new phase by the forwarding of the government's reply note to Germany.

Industrial conditions as reflected in the increased production of leading steel mills and higher prices for their output show continued improvement. Unusual interest attaches to the publication next Tuesday of the report of the United States Steel corporation for the second quarter of the year.

The course of steel shares, which repeated their performance of last week, was accepted as a forerunner of this statement. Metal shares showed a hesitant tendency on diminished demand for refined copper.

Weather Conditions

Forecast till 7 p. m. Sunday.

Atlanta and vicinity: Fair tonight and Sunday.

Georgia and Alabama: Generally fair tonight and Sunday.

The slight disturbance over Florida has practically disappeared and the weather is now generally clear over the entire cotton belt, with very moderate temperatures. A few stations in Florida reported rain, Tampa receiving .16 inches. A number of stations along the territory extending from Arizona northeastward to the upper lakes also received rain.

A moderate area of low pressure exists in the extreme southwest, but in the remainder pressure is again high over Manitoba, indicating continued moderate temperatures for some time to come.

Temperatures ranged from 84 degrees at Key West at 7 a. m. to 76 degrees at Lincoln, Omaha, 70 degrees at Atlanta, and 50 degrees at Duluth and Winnipeg.

Fair weather is indicated for Atlanta, without much change in temperature.

ATLANTA'S 4-YEAR OLD CHARLIE CHAPLIN

John Duncan Muse, Son of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Muse, Is an Actor, a Linguist, and a War Expert.

JOHN DUNCAN MUSE, the 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Muse, of 381 Ponce de Leon avenue, has originated his own impersonation of Charlie Chaplin.

No one suggested to him the tricks of expression and attitude that make him a small counterpart of the moving picture comedian. He gained his own conception from the pictures he sees occasionally, and first offered his impersonation to the other boys of the neighborhood.

His mother didn't discover his initiative powers until one morning a few weeks ago, when he gave an exhibition with the sidewalk beyond his front door as a stage. His playmates made up the audience, and all the people who passed, stopped and added themselves to the lookers-on.

When his mother interrupted proceedings, he explained that he was just impersonating "Charlie Cha-Chaplin."

"He couldn't even say the name clearly," added Mrs. Muse last week. "But since then he has begun to say 'Charlie' as though he were speaking of an old and intimate friend. He doesn't go to the moving pictures often, just now and then, as other children do. But somehow he has the knack of repeating just the antics that have made the Charlie Chaplin pictures so well known."

Since his first exhibition, a pair of long trousers, a derby, a false mustache, and a cane have been provided for him; and simply through his own ingenuity, he has made his impersonation more complete.

A year ago he was in Porto Rico for some time with his parents; and, though just a baby, he picked up Spanish phrases, and at times now refuses to talk anything but Spanish.

He is also very much interested in the war, particularly in submarines. He doesn't know just what they are. But nevertheless, he is greatly concerned in them.

Little Lady, Aged Eighty-Five, Is Living all Alone In a Sunken Garden of Flowers

By Angus Perkerson

AT the "Hermitage" lives a little lady, 85 years old.

She is all alone. There is no one else in the house down in the hollow of the earth but a bushy, sharp-nosed collie dog that barks at strangers.

There, she reads and sews, and plays on an old accordion, and composes bits of music.

Each plant in the sunken yard has its story—a vine is a sprig from the creeper at Stirling castle, planted by Mary Queen of Scots; and a flowering tree, red with blossoms, is from a sprout brought here by Atlanta's first Presbyterian minister, Mr. Wilson.

Level with the roof of the house runs Forrest avenue where Butler enters; and two hills, one rising toward Peachtree, one toward the Boulevard, begin in a hollow, secure, in this sunken house, all alone, lives the little lady of 85.

She does her cooking, her washing, she tends her garden, she has no servant except a man who comes for an hour each morning to potter among her plants; she has begun to read a 20-volume compendium of the best literature of all ages; and is setting out grapevines and peach trees as though she had many remaining years to live.

Forty years ago Mrs. Ann Eliza Marshall Boynton came to Atlanta. Thirty-three years ago she and her husband moved to the house then even with Forrest avenue at Butler.

Street improvement that began with an elevation of the hollow left the sidewalk twenty feet above the foundation of her house and level with the roof. As she sat on her porch she could see the tops of street cars and the heads of people.

But she liked this. It gave her quiet and seclusion—a green sanctuary, from which she could emerge and in ten minutes be in the shopping district.

To her home beneath the street she gave the name "Yosemite" (the deepest canon in the world); and continued this name until five years ago when her husband died and she began to live alone.

She changed it then to the "Hermitage," for, since that time, Mrs. Boynton has lived in utter seclusion. She is the mother of nineteen children, five of whom, she says, live in Atlanta. But she wouldn't care to leave the sunken house that for thirty-three years has been home to her.

She doesn't need servants because keeping busy frees her from lonesomeness and makes her happy. She rises at 4 o'clock, gives an hour to devotions, works in her garden, comes in and reads, and has breakfast as the notion strikes her, at 10, 11, sometimes, not until 12.

The day passes in various work, in moments among her flowers; in her systematic course of reading, during which she began with Pliny and has continued with books of all character and of all ages; and in music, which she plays on the accordion.

From Forrest avenue, only the roof of the house is plain, and the porch is partly hidden by the many flowers and plants, giving the impression of a mass of greenness, with a small roof emerging.

A long flight of stairs led down from the street, and a gate was at the foot. A gate also was at the top of the steps to the house.

The collie dog barked furiously at the intrusion of a stranger into the Hermitage, and a little brown figure moved about on the porch.

The dog was hushed and dragged by the collar into the house, and the stranger was told to come in.

The little lady who dwells all alone in the seclusion of her flowers, unlatched the door of the porch. She is stooped and she walks rather slowly; but her brown eyes are clear and her voice, while low, is firm.

It was getting into evening; and it had been a day of much gardening and reading. With the collie dog for a companion she had been sitting alone on the porch in the cool.

Even on the closest day the air is fresh and the least bit humid in this deep-down garden. It seems as though only mild sun rays reach the sunken spot and that a breeze always is stirring.

The house is shaded quiet and remote. People who pass on the street can scarcely be seen—nothing but the tips of their heads, and only the lighted windows of the cars.

Isn't she afraid—there below the street in a little house lighted only by lamps? The question is asked almost involuntarily. It is on the visitor's lips as the gate barring the front steps is unlatched.

"I've been through the civil war," said the little lady in the brown dress. "After that you're not afraid of anything. I never get lonesome because I'm too busy. I have too much to do to feel that I'm alone."

"You really have no one to help you?"

"Only a man to aid in the garden," she said, "and I didn't have him until this year. I do my own cooking and washing, I do most of the work in the garden, and I have time to read and to play. Would you like to look around?"

On the porch were green plants of every sort, and some in gorgeous flower. But it is the back of the house that is the best of the garden. A thousand or more flowers are there—small delicately-tinted ones, others that are large and flaring, beds of violets and long-stemmed, double sun-flowers.

She named them all and stopped to brush back the leaves and touch the petals as though they were children; and, as she showed the flowers, she chatted of many things.

"One reason I feel so well at my age is I've lived naturally. I've never drunk tea or coffee, or worn a corset. Corsets are the reason women are unhappy.

"I don't eat meat, and I've found a way to have fresh eggs always. I never let the hens have a nest, and that keeps them from setting.

"Now," she added, "wait till I tie up the dog, and I'll show you through the house."

She came back and led the way again to the entrance, and into the house. It has six rooms, all large, and with old-fashioned, high ceilings. Her bedroom opened into a small conservatory she planned and had built.

Mrs. Boynton's name for it is, "an old woman's rookery."

There are many flowering plants, but chief of all, 150 varieties of prickly, thick, green cacti. She has them of all sorts and sizes. From one to another she went, leaning over them, touching them.

She looked up with a smile.

"In the Mexican war I had sweethearts with the army, and they sent me back plants like these. Since then, I've always loved them."

On the porch she pointed out the plant that grew from a sprig of the creeper planted at Stirling castle by Mary Queen of Scots, and a crepe myrtle tree, from a sprout brought to Atlanta by the first Presbyterian minister.

It was getting almost too dark then to see more of the garden; and the little lady sat down and talked to her visitor of how the street that passes along above her house has changed.

She talked of herself and of her beliefs.

"I am sure," she said, "that I have stronger mentality now than I had when I was 16. It was hard for me to memorize then. Now, I can scan a passage in a book, close the book and almost repeat, word for word, what I've read.

"I've read nearly everything, and now, I'm re-reading. I intend for the next few months to devote myself to books of about the 11th and the 15th centuries.

"I never feel sick. In fact, I am making a good many plans for the future. This season I've set out grapevines and peach trees that won't be any size for several years.

"In part, I believe my contentment is due to the fact that I have had nineteen children, and that I have lived naturally. Would you like to hear me play?"

It had grown so dark that the garden was just a large shadow. The street seemed an indistinct line of light high overhead.

From the house she returned with an accordion in her hands. It seemed a bit stiff and creaky, and she arranged the leather parts, and, then, began to play. At first it was an air with a tinge of sentiment—quaint and full of melody and of forgotten things. And, next, a dance she said was from Tennessee.

On the porch of the house where she lives all alone, this little lady, 85 years old, sat and played the jingling music, and tapped her foot, and laughed to herself.

The cars went bumping by high overhead, and the house seemed as though it were way down in the earth.

But the little lady played and tapped her foot and laughed.

Lonely? She never has the time for that. She is too busy, her days are too full. Probably there is no happier home in Atlanta than "The Hermitage," the house twenty feet below the street, where a little lady 85 years old lives all alone.

Was a Cow, Not a Lover

SHREVEPORT, La.—A sequel to the elopement and marriage of Rev. A. A. Hammond, Midway Baptist minister, and Miss Roach, daughter of W. B. Roach, of Mansfield road, is a decision in the district court awarding $100 to E. F. Miller for loss of a valuable cow killed by Roach.

It developed that Roach about 5 o'clock one morning was aroused by his dog, and upon going outside saw something lying behind a tree, which he mistook for his daughter's lover, whose attentions he opposed.

No answer having followed his call, Roach fired as the cow started toward him, thinking all the time it was Hammond, who he understood had made threats.

Georgia Shoes Shipped to Mandalay

A PAIR of shoes have been shipped from Gainesville, Ga., to Mandalay, on the other side of the world.

Automobile owners say nobody's busy in North Georgia but the policemen.

The following clipping from the Gainesville News tells of the shoes shipped to Mandalay:

"You have heard the song, 'I'm on my way to Mandalay.' I stopped to say good-bye.' Well, this morning Geo. P. Estes received an order from Mandalay for a pair of shoes—to be delivered, of course.

"Mandalay is in Burmah, and Burmah is as near the jumping-off place as one would care to get.

"The letter was mailed two months ago, and the shoes will be a long time getting to the lady."

The Hazelhurst (Ga.) Enterprise says of the child that was charmed by a rattlesnake:

"Last week, in the Altamaha district, J. R. Hall's ten-year-old girl was heard to scream. The girl's mother ran to her, and saw, within striking distance of the child, a snake coiled up and giving warning with its rattles.

"The mother repeatedly cried to the girl to move, but the child stood perfectly still, looking at the snake.

"The father, with a gun in his hand, rushed out of the house, and shouted to the girl to turn and run. But she remained motionless. He raised his gun, and, firing over the little girl's shoulder, killed the snake.

"The girl was dazed, and it was not until after the application of cold water to her face that she revived.

"The snake was six feet long and had eighteen rattles."

The Quitman (Ga.) Press says of eggs hatched by the sun:

"A hen belonging to Lilla Johnson, who lives on West Bartow street, deserted her nest after setting on the eggs exactly two weeks. Lilla couldn't make the hen return; and, deciding the eggs were a loss, left them where they were exposed to the sun. At the end of a week the eggs began to hatch. In two days, the shell of everyone had been chipped, and the twelve chicks were as lively as though they had been hatched under the maternal wing.

"J. W. L." writes the following in the Tifton (Ga.) Gazette of automobiling in north Georgia:

"About the only busy man to be found in the old north Georgia towns these days are the town policemen, seeing that the automobiles pass through in proper order and just as the rules and laws are laid down by the city governors.

"The cops see that the regulations are carried out to the letter, most of the officers being very expert in the enforcement of these laws from the fact that they have little else to do.

"On a trip a few days ago with another party in an auto passing through one of the old towns that was so quiet you could hear a jaybird hollow a mile or could hear a note fall due, everything was going well till the town policemen all at once began to wave us down. We stopped and out walked a long, lean fellow with wide brim hat, blue breeches, alpaca coat and a mus-

ATLANTA'S MILLIONAIRE GIRL BUYS A YACHT

MISS LILLIAN CARTER, of Atlanta, who has inherited her late father's estate of more than a million dollars. News from Northport, L. I., where Miss Carter is spending the summer, is that she has bought a yacht which will accommodate 40 passengers.

NEWS from Northport, L. I., is that Miss Lillian Carter, of Atlanta, has bought a yacht, which accommodates 40 passengers, and that she will spend a part of the summer cruising on the waters around New York.

Miss Carter nine months ago inherited the estate of her father, John B. Carter, who died in New York without a will.

His properties on Long Island, and his various railroad interests, all fell to her. The total of these holdings has not been determined, but it is well over a million.

The estate at Northport, L. I., where Miss Carter, together with her mother, Mrs. H. S. Courtney, and her step-brother, Harry Courtney, is spending the summer, has a valuation of over half a million dollars.

Before Mr. Carter's death, he was offered $450,000 for it by one of the Vanderbilts, who afterward bought just on the other side of the bay.

The estate at Northport, of which Miss Carter is now the sole owner, consists in 160 acres, has stables and automobiles, to which has been added the yacht with an accommodation for forty passengers.

Northport, L. I., is only about 12 miles from Oyster Bay, where Colonel Roosevelt makes his residence; and, in going from Northport to New York by automobile, the route also passes near the country estate of J. Pierpont Morgan, against whose life an effort was made recently by the fanatic, Holt, who afterward killed himself.

Miss Carter, together with her mother and her step-brother, left here in June and went by automobile to Boston. From there they went to New York. They intend to remain at Long Island until September.

Outdoor sports have appealed always to the Atlanta heiress, and it is no surprise that she means to take up yachting. She is expert at riding, drives her own car with skill, and is at home in water sports.

Lena Carnes Gets $5 for Spelling

LENA CARNES has received from Prof. Dumas the five-dollar gold piece given her for not missing a word in spelling the last school year. Heretofore this reward of merit has been shared by several children but this time Lena won it all by herself and her aunt, Mrs. Lena Warren, gave her another five-dollar gold piece to add to it, so her bank account has received quite an addition.—Marietta (Ga.) Courier.

ATLANTA'S SUN-BATHERS

SUN baths to increase health have been introduced into Atlanta by Dr. Victor E. Keller, a specialist, with offices in the Silver building.

On the roof of the building he has a cot with screens where, once a week, he takes sun baths of three to four hours' duration.

His routine is to lie in the broiling sun until his whole body is tanned the brown of a berry. Last Sunday, in spite of a temperature of almost 100 degrees, he continued this treatment.

His theory is that the whole body is strengthened by the tonic effect of the sun; and that, in particular, the sink is enabled to throw off better the impurities of the system.

His example is being followed here. Among the swimers at East Lake, are a large group who make bathing only a part of their health program. For the rest, they spend from four to five hours a week in the sun.

The morning rays tan the skin better, and are more beneficial. To get this completer tan, the sun bathers arrange for several hours weekly in the morning sun with no protection but bathing suits.

Atlanta now has the most thoroughly browned colony of health-devotees in the south.

At the Massachusetts hospital school in Boston, of which Dr. Keller is a graduate, sun baths are used as a treatment, particularly in the case of crippled children. This institution, which is owned by the state, usually cares for several hundred such children, and offers them both the means of treatment and of schooling.

At the outset, their entire bodies are exposed to the sun for 10 minutes a day; and, gradually this time is increased, until they can endure for four or five hours the hottest rays of the sun.

The success of this hospital in the treatment of children has been exceptional.

Dr. Keller, who is a specialist in bone affections, spoke last week of two European physicians who have used sun baths.

One of these has a sanitarium in Switzerland where he treats thousands of little patients, who play in the open air wearing only a breech cloth, even with snow on the ground.

"The rays of the sun," said Dr. Keller last week, "are one of the best tonics the body can have. They tone the skin, they help to repair any weakened condition.

"One effect of having the skin tanned is to put the pores in such condition that one perspires freely. This means that the poisons of the body are thrown off rapidly.

"It is excellent to play golf or other games in the sun. But the trouble is only a small part of the body is then exposed to the sun rays. Only the forearms, face and neck are affected, probably not more than one-eighteenth of the whole skin surface.

"Think how much completer the effect would be if the sun could reach the entire body.

"Take a plant and hide it in a basement. Doesn't it wither? People need the sun just as much. Undoubtedly, we wear too many clothes; and certainly it would be good if everyone could take a sun bath of several hours each week with his whole body exposed.

"Such baths could be continued not only during the summer but throughout the winter. All that is necessary is to keep off the wind.

"Think of the children in Switzerland who play in the snow with no covering except breech cloths. A physician under whom I studied in Boston and who has been to this sanitarium told me that their skin was the most beautiful he ever saw—that it was almost perfect.

"Care should be taken not to expose the body too long at first; because burn by the sun is as bad or worse than any other burn. But, if you begin with only a few minutes' exposure and slowly increase the time of your sun bath, the body finally will be able to endure several hours' exposure with only good results."

What Atlanta Has and Never Sees

ATLANTA has a war picture, battlefields, monuments, a state museum, and a penal institution that, as far as the greater part of the city is concerned, might never exist.

The visitor sees what the native-born Atlantian never takes time to consider.

People travel long distances to study the picture of the "Battle of Atlanta," which is housed in the leaky, wooden cyclorama at Grant Park, but, how often have you seen this picture? how intimately do you know it?

Visitors here are interested in Atlanta as the scene of one of the great sieges of the civil war. But only in one instance are the battlefields that surround Atlanta marked.

In Chattanooga, where the fighting was less severe, bronze columns are set up at intervals to mark events of the civil war. The result has been that many peple go to that city yearly because its historical associations are made evident.

Near DeGress avenue, on the main Decatur car line, is a wooden marker to indicate where DeGress' battery was engaged. But this is practically the only sign anywhere in or near Atlanta to point the scene of important fighting.

Formerly, there was a wooden sign near Ezra church, but this is gone; and the marker on the East Lake car line has also been removed. Not one person in a thousand in Atlanta knows or cares where the battles of the seige of Atlanta were fought.

Not far from Cleburne and Highland avenues are the best-preserved rifle pits and trenches in this vicinity. And, yet, no one knows of them.

Near the Highland Park school is the site of a house used by Sherman as his headquarters. But there is no marker to indicate the fact.

Practically the only monuments are to General McPherson and to General Walker. Do you know where they are?

Did you know that at the state capitol is a museum with specimens of all the natural resources of Georgia?

Have you ever looked from the capitol dome over the city, and seen Atlanta as a whole?

Have you been to Stone Mountain, to see what that is?

Have you visited the federal prison? Do you know it except from hearsay?

PEACE MONUMENT at Piedmont Park, one of Atlanta's historical spots.

Do you know that Decatur street is the most picturesque of southern streets? Have you ever really seen it?

Have you been to the river? To the stockyards? Do you know about the churches of Atlanta? Are you really acquainted with the residence sections?

What do you actually know about Atlanta?

"Dink" Melvin Is Dead

REUBEN JONES, familiarly known to several generations of Albanians as "Dink Melvin," died at the Phoebe Putney Memorial Hospital last night after a long illness, and was buried in Oakview cemetery following a simple service in Vannucci's chapel.

Reuben Jones was about 75 years old, and practically the whole of his life was spent in and around Albany. He was by nature and practice a son of the out-of-doors. He loved the river, the creeks and ponds. He knew the habits of fish, and was more at home in a river bateau than anywhere else. Moreover, he had for years been known as the most expert boat paddler in all this section of country, and up to the time his health failed his services were in great demand by local fishermen.

Added to his skill in handling a bateau was a lively wit, an almost inexhaustible store of quaint ditties and sentimental songs of the long ago, a knowledge of events in the early days of Albany, possessed by few men still living and general ability to be highly entertaining on a fishing or camping expedition. He was a distinctly unique character and his death causes sadness to many who knew him well.

Reuben Jones served as gallantly in the Confederate army as any soldier who wore a gray uniform, and for many years before his death he had been a pensioner of the state of Georgia. He leaves a wife and also a daughter by a former marriage, but no other near relatives.—Albany (Ga.) Herald.

Canned Tongue for Ladies

THE following note, accompanied by a can of tongue, was sent recently to Mrs. Leman, of this city, with the repuest that it be read to the ladies who were present at her party. By either an ingenious bunch of detective work or a tracing back by tongueology, the writer of this note was found to be Mr. R. P. Abraham and the matter has not yet been entirely settled.

Mrs. Leman:

Will you kindly serve contents of can accompanying this to my friend, Mrs. Bob Abraham. Please say to Mrs. Abraham that I am an old Lady who has had much experience and that my advice to all present is to use no other tongue on this occasion than that sent by me, under penalty of being arrested by the U. S. for having cornered the female tongue of LaGrange, Ga.

Most respectuily,

Miss Violet Lilly Tuberose of the Bureau of Information and adviser of Tongueology among ladies over-burdened with all known diseases of the tongue, an epidemic now raging in LaGrange, Ga.

If you should not recognize me by this most wonderful article Mrs. Leman will reveal my name as soon as I reach Hades, as I cannot stop in New York as our friend Jack did.—LaGrange (Ga.) Reporter.

16 Pigs in a Single Litter

J. M. SHEPHERD, generally considered a truthful man, came to the Reaper office Tuesday morning and reported that one of his sows presented him with sixteen pigs Monday. The mother is of common stock, but the sire is pure Duroc. Mr. Shepherd was willing to make oath to the truth of his assertion, but inasmuch as a Bible could not be found in the Reaper office, we let it go at that and depended on his reputation for truthfulness in giving the news item.—Geneva (Ala.) HOW a 17-YEAR OLD ATLANTA ... BOY HOBOED ..THROUGH The WHEAT COUNTRY..

SOON, the western wheat fields will be "calling" again. Young men from every section will turn there to harvest the grain, and, in event of a short crop, they will reap the experience of the 17-year-old Atlanta boy, whose story follows. While he has signed a fictitious name to this account of hardships in the west, the facts are true.

MY NAME is not Dan Eimstone, but that is one of the names I went by in the great northwest and I am calling myself that now, hoping you will never know the difference.

I left Atlanta because the grain fields were calling. Many were the called that year but few the chosen. The sun scorched the regions from the Oregon coast to the headwaters of the Big Muddy; the rain came too late and too heavy. There was little grain.

I arrived in St. Louis with thirteen dollars. Alighting from the train I walked aimlessly into Chinatown. A swarthy young "river rat" who hadn't tasted food in forty-eight hours met me. We filled up on the best beef at a fantan house, and, out of gratitude, the Rat showed me down through the river section.

That night I went to Winnebago, Minn., where I alighted in a drizzling rain. Cold winds from the Canadian snow plains cut through my summer clothes like so many tiny icicles. There was no job to be had in Winnebago, and, at dusk, I boarded the train for Fulda, seventy-five miles west on the South Dakota line. I had only ten cents in my pocket, but the conductor was Irish and the tale I told carried me through.

I arrived at Fulda at midnight. One tiny light burned in all that cold, dark plain. In a little shanty I spent my last dime for food, then crept out into the cold and black to yearn for home.

The constable allowed me to sleep in the little calaboose on the hill; the undertaker was out of town, he said, and he feared I might freeze. I worked in a grocery store in Fulda for six weeks at five dollars per, and then went to the city of St. Paul.

There I landed a position in a restaurant. The proprietor escorted me into a large ante-room where a dozen girls were operating a dish-washing machine.

"John will tell you what to do," he said.

John turned out to be a high-yellow negro.

"Well, you'll have to get a whiter John," I answered, and marched back to the firing line of starvation.

And that was some firing line. Night after night I walked up and down the rain-misty streets, blinking listlessly in the flare of pale white lights that made the cold gloom worse. I was truly a spirit in a glacier star. I dug a ditch with a pick through the new shops of the Great Northwestern railroad. I pumped water in the rain all day out of a ten-foot hole. I slept in the terminal station, dodged the ever-present detectives, and answered their questions when I couldn't dodge. I lived on bananas—a dozen each day. And then I stumbled into McDermott's labor agency.

McDermott's is an institution that hires dagoes and Swedes for the railroads to send down into the swampy jungles where most white men have too much sense to go and niggers not enough nerve. In the half-light of the low-ceilinged room I passed for a Swede and was given a large red card marked "Mellston, Wis." About twenty-five foreigners signed up and received cards. I hung back that night and was the last to board the train. The conductor pushed me back, declaring he had as many as he could take on that trip. A big Scandinavian reached down and pulled me up the step. "He's me brudder," he said, "and we go together." Whereupon, the conductor put one of the Swedes off and I went.

Out of the crowd that were transported to Mellston that night, not one single man tarried. When daybreak broke over the giant steam-shovel and multitude of tram cars on the little tracks that ran over and across the red inclines, there was not even one new worker to report for duty—they had taken the road to the rising sun while the darkness still hovered. I followed the steel rails into a village known as Valley Junction. Here, several hundred Indians were gathered to their yearly festival, and every specimen of Yaqui from the worst that sulks in the hills to the toniest that plays football at Carlisle was on hand, all one big, congenial family of brothers.

I walked another ten miles into the little city of Tomah, and met a drunken farmer who wanted to hire a milker. I took the job. I had never milked, but I tried hard for three days to learn. Then, the milking went wrong, and the farmer dissolved partnership with me.

Here, I entered into those curious "days of the moon."

About the time that supper should have been, I crawled into an empty box car of a freight train just moving out. The car was very unsuitable and the sides swayed as though they would fall in every minute. The train was southbound. Little did I know about that part of the country, and I wondered where I would wake up when I went to sleep. I crawled to the door and watched the dark forests whirl by. Finally, over the black woodland, the moon came up, large and bright. While I looked at it I longed sorely for one thing—home.

We whirled into a town; a trainman put his lantern in at the door and looked into both ends of the car. I sat directly in front of him, hugging against the opposite wall, and he did not see me for the visor of his cap and the lantern light in the eyes. Rain and thunder set in; the old freight pulled out into the storm. The pumping of the car made my head ache dreadfully but finally I fell asleep.

I woke to find the car still, and went to the door. A hundred yards away glided the Mississippi, while to the south rose the spires and factory chimneys of a manufacturing city. It proved to be Lacrosse.

I walked up the tracks to where the railroad spanned the river. There, I met a young man of more or less dashing appearance, cool, good looking and good natured. He gave his name as Overland Slim, and declared he had served in three navies and two armies, also, the Canadian police guards. He took a liking to me and the next two weeks that followed we traveled together. It turned out he was a criminal, wanted in a number of cities.

But while I was with him, he procured all the food—from somewhere. We hid in the straw loft of a sheep car and went to Winona, Minn. There we ate at a Catholic convent; it is, indeed, hard to find anyone kinder than the sisters in one of these institutions. That night we crawled on the bumpers of a northbound freight. The weather was freezing cold and we could never have ridden outside and lived; so we prized open the pigeon-hole door in the end of the car and crept through into the inner blackness. We were gruffly commanded by a voice within to close the door. Overland Slim struck a match and some fifteen motley figures loomed out of the blackness, as rough a crew of cut-throats as one would expect to meet on the Bowery at midnight.

We dropped off at Hastings at daybreak. Once a year all wanderers of the great northwest go to Hastings to sit by the "jungle" fires and tell strange tales of their world wanderings. We found some twenty such fires up and down the Big Muddy at Hastings. Irish potatoes and coffee are cooked over the wind-blown coals; spoons and forks are whittled out of white pine. Politics, sociology, woman's suffrage, prohibition, all these and more are discussed, and one is surprised at the brightness of the mind of the man who wanders up and down the trails of the world.

We remained in the "jungle" camp three days, doing our cooking behind a big rock out of the wind at the

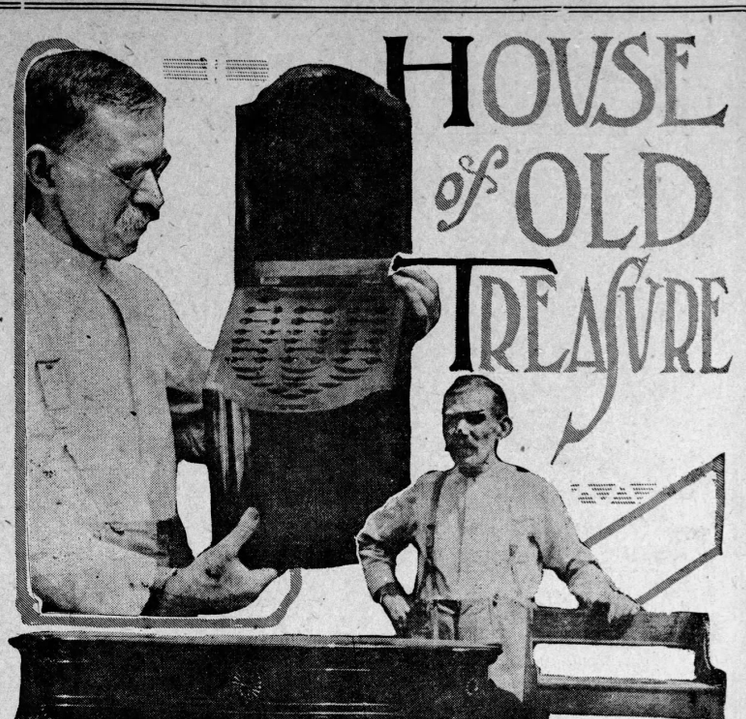
SOPHIE SCHAULS

DAME FASHION had the "Seeing America" maid in mind when she devised the folding hat—the jaunty little "skypiece" that folds up like a bathing cap and slips into the tightest corner of suit case or trunk.

The "Seing America" hat is designed by Mme. Wright of Chicago and it's already very popular with women who travel, either by motor car or Pullman. It is made of emerald green satin in sailor shape; the brim is faced with black pliable black braid, and the crown is stitched in green. Big black satin grapes trim it. There's no straw or wire to bend, and the hat may be rolled small enough to slip into the suit case or even the coat pocket.



HOUSE of OLD TREASURE

By Angus Perkerson.

AS though holding, yellow, pudgy hands, six tables, whose combined age is a thousand years, stand with edges touching. Two firelocks, slender and ancient, yet, stout usuable muskets, lean at opposite sides of the mantel. And near the foot of the bed, a cheap affair squeezed into a corner, as though the old tables resent its newness, rests a mysterious rosewood box.

Under the lid is a tray of sandalwood with 12 little compartments; beneath the tray is a smaller replica; and, on both sides, at the bottom of the box, are small boxes.

In all his dealing with old furniture, his buying and his selling, Michael Fox never saw a companion to the polished square of rosewood. Perhaps it was made for hiding money, perhaps it was a smuggler's; one could think of a thousand "perhapses," and, yet, none would fit exactly.

It has its place at the foot of the bed in the room of old tables, which is the bedroom of Michael, who during twenty years has "prospected" for old chairs, beds, and tables in the long-settled and formerly-wealthy parts of Georgia, as gold-hunters search for metal in Alaska.

He has given a third of his life to this hunt for old things and has sold, perhaps, a million dollars' worth.

Somewhat imaginative seems this figure in the house of odds and ends, of broken bits, of legless chairs, of only two posts of a bed. But treasures have been found by this old searcher for antiques—such rosewood and mahogany as no one sees now; furnishings from the well-established parts of Georgia, from our best cities, Savannah, Columbus, Milledgeville, bought and brought to the parvenue city of Atlanta.

Even the house where he lives, that ancient, black, scaly place at 86 Auburn avenue, is an antique. Six of his eleven years in Atlanta he has used it as a shop and as a home.

All the smoke and dust of the town seems to drift there and settle on the weatherboarded sides. The steps are creaking and uncertain. Michael himself sat in a chair 75 years old, (nothing in the house is of less age) and rocked to and fro, a small cap on the back of his head, spectacles on his nose.

It seemed sacrilege, the gay brazenness of ragtime across the street.

"There are 11 rooms. Would you care to see them all?" he asked.

Eleven rooms! In that drowsy atmosphere the number seemed tremendous. Why not sit there in the other 75-year-old chair and nod over the story of his twenty-years' collecting?

"But I have some rare bits," he suggested. "Some that is old, old." And into his eyes crept a slow fire.

He hobbled almost briskly over the threshold into the long hall.

The dust was thick, the light was soft.

A spider-footed table, with ugly little legs, stood a yard away in a squat, ill-humored pose. A hundred and twenty years ago it had a place in an old mansion at Milledgeville.

A "lyre" chair, ninety years at least, tottered at its right hand on delicate, uneven legs. Then, from the faint light, appeared, broad and good-natured, a desk of a century ago, of oval colonial front, something well-preserved about it, like a age is a thousand years, stand with man of a pink, round face.

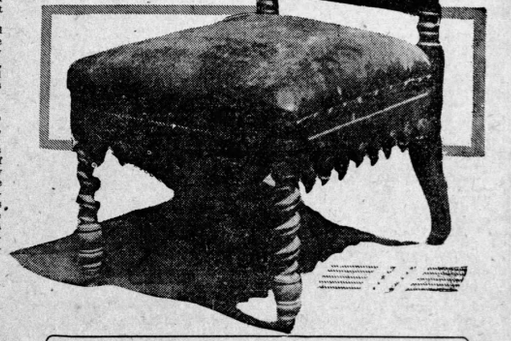
But Michael pushed by these, as by unimportant items in the home of antiquity, and came to a little box on legs, a dark, dull-finished box, that seemed to have no evident use. He tilted back the lid, and brushed the keyboard of a tiny spinet.

The legs were detachable, and the spinet, no larger than a suitcase, was built for an itinerant preacher to wedge into the back of his buggy and carry from church to church.

"You won't find another of those in Georgia," said the old collector. And it did seem the Past itself.

Age looked out from every room. The years seemed piled up in the heaps of chairs and beds and tables.

Delicate satin-wood lined the desks.



MICHAEL FOX and some of the antiques he has gathered from various parts of the south. At the top is a curious old box for holding spoons and other silverware.

Tables opened out with queer flaps that hung down on each side like useless wings. Four-posted beds with overhead supports for a canopy, stood in the corner.

He turned toward the stairs; and, as he mounted the steps, rubbed one hand over the dingy, white railing.

"That's solid mahogany," he said. "Someone painted it white."

So it is. This old, ramshackle house in which Michael Fox lives, this relic of a time when fine residences stood on Auburn avenue, is one of the few dwellings here where mahogany was part of the interior finishings. And, to give a freshness to these old, dark-hued banisters, a former resident covered them with thin paint that is scaly like whitewash.

Michael progressed slowly up the stairs, and turned into the first room on the right—his bedroom. One very small corner, as though the antiques begrudged the space, is left for his bed. The rest is used for the tables, for the flintlock muskets, for the queer little square box of rosewood.

Each of the tables is over a hundred years old, and all together have seen more than a thousand years. The flintlocks (which he has refused time and again to sell) have come down from long, long ago. And there is the little box of which none can tell. The window looks out on Auburn avenue with its everyday rattle and noise; and here Michael sleeps among his thousand-year-old tables.

Formerly he used as a bedroom the observatory on the fourth floor, a small, square room, from which may be seen much of the city and, until a tall manufactory was erected as a neighbor, gave an even more sweeping view.

In reaching this tip-top of the house you first come to a small square room, hardly more than a landing where to stand erect means bumping your head; then, another flight, and the apex of the house of antiques is reached.

The old collector slowly led the way back down the steps and out on the

IF there was anything Moses Dobbs lacked, it was not confidence. Confidence stuck out all over him in large gobs—until he met his Waterloo. Then it deserted him, and bumps and bruises took its place.

Moses looked like the rough side of a battlefield, in court. His face was filled with damage and his body drooped. Where his left eye should have been was a smear, his nose had abandoned its function and the contour of his stomach was depressed. Something had certainly happened to Moses.

"What spoiled you, Moses?" asked the court.

"I flung dat 'mobile 'gin er post," muttered Moses through broken lips. "An' she flung me eb'ry whicherway."

"Ah, I see," nodded the judge. "A drunken chauffeur. Well, I'm tired of this reckless driving. I'll just make an example of you. How long have you been running an automobile?"

"One time," replied Moses morosely. "De man dis cyar b'long to done lef' it standin' front ob mah house. I reckoned I better move it. CRABAPPLE JONES was all cut up when he appeared before the recorder. Court plaster adorned his shimmery visage and his shirt was in shreds. With Crabapple was arraigned his wife, Melinda Jones, a highly respectable colored lady who dipped snuff.

They had been fighting, it was alleged. Some said Crabapple started it, some said Melinda. He said she and she said he. It was a tossup.

Peering at her spouse through spectacles as big as soup-plates, Melinda Jones withered him with her scorn. "An' you call dat er man!" she simmered. "Hit's enough ter mek er rooster mad 'kase he's got two laigs same as him. De Lawd made you ugly an' den hit you in de face. You ole nigger!"

Crabapple grinned beneath this volley of invective. "Dat's all right, Lindy," he protested, "Talk all you want, but don't draw no hatpin on me. See dat scar, jedge? She done dat wid de hatpin. Dat 'oman am de outstabbines' gal I ebber seed."

"What was the trouble?" inquired his honor wearily.

"He sneeze at me."

"She put snuff in mah face whilst I wuz sleepin'."

From these contradictory remarks the recorder finally gathered that while in a state of repose Crabapple had been seized with a violent sneezing spell, in the general direction of Melinda. Whereupon she had done rough work with the hatpin.

"I keep dat pin under de pillar wid mah snuff box fo' jest times as dat," declared Melinda. "An' when dat man start sneezin' at me I wuz fo'ced ter protec' mahse'f."

"Snuff under your pillow?" queried the recorder. "Has it ever struck you that Jones might have upset the box, thereby causing the sneeze? You should have thought of that. I'll give you twenty-one days each to ponder it."

A LITTLE matter of silk shirts resulted in the arrest of Aunt Caroline Love last week. Aunt Caroline's husband got her out of jail. He did this by getting in himself.

Aunt Caroline was accused by various "white folks" for whom she was official washerwoman. They claimed that instead of despatching her duties promptly and with precision, she was in the habit of parcelling the week's clothes among various members of her family, who wore them from Monday, when they were taken to Aunt Caroline's humble home, to Thursday, when she had to get busy on them.

It was by no means unusual with Aunt Caroline's patrons to encounter their garments walking toward them along the street. Father would see his pet silk shirt blazing before his eyes on the chest of some Darktown dandy, and mother could never tell when her white shirt waist would get on the back end of the street car. It was embarrassing, for it caused gossip among the neighbors when the same garments appeared in their proper places later.

Aunt Caroline swore up and down that she was guiltless. "White folks," she declared, "I'se de blackest liar unhung ef I'se teched one er dem cloze sence I got 'em. What's mo', mah ole man ain't tech 'em, no mo' ain't mah chillun. An' ef dat ain't so, I hope I die right heah!"

But the testimony of witnesses made the future dark indeed for Caroline and the judge opened his mouth to pronounce sentence. Then did Tobe, Caroline's husband, hurl himself into the breach.

"Hol' yo' hosses er minute, jedge," he exclaimed. "I'se de guilty man. I done tok dem cloze an' wore 'em, but Ca'line nebber knowed nothin' erbout it. Fo' Gawd, she didn't, jedge. Sen' me up fo' twenty yeahs, but let dat 'oman go."

"Tobe," said the recorder, "I am going to do as you wish. You'll get eleven days and I'll dismiss the case against Caroline. And believe me, Tobe, you have done a good deed in assuming the guilt."

"Well, suh," said Tobe, scratching his woolly head, "hit warn't so much I wanter save Ca'line, but she's de money maker ob dis fam'ly, an' when she don't wash, I don't eat."

HIT wuz mos' painful, jedge, mos' painful," asserted Jackson Hogg. "I sutin'ly hope you am gwine hab dat dawg kilt."

While Jackson spoke his hand strayed caressingly over that portion of himself which had been the immediate objective of a bull dog highly incensed and possessed of an extremely capable set of teeth.

The little incident had occurred in the backyard of one of Jackson's neighbors in the Black Belt. It was heralded by loud cries and culminated in the juxtaposition of Jackson, a picket fence and the dog, in the order named. Parts of Jackson's clothing, however, stayed on the dog's side. He also deemed it good taste to sit down when members of his family approached.

"Dat dawg come at me so sudden I didn't hab no time to grab er rock," stated Jackson. "I put out f'um dar widout no argyfyin', but de dawg ketch me half way. He ruint mah bes' pants, and dat ain't all."

The judge regarded Jackson gravely. "There's something behind this," he began.

"'Deed dey is," interrupted Jackson, rubing himself gently.

"I mean to say," continued the recorder, "What were you doing in that backyard?"

This embarressing question elicited the response that Jackson had been about to "borrow" his neighbor's stewpan. But his neighbor repudiated Jackson. "De bery reason I got dat Nero dawg jedge," declared Jackson's neighbor, "is ter keep folks f'um axin' fo' II'l loans lak dat. An' dis Jackson man wuz atter de stewpan kaze he wuz full er gyarden greens. I hopes you ain't gwiner do nothin' ter dat dawg."

"I'm not," said the recorder, "but you'd better feed him. He's too savage."

Sixteen Children "Raised" in One Little Cabin

CHARLES SHELVERTON, of Austell, Ga., was traveling by buggy over the heights of the Virginia Blue Ridge, just a few weeks ago, when he came to a bit of a cabin below the Meadows of the Dan, which stretch in level greenness half way up a tall range.

A woman with thick brown hair, though she is past 60, stood in the doorway with a two-year-old child at her side; four other children were in the yard; an older boy was chopping wood; another was bringing water from the spring.

"Howdy," said the man from Georgia.

"Howdy," said the mountain woman in the shadow of the little cabin.

The boy bearing the bucket of spring water moved toward the gate and offered the stranger a cool drink.

The man from Georgia drank the dipperful, and confessed there was no fresher spring water even in Georgia hills. Then, he told his business:

As an employe of the United States census bureau, he was traveling through the mountains to make a record of the licensed distilleries which turn into brandy the fruit of the apple orchards.

His next objective was the distillery of John Williams, which was to be found, he heard, just below the Meadows of the Dan. The woman in the doorway nodded down the hill toward where a thin wreath of smoke wound upward. The little cabin was the home of Williams, the smoke ribbon was from the brandy-making distillery.

It needed a day to gather all the facts of this little brewing mill But the interesting news learned by the census-taker was that here, in this tiny cabin, in the shadow of the mountain meadows, has been reared the largest family in the Virginia hills.

Williams, the distiller, who is 70, and his wife, who is 60, are the parents of 17 children, 16 of whom are alive. The youngest is only a little over two years; the oldest has grandchildren. The children, their children, and their great-grandchildren make up the largest family in the south.

They all live in the same community, are for the most part farmers, and have never known sickness.

"How is it," Shelverton asked both Williams and his wife, "that your children have been so strong and well?"

It was the wife herself who gave the answer.

"The reason," she said, 'is they've all been raised on the apple brandy that he (with a nod toward her husband) makes down yonder. We believe up here there's nothing like apple brandy to make a child strong."

The father is a firm Democrat, and the youngest child, which was born March 8, 1913, has been named Woodrow Wilson Williams. The photograph printed here is to be sent to President Wilson.

Mr. Shelverton, who was employed for three months as a representative of the census bureau in Virginia, Ohio, and in the city of Washington, has completed this work and returned to Austell, where he holds the office of mayor.

John Williams, his wife, and 14 of their 16 children. Two daughters are not in the group.

"I found, in traveling through the mountains," he said, "that any money the churches have to spend on missions might very well be spent there. The people are intellignt and good, but many have had no schooling whatsoever.

"They raise a little corn, more whiskey, and still more children.

"You have no idea how poor some of them are. In many cases, a man tilling a farm, has no sort of draft animal but an ox, and his farm often is on the side of a hill, so that, in places, the corn he plants takes root in ground with an incline of 45 degrees.

"I don't believe there would be strong support for foreign missions if people knew how needy the people in our own southern mountains are."

Indian Mound to Tell Story of Georgia Princess

DR. L. G. HARDMAN went up to his Nacoochee Valley farm recently, to superintend the work preparatory to the excavation of an Indian mound which possesses an interesting history. There, Nachoochee, an Indian princess was buried and tradition holds a fascinating romance connected with her life and death.

Archaeologists, representing a New York museum, will excavate the mound, in order to make a scientific study of the lives of the race which once inhabited that section of the country in the years ago. The utensils used, their war paraphernalia, and even the skeletons of the peoples buried there, will afford material for research work. All the interesting excavations will be carried to the New York meseum and the mound will be rebuilt just as it stands today.

ROME, Ga., July—Justice J. Scott Davis, of Cave Spring, stopped planting corn yesterday long enough to plant a home. He was at work in a field when he saw a wedding party coming toward him, and amid the waving grain and under the blue skies, Miss Ode Kelly became the wife of Eugene Formby.

Cane Cut From Sherwood Forest

A WALKING cane, cut from the famous old Sherwood Forest in England, which was sent him by his brother, Calvin M. Hitch, American consul at Nottingham, is the interesting possession of Capt. Robert M. Hitch in Savannah.

Sherwood Forest was the haunt of many of Shakespeare's best-known characters. At one time it was one of the biggest forests in Europe, but now it has been greatly reduced in size by the advance of civilization.

Mr. Hitch went to Nottingham several months ago to accept the appointment as American consul there and when he left, his brother, Captain. Robert M. Hitch, in Savannah, asked him to send him a walking stick from Sherwood Forest.

Captain Hitch received his stick yesterday, wrapped and packed carefully and bearing many postage and import stamps. Captain Hitch commented on the fact that the package had come to Savannah through "the port of Atlanta."

The cane looks very much like an ordinary walking stick that might have been cut from an osage orange heldge of New England. Its handle is curved in simicircular fashion and it is finished in sterling silver. Immediately after receiving it Captain Hitch took it to Van Keuren's and had it engraved with his name and the name of his brother and the statement that the stick was cut from Sherwood Forest.—Savannah (Ga.) $16,270 in Gold Mined in Georgia

THE mine production of gold in Georgia in 1914, according to a bulletin just issued by the United States Geological survey, was 787.06 fine ounces, valued at $16,270, and the output of silver was 67 fine ounces, valued at $37. The production of gold in 1913 was valued at $15,108.

The yield of placer gold was 534.29 fine ounces in 1914, against 414.57 ounces in 1913, and the output from quartz or deep mines was 252.86 fine ounces, against 316.28 ounces in 1913. The precious metals were produced by 26 placers and 11 deep mines in Georgia in 1914.

A total of 1,750 short tons on siliceous gold ores, with an average gold and silver recovery of $3 a ton, was treated in Georgia in 1914, against 2,614 short tons, with an average recovery of $2.51 in 1913.

The proction of gold was contributed by mines in 14 counties, of which Lumpkin county had the largest number of operators and the greatest output, amounting to $4,177. The White county gold production was smaller than usual, so that Rabun county exceeded it by more than $2,500.—Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle.

The Diamond from the Sky

By Roy L. McCardell

Synopsis of Preceeding Chapters

A bitter feud, engendered over an heirloom, "the diamond from the sky," found in a meteor by an ancestor, has existed between Col. Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley. The feud is augmented by the fact that the succession to the Stanley earldom in England may come to an American family. When his wife dies after having given birth to a daughter Col. Stanley buys and substitutes as heir a new born gypsy boy. Three years later the gypsy mother, Hagar, steals the colonel's daughter, who is being reared in secret, and obtains possession of the "diamond from the sky" and a document that holds the secret of the false heir.

When the daughter, Esther Stanley, grows up, Hagar returns with her to Stanley hall. Dr. Lee, exacting as a condition that he keep the "diamond from the sky," adopts Esther in hopes that the supposed Arthur Stanley II., who is Hagar's son, will marry Esther and become mistress of Stanley hall. Blair Stanley, Arthur's cousin, who would be the rightful heir to the earldom if the truth were known, also falls in love with Esther.

In endeavoring to steal the "diamond from the sky" from Dr. Lee, Blair causes the old doctor's death. Arthur assumes the onus of the murder in the hope that he himself will escape and Blair, who is a profligate, will live a straighter life. Hagar and Esther are established in Stanley hall after Hagar has established Blair's guilt through finger print evidence. Blair in the meantime has fallen in love with Vivian Marstein, an adventuress, and, disguised and in possession of the "diamond from the sky," elopes with her, although the marriage ceremony was never completed. Mrs. Stanley, seeing that Esther is the real heir, plans to make friends with her and effect a marriage between her and Blair Stanley, her disgraced son. She reasons that if Esther marries Blair Hagar would withhold any accusations or proofs of his guilt in connection with the murder of Dr. Lee. Esther in the meantime has rifled Hagar's strong box and found proof that she, Esther, is the real heir. She resolves to say nothing about it. At Mrs. Stanley's request Esther and Hagar accompany her to Mrs. Randolph's in Richmond. Burglars loot the train on which Blair and Vivian are riding and take from them the "diamond from the sky." Vivian, enraged, throws over Blair and threatens him with exposure unless he regains the diamond. And of the diamond itself? The robber who carried it was killed, and the horse which he rode fell upon the treasure and covered it up so that it evaded the eyes of the posse. A month later Arthur Stanley, or "John Powell," finds it.

Blair returns to Richmond, and, finding Esther agreeable, courts her in order to arouse the jealousy of Vivian. Hagar's mind, affected by an accident in the gypsy camp, wanders, and Esther learns that in order to restore her to normal condition an operation costing $1,000 will be necessary. Mrs. Stanley offers Esther the money on condition that she marry Blair, but Esther refuses. Arthur, having possession of the "diamond from the sky," amasses a fortune in the California oil fields. He writes secretly to Esther from Los Angeles, and Esther finally decides to seek out Arthur and tell him all.

Arthur by applying the robber's loot as payment intends to save Stanley hall from the hands of strangers and help Esther and Hagar. He employs Tom Blake, the detective, instructing him to defray all of Hagar's expenses and to hold it on Stanley hall. Esther, meanwhile, flees from the Stanleys to escape the persecution of Blair Stanley. She intends to find Arthur. Blake, following instructions, buys Stanley hall. Luke Lovell, the sheriff, by a trick of fate again comes across the diamond from the sky and buys it for a quart of whisky. Arthur as "John Powell," meanwhile strikes it rich in oil and is banqueted in Los Angeles. At the height of the festivities he receives word from Blake that Esther has departed for parts unknown. This blow crushes him. As to the diamond, Luke and his fellow bootlegger quarrel over its possession and the diamond sinks into the Pacific, near Santa Barbara.

Chapter XIII.

UNDER the moon and with the boom of the surf falling dully on his ears, spent, panting, chilled to the bone, Luke Lovell drew his dripping bulk up on the sand. But with returning breath and life came fear. Lovell knew that in the murk waters beneath the moon a brine strangled corpse heaved with the tide. What answer had he to give to his enemies regarding this dead accomplice or his living self? There had been a struggle in the boat, a death combat in the water, a cry across the night, a gurgling, hideous cry, and then silence. And now the shouting crowd upon the pier was searching with eager eyes across the waters for the living or the dead.

And the diamond from the sky? For the first time a thought of it crossed Luke Lovell's benumbed brain. This thought woke him to a pulsing sense of life by the very anguished anger of the recollection that the diamond from the sky was now the diamond beneath the sea! For a brief moment the gypsy shook with an ague of superstitious apprehension, more acute than the physical chill that agitated his aching frame. What curse, what strange influences were about this great gem? For years it had been the precious, quiescent possession of the Stanleys of Stanley hall, and now it moved like some evil living thing through the evil living hands that grasped for it.

It seemed plain now to the terror stricken mind of the half drowned gypsy that no evil hand could hold the diamond. "The Stanley charm against harm" was assuredly a charm for harm, a very devil's fetish when in the hands of those who coveted it without right of possession. In hands alien and evil, the diamond would not abide. And with all the terror of the night upon him, Luke Lovell felt relieved that this talisman of woe to him lay darkling at the bottom of the bay.

Rested now, he rose to his feet and staggered away in the darkness, as he realized the pursuit was coming in his direction. Let the diamond stay with the dead, let the living answer the enigma of the struggle and cries in the night upon the waters as best they might. Luke Lovell resolved on flight and distance between himself and the diamond now in the deeps.

Sunrise finds him far back in the mountains, and such is the influence of the great fear that has been upon him that in the desperation of his acute if not chronic reformation, Luke Lovell asks and secures work in the capacity of blacksmith's helper at a forge at the mountain mines.

Now while he works and works well, for all gypsies are tinkers and smiths when they do or will work, let us see what has become of the others whose destinies are concerned with the diamond from the sky.

Arthur, known as "John Powell," since striking oil has become possessed of the touch of Midas. He prospers and waxes in riches and power and is intoxicated with his own success. It is not that he has lost thought and hopes and affection for Esther, but Esther is far away and he is young and the adulation that men render—and women, too—is sweet to him. Already in the oil fields of California he is known as "The Golden Man." He dreams of empires, as Cecil Rhodes dreamed and realized in Africa. His money is not hoarded, his mind is upon mines, fruit farms, cattle ranches, manufacturing plants, and all forms of financial and commercial activities as well as oil.

The quiet lanes of Virginia, the turmoils of his reckless youth that enlivened them, seem far away. Since he found the outlaws' plunder in the desert and made it the lever with which he moved poverty and hardship from his way, money has become to Arthur a mighty thing. In his ambitious plans and activities, Arthur deems that money will do all. He sends money to his agent, the secretive Richmond detective, Blake, thinking he does well and that this money will aid Esther and Hagar, while he plays with time and destiny at high stakes in far California.

And ever the dark eyes of Vivian Marston are on him. But she keeps aloof and bides her time. Here at last is a prey worth waiting the hour to strike at. She resolves to play the game boldly and well. She has need of helpful assistance, her thought turned to Blair. She knows that for some strange reason, inexplicable to both Blair and herself, Arthur Stanley had sacrificed himself, borne even the onus of murder, confessed by flight, murder he knew himself guiltless of and Blair implicated. But why? This she did not know, nor did she care. She only knew that Arthur would not betray Blair and that Blair would not betray Arthur. She knew that while Blair secretly, yet with intense bitterness, hated his supposed cousin, Arthur had eagerly sacrificed himself for Blair. And now that Arthur, as "John Powell," was indeed a golden man, Vivian remembered his strange attachment for Blair, and thought it well to apprise Blair of the change in the fortunes as well as the name of Arthur Stanley and have Blair come out to the west as a willing and valuable accomplice in her designs to strip the "Golden Man" of all his gold.

In Fairfax, Blair was surprised to receive a brief but amiable letter from Vivian. The letter read:

"Los Angeles, Sept. 4.

"My Dear Boy: Am sorry we parted in anger about the diamond. Arthur Stanley, under the name of 'John Powell,' has struck it rich in oil here. You better join me and let bygones be bygones.

"Lovingly, Vivian."

Blair had crushed the note and wondered. In the presence of Vivian, Blair was as a man under a toxic spell. But he remembered with bitterness her light and scornful dismissal of him. She had married him, given herself to him for the diamond from the sky. He had risked his life for it and her. Yet when the train robbers had despoiled them of the great gem she had thrown him aside and mocked him. And now she needed him and sent for him. Blair was young, full blooded, and evilly unscrupulous and passionate. The sweet and beautiful development of Esther's character and person, now that he was relieved of the intoxicating presence of Vivian, had roused in Blair's breast a longing for Esther that he thought was love.

Was it true, as Abe Bloom, the gambler, had hinted, and Abe Bloom had known the lady of old, that Vivian Marston possessed perhaps several husbands, and that her marriage, secret and hasty to Blair in Richmond, previous to their flight with the diamond, was null and void? Blair's mother had taunted him with this, and had lightly dismissed the thoughts of Vivian and the marriage from her mind. It was Blair's mother, also who constantly inspired him with thoughts of Esther. The very day the letter had come from Vivian to Blair, Blair's mother had received a letter from Lawyer Hunter, the legal adviser to the Stanleys, and who as referee in bankruptcy had charge of the sale of Stanley hall when it went to Detective Blake as highest bidder for some unknown client.

The lawyer had written:

"Dear Mrs. Stanley: In reply to your inquiry, the diamond from the sky is legally the property of any sole heir of the late Colonel Stanley, whether a son or daughter, irrespective of family tradition regarding it and the earldom of Stanley, etc.

"Very truly,

"Ralph Hunter, Sr.,

"Attorney at law."

Mrs. Stanley had shown this letter to Blair.

"You know by suspicions," she remarked. "I believe that this girl, Esther Harding, is the real and only heir to all that Colonel Stanley died possessed of. We have no proof of this, but I believe the gypsy woman, Hagar Harding, possessed such proof, and the girl now has it. Whatever this proof is, it can be assumed that the girl carries it with her, especially now that she has disappeared. She would not be likely to leave so important a document in any hiding place.

"We cannot move in the matter legally, for suspicions are not evidence," Mrs. Stanly went on. "Any lawsuit might mean the return of Arthur Stanley to tell the truth so far as he knows it regarding the death of Dr. Lee. You would be implicated, and the gambler, Abe Bloom, and the detective, Tom Blake, evidently possess proof of your guilt. For while the gypsy woman, Hagar, who has been an imbecile since you struck her, had only photographs of the incriminating thumb prints, it is evident that Blake and the Blooms have the originals—the thumb prints on the bad check and the thumb prints you left in the doctor's study on the cashbox and elsewhere. The price of their silence is the diamond when it comes to light.

"If this girl is the rightful heir of Stanley, the diamond is hers, and if Arthur Stanley is an imposter, the earldom in England is yours. Had Colonel Stanley not been so bitter in his feud with your father or your father so bitter with him, Colonel Stanley would have been too proud not to have accepted the family tradition and turned over the diamond to you as the rightful heir in case the child he expected was a girl.

"We are bound to silence owing to your rash and reckless acts. We must make the best of the situation. If a stranger has bought Stanley hall, the sale is not legal, and if this girl Esther is the real Stanley, the estates must be restored to her, and the diamond from the sky rightfully belongs to her. What will she care for the family traditions, if it ever comes about that she is able to prove, or desires to prove her claim? Doubtless she is keeping silent out of regard for Arthur Stanley.

"There is one simple thing to do, Blair, you must marry this girl. Then you will have a clear claim to the title and you will possess Stanley hall and the diamond from the sky. No matter where the diamond may be, it must ultimately come to light. You can then choose whether you will surrender it to the Blooms as the price of their silence, as is now arranged, or buy them off from the wealth that comes to you as the Earl of Stanley in England."

A WISE WORD BY DR. CHAO

By Bishop Warren A. Candler

DR. T. C. CHAO, of Suchow University, China, is visiting the United States at this time. He is a man of the highest character and of no mean scholarship. He knows conditions in his own country thoroughly, and he is not addicted to making careless and inaccurate statements.

In a recent address at Asheville, N. C., he asserted that there are above 14,000 Chinese students in the colleges and universities of the United States, while only three hundred Chinese students are in the schools of Japan. This is the exact reverse of the conditions which existed nine years ago. At that time the Chinese students who were studying in Japanese institutions were computed to be 10,000 to 15,000; and a far less number were then in America.

In his address at Asheville, Dr. Chao, discussing the present missionary opportunities with reference to the Chinese, is reported to have said:

"First, with the Chinese students in America. If these become Christians, they return to their home lands to be a blessing to their people. Second, the masses in China are eager to hear the gospel of Christ. Crowds aggregating 4,000 and 5,000 at one time frequently listen to American missionaries. Third, China wants American teachers and particularly those capable of imparting industrial education. This education is the wide road to salvation for young Chinese."

It will be noted that this Chinese scholar and Christian ranks first in importance the missionary opportunity presented by the Chinese students now studying in American colleges and universities. In this opinion he is eminently correct. Dr. John R. Mott reached and published the same conclusion some months ago.

Moreover, there are many thousands of foreign students, besides the Chinese students, who are attending American institutions of learning at this time. In our schools are students from India, Japan, Korea, and the countries of Latin-America. Not a few from Europe also have come to our country since the war began.

The educational center of the world has shifted within the last twelve months from Germany to the United States. At the same time the burden of the missionary obligation to give Gospel to the heathen nations has been laid upon our people as never before in their history. The English-speaking nations have for more than a hundred years been the evangelical and evangelistic powers of the world. England and the United States have furnished ninety per cent of both the men and the money sent for the Christianization of the pagan nations. But the war has consumed, and is consuming at a fearful rate the resources of Great Britain; and, hence, the Churches of our country must increase their offerings and intensify their zeal in order to make up the loss thus inflicted by the European conflict upon the cause of foreign missions.

Fortunate it is that so many foreign students have come for instruction to our land. If all of them were in thoroughly evangelical institutions, their return to their own lands would make and mark a new era in the progress of Christianity in the world. But it must be confessed with sorrow that most of them are in the institutions in which rationalism and secularism prevail. The secularists have enriched their institutions of learning in the United States more rapidly and largely than have the evangelical Churches endowed their colleges and universities. Hence foreign students coming to America hasten to educational centers quite removed from, if not positively opposed to, evangelical Christianity. This is to be regretted very much. The American Churches have been quite remiss in discharging their educational responsibilities; and, now, when confronted by an unprecented opportunity and an unparalleled crisis, they are not prepared to meet the situation as it ought to be met.

But it is not too late to regain much of the lost ground. If the Churches will see that their missionary work is involved in their educational institutions, they will not be slow to bring up their colleges and universities to the financial level of the richest secular plants in the United States. They are well able to do it, and they will do it, if they come to any adequate comprehension of the magnitude of the issue involved.

This matter involves the welfare of our own country and the salvation of mankind; for it involves the life and power of evangelical Christianity which is the hope of the world. "The ends of the earth have come upon us."

Let those who are zealous for the cause of Foreign Missions understand that, if the foreign students who come to America for education attend institutions which are permeated by rationalism, they will return to their own lands to become the most obstinate obstacle to the progress of evangelical Christianity in those countries. The cause of Christian education is now more than ever the cause of Missions.

Here and there we find a man who fights both Christian schools in the United States and Foreign Missions to the heathen. Such men are the advocates of darkness for both sides of the world. They are the enemies of light and the apologists of ignorance, iniquity, and idolatry. To waste words on such perverse minds is the veriest folly. Argument is lost on them; for that which is not founded in reason can not be removed by reason.

The answer of the Churches to all such advocates of darkness is more aggressive activity on behalf of Christian schools in America and Christian Missions in heathen lands. This is their duty to both God and man.

If they fall short of the faithful and full discharge of this weighty obligation, their "sin will surely find them out." All nations are now near neighbors, and, hence, at no distant day the whole world must be a Christian world or a godless world. If the earth is not speedily Christianized, it will be swiftly paganized. Already pagan forces are at work in our land. The heathenism of secularism is active and arrogant. It is supported by a host of pagan forces operating in the political, commercial, and social spheres of life. The sanctity of the Sabbath is trampled under foot, and the churches are forsaken for golf courses, concerts, and such like. What must be the outcome of all these things, if the Christian forces of the country do not overcome these evil tendencies soon? But can we have Christian forces without Christian faith, and can faith survive in the absence of Christian institutions?

Discussing this matter some time ago, I said what I repeat now with emphasis:

"It is impossible to have institutions that will serve the ends of evangelical Christianity unless the Churches erect, endow, own and control such institutions. States can not make such institutions and irresponsible boards (miscalled independent) will not. Only the Churches can and will.

"In this matter Southern Churches have peculiar obligations. The South is pre-eminently the home of evangelical Christianity. The degenerate forms of rationalistic religion have never been able to take root and flourish in our section. Southern Churches, therefore, can make evangelical institutions of learning more easily than can the Churches of other sections. The Southern atmosphere is friendly to the growth of such establishments.

"We may do a work in our colleges and universities now which will promote envangelical Christianity to the ends of the earth.

"In Latin-America especially we may do a great work.

"Students from Mexico, Central America, the West Indies and the Northern parts of South America would prefer to attend universities in the mild climate of the South rather than institutions in the colder regions of the North, provided they can find equal advantages in our section. Herein is a great missionary opportunity and obligation. What will we do with it?

There is much talk of securing for our country the trade of Latin-America, and that is a most important matter. But it is far more important to become the educator of Latin-America. The North American and South American Continents can not be bound together firmly by ties of commerce alone. They will become fast friends when they think and feel alike. Our Universities, if they are richly endowed and adequately equipped, will serve this end more effectually than all the consuls and commercial agents who have been or can be engaged to accomplish it. In this matter our commercial interests and our religious duty coincide."

CONCERNING HEALTH AND BEAUTY

BY MRS. HENRY SYMES

MAKING the INVALID COMFORTABLE in SUMMER

A Green Screen to Keep Out the Glare

IT IS a well-known fact that the surroundings of an invalid will do much to emphasize her misfortunes or to make her forget them altogether. Consequently, we should do all within our power to make the invalid comfortable, not only in the summer, but at all times. However, it is during the summer that sick persons are most uncomfortable, and for this reason we shall consider what may be done to change conditions for them.

A patient who is forced to remain indoors during the flower season will be duly grateful to any one who will bring a bouquet to her, and thus bring her in touch with the outdoors. One precaution for the nurse or the person who has charge of the sickroom: Never allow heavily scented flowers to remain in the sickroom for a very long time, and be sure to remove all flowers at night time. They throw off gases which make the atmosphere almost unbearable. Another thing to be remembered is the necessity for weeding out the dead flowers from the bouquet every morning and changing the water.

No one should be so cruel as to allow a patient to be annoyed by a glare. By placing a screen beside the bed this annoyance can be avoided. A green silk or silkaline covered screen would be the best selection, for the color is restful to the eyes, the material also being thin enough to let the cool breezes pass through.

Apropos of screens, always be most careful to shield the patient's eyes from the light falling from a gas jet, an electric light fixture or from a lamp. If you are unable to make a shade for the light at home, you should have no trouble purchasing one at the shops.

On a sweltering hot day nothing would be more welcome to an invalid than an electric fan. I heard of a woman the other day who lent her electric fan to an invalid during the whole summer season. I don't think an act of charity was ever more appreciated than that, and the woman said she derived just as much pleasure in lending the fan as the patient derived comfort from it.

In many homes an electric fan would be of no use, or it may be out of the question for an invalid or her relatives to procure a fan. Then the next best thing must be considered. This is in the form of a wet sheet hung by the open window. Indeed, it may be used with the fan. If you have never tried this you should do so. You are bound to be surprised at the change in the temperature of the room. It is a hint to be observed by healthy persons as well as by the sick.

Of all the annoying things with which a patient has to deal I think a buzzing fly is about the worst. You know what tortures you go through when lying peacefully in the hammock under the trees and a fly and many of its relatives surround you, singing in chorus, occasionally stopping to give you a caressing peck, which nearly causes you to jump a foot. Well, then, have pity on the defenseless invalid. Don't fail to "swat the fly" whenever you see one, especially one that is hovering over the bed.

Under sanitary rules, all pictures, draperies, rugs, etc., should be removed from a sickroom. This is all very well for a room which a patient, seriously ill, is to occupy, but for a patient who is a life-long invalid a room devoid of some of these things would be cold and barren. Heavy draperies and rugs should go, but lighter things can be substituted to make the place more attractive. Pictures do much to entertain a patient, especially if they are selected with care. One man who has an invalid sister makes it a point to have the pictures in her room changed at frequent intervals so that she will have something different to think about.

Change the patient's pillows often so that the head will find a cool spot. Feather pillows are very warm things to lie on. If possible, get an air cushion for the patient to use when desired. Should this be out of the question, a hair or a pine pillow will do as a next choice. Fresh, smooth pillows and sheets afford great comfort to invalids.

No definite word can be said about the food for a patient. Her diet depends upon the nature of her malady. One thing, however, should be borne in mind. Any one who is called upon to care for a sick person should know that it is a mistake to bring a large quantity of food to a patient. It is better to bring less than you think she will be likely to eat; a little more can easily be added. The sight of too much food will sometimes take away a patient's appetite entirely.

Food should not be kept in the sickroom, since it is deteriorated by the air there, and, too, the continual presence of the food would be likely to check a patient's appetite. Under no circumstances should food removed from a sickroom be eaten by other members of the family. It should be thrown away or burned.

An invalid who is under a doctor's care will derive more benefit if the nurse follows the doctor's orders.

One thing in particular which should be remembered by not only those who nurse the invalid, but by those who call to see her; that is, the importance of cheerful talk. Don't think you are comforting a patient when you tell her she might be worse and then relate a sad story about an unfortunate friend who is worse off than she. It is difficult for those of us who are well to be philosophical about our trials and tribulations, but it is many times harder for a person with an undermined health to see things just the way you do. Of course, I realize that there are some invalids who are greatly encouraged and strengthened by the comparison, but it is advisable not to take a chance of causing a patient's temperature to soar because of your remarks, which she thinks are due to hard-heartedness. The best way to make an invalid forget her pain is to bring mental sunshine into her room. If you are unable to give her original words of comfort and cheer, bring quotations. They help wonderfully. The oil of cheerfulness is so cheap that you should pour it over the suffering whenever you have an opportunity. It will often prove more beneficial than medicine. Start now to make the balance of the summer more endurable for some person whose invalidism is keeping her indoors.

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

Mrs. Chester Adams most cordially invites her friends to bring to her their Social Problems and Perplexities by letter at any time

[If a personal reply is desired, a self-addressed stamped envelope should be inclosed.]

THE PROPER INTRODUCTION

PERHAPS more people experience a feeling of self-consciousness when making or receiving an introduction than at any other time in their social careers. They stammer and flush, and altogether mix up what is really a very simple process, but which, under the stress of embarrassment, becomes for them a perfect bugbear. There are only a few main points to be remembered about making an introduction or receiving one, and after that the introducer and introducees may give their personalities full swing, and thus bring into the introduction an individuality that makes the presentation memorable.

In the first place, don't bring people together who should never meet if there is no occasion or necessity for their meeting. Promiscuous introductions are a thing to be avoided like hot cakes in hot weather; they are foolish and won't mix. There is no necessity when you stop for an exchange of formalities on the street or in a shop to introduce your companion in a solemn manner. If the conversation promises to be long-drawn-out, or at all general, then introductions are in order; otherwise, they are just a stretching of a point of etiquette. It is very nice to have your friends know each other, but, again, it is often far better that they should not become acquainted with each other. Their mutual friendship with you is not always sufficient to balance natural antipathies in each other. One girl showed exceptional wisdom in keeping from meeting two very dear friends, whom she loved so dearly that she would not run the risk of their possible dislike for each other.

"What shall I say when I am introduced to a young man?" writes Miss Sixteen to me every day. In the first place, Miss Sixteen, you are not introduced to a young man, rather he is presented to you by some one who either first asks your permission or knows that you will not object to meeting the stranger. The proper order of introduction is a man to a woman every time, mentioning the woman's name first, as "Miss Brown, let me present Mr. Black," or "Miss Brown, I do not think you are acquainted with Mr. Black," or simply, "Miss Brown, Mr. Black." A younger woman is always presented to an older woman, and a younger man to an older man if there is much disparity of age. In introducing one person to a party of people try to do it as gracefully as possible, mentioning the newcomer's name first, as "Miss Brown, let me present Mr. Black; Miss White, Mrs. Green, etc." It is an awkward and embarrassing situation to make the rounds of a party with a newcomer and to introduce him to each in turn. One thing to remember in making an introduction is to get the names distinctly. If you are not sure of a name don't mumble it, but rather ask the person himself to repeat it. A man gains a very enviable reputation for cordiality, who can approach some one dimly remembered, and, with outstretched hand, say frankly, "How do you do? My name's Black; I forget your name."

"But what shall I say when a young man is presented to me and says he is glad to know me?" repeats Miss Sixteen. You can be very formal, and merely smile and nod the head in recognition of the introduction, or if you are at all inclined to cordiality of manner, you may extend your hand, and either repeat his name, or say, as many girls nowadays do, "How do you do, Mr. Black?" A woman never says, unless welcoming a strange guest to her home, "I am pleased to meet you," or "glad to know you," to a man, and, for that matter, many men nowadays do not indulge in this formality, rather repeating the woman's name with a bow. A woman never rises when a man is presented to her, unless, of course, she is hostess; but she should rise to receive an introduction to an older woman who is presented to a group, and usually when another woman is presented to her. It is a point to be remembered to get as distinctly as possible the name of the person presented to you, even asking them to repeat it, if necessary, rather than forfeit it afterward in the enduing conversation.

After all, there is really very little to disconcert one in making or receiving introductions if one just keeps perfectly cool and acts as if meeting strangers were the chief business in life—which it really is, in a way.

Afternoon Tea Difficulties

My dear Mrs. Adams.

When serving afternoon tea to a caller or callers, does the hostess drink with her guests?

Should one hand a servant when a dish is passed?

How is lobster or crab eaten? Should one cut a raw oyster with a fork when they are very large?

INQUISITIVE.

If the callers are not many and the tea table duties are not heavy, it seems more sociable for the hostess to take her cup of tea with her guests.

A "thank you" is never wasted even on a servant, although many people think it belittling to thank a servant for a service. Do not make your thanks obtrusive, but "No, thank you," is as easy to say as "None for me," or "I don't wish any coffee."

It is permissible to take the claws of boiled crab or lobster in the fingers in order to pick the meat from it with your fork. An oyster should be eaten whole. For this reason very large oysters should not be served on the half shell or in a cocktail.

The Oyster Fork

My dear Mrs. Adams.

Please tell me where the oyster fork is placed when setting the table for a dinner party.

BRIDE.

The oyster fork is placed at the right beside the spoons and knives. It should be laid outermost, with its prongs upward.

Folding the Napkin

My dear Mrs. Adams.

Should one's napkin be folded at a hotel or restaurant?

ORLA D.

No, one's napkin should not be folded after a meal in a hotel or restaurant, as such an establishment changes the table linen for each meal.

Length of a Wedding Veil

My dear Mrs. Adams.

May a bride wear a short wedding dress without a train? Should a long or short veil be worn with a trainless wedding dress?

MARIE.

The brides of this year have been wearing many short, dutton wedding gowns with long trailing veils and others with the short lace veil. The most dignity is obtained with the combination of trained gown and long veil.

A Word About Baths

BATHS play so important a part in the routine of our daily life that not too much importance can be attached to the proper kind of baths and the time for bathing. We take a bath to cleanse, refresh and to build health. The value of the proper bath cannot be overestimated as a health-building process. While medical authorities differ on the number and comparative values of cold and hot baths, they do agree on one point that the daily bath is a necessity for health and clean living. The skin is the breathing apparatus of the body, through its thousands of pores the body sends out its oily excretions and perspirations, which are healthy in themselves, but which should not be allowed to accumulate into hardened masses of crusts and scarf-skin. The body should be kept clean to allow for growth of new skin tissues and the escape of healthy excretions.

For those in good health it is not too much to recommend two baths a day, a warm bath at night before retiring, with soap and a flesh brush, to remove the dust and grime of the day, and a cold plunge in the morning while the body is still warm from the bed, to stir up circulation and refresh the body for the day's work. There are many who cannot stand a cold plunge. It is really a thing that one can become accustomed to, by making the water a trifle colder each morning until the body can stand a bath that is quite cold. Do not remain long in the water and finish with a good rubbing with a rough towel. A cold shower is a good substitute for the cold plunge, and another way of accomplishing the cold morning bath is to fill the tub with water just above lukewarm and gradually lower the temperature by adding cold water. If there is any doubt about the healthfulness of the cold morning bath, one should consult a physician as to whether one's particular constitution can stand the slight shock of the cold water.

As to the warm bath at night, there are many who cannot stand the weakening effect of warm water. In a case of this sort, it would be well to omit the warm bath every other night, making the morning plunge answer instead for the daily bath.

Baths should not be taken immediately after eating, or a warm bath just before going out into the air unless it has been followed by a cold shower to close the pores.

A Blackhead Lotion

My dear Mrs. Symes.

Please publish the formula for blackhead lotion containing brandy.

Following is the formula for which you ask:

Lotion for Blackheads

Pure brandy	2 ounces
Cologne	1 ounce
Liquor potassa	½ ounce

P. K.

Weighs Too Much

My dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you kindly tell me how tall a girl of 16 ought to be, and how much she ought to weigh? How can I reduce my weight? What food shall I eat? What will make my face thin? Is chewing gum harmful?

YOUNG SINCERELY.

Many people chew gum for indigestion with good results, while others claim that it makes one nervous and is bad on the teeth. There is no specified height for a girl of 16. The height of the ideal woman is five feet five inches, with a weight of 130 or 135 pounds. To reduce weight, follow these directions:

For General Reduction of Flesh

Avoid all starchy and sweetened food, all cereals, vegetables containing sugar or starch, such as peas, beans, corn, potatoes, etc. Have your bread toasted; sprinkle it with salt instead of using butter. Milk, I regret to say, if it be pure and good, is fattening. Skimmed milk may be drunk. Hot water is an excellent substitute for other liquids. Add a little of the juice of limes or lemons to it, if you choose. Limit your sleeping hours to seven at the outside. No naps. You must take exercise.

If you cannot walk at least five miles a day, go to one of the institutions where mechanical massage is given. Several of my correspondents report excellent results from this method of getting the vigorous exercise they require. The system is thoroughly wholesome and not expensive. In reducing flesh one fact to recollect is that fat is carbon. Oxygen destroys carbon or carbon. You must consume the carbon by the oxygen you take through your lungs. The more exercise the more oxygen and consequent destruction of fat by the one healthful method of curing obesity.

The more starch and sugar you eat the more carbon to burn away.

Weight Reduction

My dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you please tell me how to take the epsom salts baths to reduce weight?

BROWN EYES.

The epsom salts baths for weight-reduction are not generally to be recommended, as they are apt to leave the skin shrunken and flabby. If you wish to run this risk, however, use the salts in the proportion of one pint of salt to one gallon of water.

Toilet Vinegar

My dear Mrs. Symes.

Kindly print a formula for a toilet vinegar.

Mrs. R. R. R.

Following is a formula for a very refreshing toilet vinegar to place in bath or water for the face:

Toilet Vinegar

Lavender flowers	7 ounces
Alcohol	8 fluid ounces
Diluted acetic acid	56 fluid ounces

Face Is Shiny

My dear Mrs. Symes.

I have a very good complexion and do not need to use powder or rouge, except a little talcum powder to take the shine off my face. But my skin is oily, especially my forehead. Is alcohol good for this? I wish to discontinue the powder. Is there any substitute I can use?

ANON.

Alcohol is very cooling and will relieve the greasy condition of the face. Do not use it too frequently, or too strong; a little toilet water will answer the same purpose. The following lotion is also very effective and will take the place of powder, if you do not wish to use the latter:

Lotion for Oily Skin

Boracic acid	1 dram
Distilled witch hazel	4 ounces

Apply with a piece of old linen or a bit of absorbent cotton.

Hair on the Face

My dear Mrs. Symes.

How much does it cost to have hair removed from the face by means of the electric needle? Do powder and cold cream cause the hair to grow? Will you please publish a formula for an inexpensive face powder for brunettes and blondes?

GERTRUDE.

Different experts with the electric needle have different grades of prices, so that I cannot give you one specified price; but the process is usually an expensive one.

Many beauty experts claim that cold cream does not increase the growth of the hair on the face, while others assert that it does. Vaseline and creams containing lanolin may promote hair growth, but the friction by which the cream is rubbed into the skin is what really excites the growth of the hair.

(A Toilet Powder)

Starch powder	½ pound
Powdered orris root	1 ounce
Oil of geranium	15 drops

Crush free from lumps. Add the perfume a drop at a time.

To make a pink powder for the face, add carmine to above recipe. It is best to mix the carmine with alcohol first and then add to the toilet powder.

Blistered Heel

My dear Mrs. Symes.

Every time I get a pair of new shoes they rub blisters on my heels. They are most painful and I would like a remedy.

READER.

Have the shoes hammered at the back of the heel to soften them up before wearing. Soap rubbed on the stocking will often prevent blistering. When the heel is already blistered, protect the tender or broken skin with a bit of medicated gauze and strips of adhesive plaster.

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Having It Out

MY DEAR Mrs. Adams,

I want to ask your advice about this question. I went with a certain boy only once, and heard a report something be said about me which is not true. Please tell me if I should ask him about it, and how should I do so?

WORRIED.

If the slander was not very harmful I would ignore it and the person who told you. There is always the possibility that scandal may be set on you by another is false or groundless, and to ask it aggravates the situation when you question the supposed originator of the lie. If the falsehood which you have heard that the boy told about you is serious, then I would write him a note asking him to come and talk the matter over with you, and give him a chance to vindicate himself before you accuse him of the lie. It is always just as well not to give too free an ear to scandalmongers. A person who will willfully carry news of a lie to you wants to make trouble and his veracity is to be doubted. A true friend who has only your interests at heart will find another way to warn you against one whom he thinks unworthy of your confidence.

Should the Man Pay?

My dear Mrs. Adams.

Will you kindly let me know through your social columns whether under the following circumstances a man should or should not pay for a woman's lunch? A woman goes to a restaurant and has already ordered her lunch when a man friend of hers, accompanied by his friend (a stranger to the woman), comes in, and the man, with the woman's permission, takes seats at the same table. They eat their lunch together and after the friend has asked the woman to have something more, which she refuses, the woman (compelled to leave before her companions have finished their lunch) asks the waiter for her check, which she receives and pays. Was it the right or duty of the man to suggest paying for her lunch, considering that they were old friends? Was it proper for him to allow her to pay for it without any suggestion of payment on his part?

CONSTANT READER.

The fact that the man friend asked to seat himself and his friend at the woman's table and that he asked her to have "something more" would argue that he should at least offer to pay for the check. She was right in asking for her check and in paying it, and had she asked the man friend to sit at her table and if he had not suggested her ordering something further he would have been acting but consistently when he did not offer to pay for her lunch. Unless a man expressly asks a woman for lunch or to any place of amusement he is stretching a point of etiquette when he offers to pay her way upon an accidental meeting. Women are more independent in these wage-earning days and are often more able to pay their way than the man who offers.

Wedding Decorations

My dear Mrs. Adams.

For a church wedding in the country could "ribbon grass" be used for decorations, combined with other ferns and grasses? It is, as you know, a wide, long leaf, variegated white and green, and very graceful. Do autumn leaves make a pretty setting for a wedding?

Please tell me the order in which the bridal party enter and leave the church.

F. D. L.

Either decoration which you suggest should make a very pretty setting for a church wedding. Have a few cut flowers, with a background either of the grasses or autumn leaves.

In entering the church, the ushers walk first, two by two, then the bridesmaids two by two, then the maid of honor alone, the flower girl if there is one, and lastly the bride on the arm of her father or nearest male relative. They meet the groom and best man at the chancel steps. In leaving the altar, the bride and groom precede, with the flower girl before them, if there is one, then the maid of honor and best man, and each bridesmaid on the arm of an usher.

CANNING AND PRESERVING.

IN response to my plea for recipes for canning from those who have tried the instructions and proved them good a number of letters have come which will prove of interest to the housekeeping Cornerites. I give a selection from them below.

"I have derived so much pleasure in many ways from the Helping Hand Corner that I want to tell you my method of canning fruit.

"I always clean my jars when the fruit is first emptied from them and when ready to can I wash and scald the jars, lids, and rubbers in hot water, placing the jars where they will drain (the mouths downward), and heat slowly. I dry the lids and rubbers and place them where they will get hot, but not too hot.

Then I have a pan on the stove with water in it; when the jars and fruit are ready I place the jars in the pan of hot water with paper or cloth in the bottom of the pan to prevent the jars bursting. I fill them, lift them on the table, and seal immediately. I always take pains to have the mouths of the jars, the lids, and the rubbers thoroughly dry, and I never lose any fruit. MRS. E. R. A."

These instructions are valuable as far as they go, but they do not supply the information needed for the beginner who wishes to put up fruit. That such knowledge is in demand is indicated by the two following requests:

"I am anxiously awaiting the recipes for canning and preserving. This industry has in the past been a source of pin money for me and already I am receiving calls for fruit. I want to learn all the new ways possible of preserving them.

"MRS. E. H. M."

The last wish would give a good deal of work to any one who attempted to answer it. "All the new ways" would require more space than I am afraid we can grant, but we shall do the best we can.

"I see that you answer all questions people ask, therefore I would like to know how to can tomatoes and snap beans so that they will keep all the winter. M. S."

The writer of this letter encloses stamp for reply, apparently overlooking my oft-repeated statement that it is impossible to send recipes by mail. I am glad, however, to give directions for canning vegetables and consider myself fortunate in having received a practical letter on the subject from which to quote.

CANNING VEGETABLES.

"You ask for information as to good methods of canning and I am glad to give you mine for putting up certain vegetables. Truth compels me to say that while my beans and tomatoes never spoil I have never had any real luck in canning corn. But I do put up tomatoes and corn together and they keep finely. Here are my methods of canning the vegetables I mentioned and if they are followed exactly there is no reason why they should ever be a failure.

To can string beans I take the strings from each side of the bean, unless I can get the so-called string less beans. Even these will stand a little watching for strings. I use either the green or the wax beans, cut them into pieces about an inch long, put them over the fire in warm water and boil until they are tender, but not soft. I season them with salt and pepper, and take the beans out of the pot with a skimmer. I have my jars standing close by in a pan of hot water. Put in the beans until the jars are full to the top, boil up the water they were cooked in and skim it, and then fill the jars with the liquor until they are overflowing. I have the lids and rubbers close at hand and screw down the tops at once. Always be sure that the rubbers are soft and flexible, for if they are hard and stiff they will crack and admit the air.

"I have two ways of canning tomatoes. For one I use the medium sized tomatoes and have them all as nearly the same size as I can. I drop them into boiling water and then slip off the skins and cook the tomatoes a few at a time—just enough to fill one jar. If the tomatoes are a fair size you can't put in more than six or seven. I put the tomatoes into boiling water, cook them for eight minutes, take them out with a skimmer, pack them into the jar, fill up with the boiling water, and seal. They are good and by doing a jar or two a day I get quite a large supply by the end of summer.

"When I can stewed tomatoes I scald and peel the tomatoes, put them in a preserving kettle, bring to a boil, and cook for fifteen minutes. I pour off the extra liquor, season the tomatoes with salt and a little pepper, and can them boiling hot, sealing at once.

"For corn and tomatoes boil twenty-five ears of corn tender, cut the corn from the cobs while it is hot, peel and chop up a couple of dozen ripe tomatoes, mix these with the corn, salt to taste, and bring to a hard boil in a preserving kettle. I only cook for two minutes after they have come to the boil, then turn them into the jars and screw the tops down at once.

"I hope this letter may help some other housekeeper. R. T. J."

I am sure it will be of genuine assistance to all housekeepers who have vegetables to put up and I only wish I had another like it containing instructions for canning fruit. As it is I take pleasure in giving these and a few directions for preserving from my own experience.

CANNED PEACHES.

Peel and stone firm, ripe peaches, cutting each in half and dropping the pieces into cold water. When all are done allow a cup of sugar to each four quarts of fruit, put a cup of water in the bottom of a preserving kettle, on this a thick layer of peaches, sprinkle these with sugar, add more peaches and sugar, and continue in this order until all are used. Set the kettle at the side of the stove or over a low flame, bring slowly to a boil, and cook for fifteen minutes. Can while boiling hot and seal immediately. A safe precaution is to invert a thick plate in the bottom of the kettle before putting in the fruit. This is the best protection against scorching and sticking.

CANNED PEARS.

Peel firm pears of uniform size, dropping each into cold water as soon as pared. Do not remove the stems and be sure that the pears are perfect, without specks or worm holes. Allow a quart of water and a half pound of granulated sugar to every quart of fruit; bring the sugar and water to a bubbling boil in a preserving kettle and drop the pears into this. Cook steadily, but not hard, until the pears are tender enough to be pierced with a straw. Put the fruit into wide mouthed jars, bring the sirup again to a hard boil, fill the jars with this, and seal at once.

CANNED PLUMS.

Wash and wipe ripe plums and pierce each with a needle, to prevent their bursting. Allow a cup each of sugar and water to six quarts of the fruit, bring the sugar and water to a boil in a preserving kettle, lay in the plums, and when the boil is restored simmer for five minutes. Lift the plums out with a split spoon, pack them into the jars, pour in the boiling sirup, and screw on the tops at once.

CANNED APPLES.

Peel, core, and quarter tart apples, throwing the pieces into cold water as soon as ready. Allow one pound of granulated sugar to four pounds of apples. Lay the apples in a preserving kettle with just enough water to cover them and cook slowly until the fruit is tender. Put a cup of water with each pound of sugar and bring them to a boil. After boiling four minutes lift the apples from the water with the skimmer, place them in the sirup, simmer for one minute, and put into jars. Seal at once. These make good pies and apple sauce.

PRESERVED PEACHES.

Select firm white peaches, peel, stone, and weigh them, allowing a pound of granulated sugar for each pound of fruit. Place the fruit and sugar in a preserving kettle in alternate layers and put the kettle where the contents will heat slowly. Simmer after a boil is reached for half an hour, or until the peaches are tender enough to pierce easily with a fork. Take out the peaches with a skimmer and spread them out on flat plates. Boil the sirup until thick and clear, removing the scum from the top as it rises. Put the fruit into wide mouthed jars, pour in the boiling sirup until it overflows, and screw the tops on at once.

PRESERVED PEARS.

Peel pears as for canning, without removing the stems. To each pound of fruit allow a pound of sugar, put the fruit and sugar in the kettle in alternate layers and proceed precisely as directed for preserving peaches.

PRESERVED WATERMELON RIND.

Remove the green outside rind of the melon, scrape out the soft inside, and cut the firm white portions into strips, squares, or triangles. Cook in water to cover it until tender enough to pierce. Make a sirup by boiling together two and a half pounds of granulated sugar and a quart of water, skimming frequently. When the sirup is clear drop in the rind, cook until clear, take out, and lay on platters. Add a sliced lemon and a little sliced ginger root to the sirup, boil ten minutes longer, pack the rind in jars, fill these to overflowing with the boiling sirup, and seal.

The rinds of citron melon, known in some parts of the country as "pie melons," may be preserved in the same way. The preserves should not be used for a few weeks after making, as they improve by ripening.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

"THE inquiry of R. C. B., I will answer that this is the way in which I prepare a batch of my favorite cheese. The best time to prepare it is usually from March until the latter part of June, or a little later.

Put a saucepan containing thick, clabbered milk on the stove, and let it come slowly to the point of boiling. When it reaches this put it aside to cool. After it is cold, pour it into a colander cover with a plate which must be small enough to fit down into the colander, and rest on the curd. Place a weight on the plate so that the curds may be pressed dry, a process which will require twelve hours or more. Then put the cheese into an earthen jar, salt to taste, and rub the cheese with over the hands until the curds are like fine crumbs. Cover the jar again and set it on the kitchen table near the stove, where it is warm, but not hot.

Every twenty-four hours for four or five days the cheese must be thoroughly stirred, until it is what I call ripe. At this stage put into a skillet a lump of butter the size of an egg, add the cheese, let it come to a good boil. Stir constantly. Put it out on a platter, when cold, slice it, and it is ready to serve. I hope all lovers of home made cheese will try this recipe, for the cheese made by it is delicious. Practice makes perfect, and if it is not a complete success at once it should be tried again and again until it comes right.

I have a delicious recipe for cheese cake, also one for Spanish chili beans. I will be glad to send them on if you think any one would like to have them.

"M. M. M."

I am sure the recipes would be as gladly welcomed by others as by myself, and I hope we shall have them before long. I shall also hope that one or more of the Cornerites will try the recipe for cheese and let us know the result. I suppose the only uncertainty about the result comes in the possible failure to discern just when the product has reached the ripe stage. Also I am at a loss to know why it is not as well to make it at one time of the year as at another. Why should the period from June to late June be better than further on in the summer? I hope M. M. M. will write and enlighten us on this when he sends the recipes she offers.

Suggests an Exchange.

"I wonder if any of the Cornerites would like some seed of the beautiful desert lily. I would like in return or exchange samples of filet crochet suitable for pillow slip edging or the ends of towels. I would also like some pretty edging for the mile a minute.

"MRS. E. F."

I have no doubt that any of our correspondents who live where the climate is hot and dry enough to raise the desert lily would be glad to have the seed, and I hope that those who wish it may also be able to offer the filet crochet patterns asked in return or exchange.

The Mother Employed.

"I meant to write sooner in reference to the old mother dependent upon her daughter. Since reading the letters you have printed on the subject it seems to me more than ever that my word is needed. Let us analyze the situation and see for a moment just what it means to each of the persons who are interested.

"To the daughter it means mortification that people should know (or think) that her mother needs to earn money. To the mother it means, first, some necessities or luxuries she could not otherwise have; second, independence, and last, but not least, the firmer grip on body and mind that having some work to do is bound to give her. Lacking this last, the brain begins to decay and we have the dreadful examples with which all of us are familiar of elderly persons whose minds have given way, and who have become mere animals, swayed by the instincts or the impulse of the moment.

"If the daughter realized these facts would not her own mortification sink into insignificance compared to the beneficial effect of the work upon her mother's mind and body? Would she not also realize that her own cares would be less in the future, so long as her mother retained her health of mind and body? The matter looks simple to me.

"M."

Another common sense way of considering this question. I printed a letter along these lines only a week or two ago and it interests me to see the varying points of view held by different persons. This last strikes me as eminently sane.

Offers a Bible.

"I would be happy to supply Mrs. C. F. F. with a Bible 5¾ inches long by 4 inches wide. In this size the print is, of course, not large, but no exchange or return will be asked or accepted. Should Mrs. C. F. F. have already secured a Bible any other person will be entirely welcome to the book. MRS. F. B."

The kindness of another correspondent has already supplied Mrs. C. F. F., but there is no doubt some one else who would be glad to accept Mrs. F. B.'s offer.

Book for Shorthand Student.

"In a recent issue of the Corner there was a request for a shorthand text book. If you have not already received dozens I shall be glad to send one to you or to any address you may send me.

"MARIA G."

Dozens have certainly not been offered, and it is quite possible that the correspondent who asked for the book is still awaiting one. Unfortunately, Maria G. does not give the signature appended to the request, and so it is impossible to identify the writer of the letter. If her wish has not already been granted, and if this letter should meet her eyes, she probably will communicate with me. In any case the offer of the book is likely to be accepted promptly. Let me repeat the plea I have made many times before—that nothing be sent directly to me at this office. When requests appear in the paper I am happy to supply the addresses of those who write, but it makes intolerable confusion to have objects sent to the office, forwarded thence, after unavoidable delays, to my personal address, and then sent on to the persons who originally asked for them. Maria G.'s name and offer of the shorthand book will go on file and may be had by writing to me for her address.

Wants Belgian Hares.

"Can you give me the address of some one who raises Belgian hares? I would like to get a pair if I can, and thought you could perhaps help me through the Corner. We have some old music to give away if any one cares to send postage for it.

J. W. H."

This query I shall have to refer to the Corner. I cannot answer it myself. It is impossible to give addresses in this department, but I will file the name and address of J. W. H., and if any one writes for it who can supply the desired information I shall be happy to send it. I have no doubt that there will be requests for the music.

Asks for Reading Matter.

"Will you kindly give me the address and name of Mrs. O. S. H. I would like very much to get some of the books and magazines she is so kind as to offer.

"MRS. W. S."

Another request which has come too late. The magazines and books offered by Mrs. O. S. H. have been bestowed on an earlier applicant. Can some other Cornerite supply the desire of Mrs. W. S.?

To Decorate a Room.

"I am going to ask your help. I am a poor girl and have to spend all my income for board and clothes. Do you suppose some of the Cornerites would help me to decorate my room? I would like very much to have some pennants, if any one has a few to spare. They would help much in decorating the bare walls. I am lonely at night, and the sight of the pennants would cheer me up and make the long hours seem less doleful. I am your servant for anything I can do to help in any way. Maybe there is some one to whom I could write cheering letters, and, if so, I would like to get her address.

"M. V. H."

I am sure there must be girls who will help out this lonely sister. Not only pennants would be of value in decorating the bare walls and rendering the room more cheerful but some of the pictures which accumulate in every home—cut from the magazines or saved from the daily papers—might be of value. I know I have only to print this request to insure a generous response, and I will send the address of M. V. H. on application, either to those who wish to help her cheer her room or who would like to receive some of the letters she offers to write.

Boiled Salad Dressing.

"Will you kindly give me a recipe for boiled dressing for salads? I would be much obliged. M. M. G."

The following is the best boiled salad dressing I have ever eaten and I am glad to make it better known: Beat to a cream one tablespoon of flour and one of butter, whipping it with a fork; stir in one egg beaten light, one scant teaspoon of white sugar, and one-half teaspoon each of pepper and mustard; add four tablespoons of vinegar and put all in a saucepan over the fire. Cook slowly, stirring constantly until the sauce is smooth and thick, then take from the fire, add salt to taste, turn into a bowl, and put in a cool place. It should be thoroughly chilled before it is to be used, and whipped cream must be stirred into it to thin it to about the consistency of mayonnaise dressing. This is especially good to use upon salads made of cooked vegetables, such as peas, string beans, etc.

Using Up Bread Crumbs.

"Some time ago some one in the Corner requested formulas for using bread crumbs. Those I send are strictly my own and are good.

"Leave waste pieces of bread in the oven until thoroughly dry, but not toasted, pass them through the meat chopper, turn the crumbs into glass jars and screw the tops down firmly. There you have all ready the foundation for much excellent cookery. These are of service in coffee cake and suet pudding; are better for scallops than cracker crumbs, are good in veal and meat loaf, for stuffing, and many other uses which will readily occur to the housekeeper.

"Here are some of the recipes by which the crumbs may be employed:

"Coffee Cake.—Use a half-pint cup measure. Two cups of crumbs, put to soak in two cups of sour milk or buttermilk. In another bowl cream three cups of sugar with one cup of good lard or butter; add three unmixed eggs, beat all well; put in the sour milk; one heaping teaspoon of salt, three teaspoons of cinnamon, one teaspoon of cloves, two even teaspoons of baking soda. Cut in two three cups of seeded raisins and dredge them with flour to prevent their sinking to the bottom of the cake; put these with the other ingredients and two cups of sifted flour. If the mixture is not as stiff as fruit cake dough, add more flour. Bake in two large tins.

"Suet Pudding.—Use the same ingredients as for coffee cake, but put in less sugar and for shortening use a cup of minced suet instead of the butter or lard. Turn the mixture into a well greased pudding mold and steam two and a half to three hours. Sauce is preferable flavored with lemon juice.

"Slices of the pudding are equally good if steamed over for other dinners. If desired, two cups of strong coffee can be substituted for sour milk in either of the recipes and adding six teaspoons of baking powder in place of the baking soda.

"I am writing this with my left hand while in bed, so please excuse any faults.

"M. V. B."

I do not find any faults which need to be excused and I think it is astonishing that in the circumstances the writing is as legible, the directions as clear as they are. The only point on which I would like reassurance is the quantity of baking powder demanded. Even taking into account the large supplies of various ingredients, six teaspoons seems an uncommonly liberal allowance. Yet the rest of the instructions are so clear that I am ready to be convinced that this detail is correct and that the generous proportions of both baking powder and soda are accurate. If there is an error will M. V. B. kindly repair it? We are much obliged for her recipes. Will she also tell us if the crumbs thus kept never become rancid after a while? I have had that experience in my kitchen, but it is possible the crumbs had not been dried long enough.

Books on Shorthand.

"I would like very much to review my shorthand, the Eclectic system. I loaned all my text books to a friend some years ago and would like to ask if any Cornerites have such text books they would part with now. I would be glad to have them and to pay the postage. C. B."

Can any one meet the wishes of this Cornerite?

SOME OF ATLANTA'S MANIAS

Watching the Peachtree Crowds, Sun-Rise Bathing, All-Day Golf, and All-Night Dancing Are a Few.

IF an alienist could diagnose Atlanta, he would shake his head at a few peculiarities.

He would frown at the groupings of young men on Peachtree curbings in the afternoon when streets grow crowded and the passing show of gowns and faces begins.

A bilious eye would turn for a second look, at this vitalized moving picture affair.

But making a curbstone study of the Peachtree throngs has its eccentric touch.

Such "curb" brokers, whose speculation devotes itself to dress and beauty, number thirty of more. They occupy the position in Atlanta of New York's street speculators in stocks.

An hour's study of the changing, variously-dressed crowds of Peachtree is foremost in their day's routine.

A new eccentricity is the habit of swimming at sunrise. When spring began, a dozen members of the Atlanta Athletic club changed their abiding places to the large room which occupies the second floor of the boat house at East Lake.

They prepared against mosquitoes; they arranged for comfort; but they forgot the sunrise bathers.

Each day now, with the peep of morning above the eastern rim, automobiles begin to chug up to the lake; and bathers, dressed for their early-hour dip, take the plunge. From then on, there is no sleeping for the boat house community. The twelve are decreasing; one by one they are moving back to town.

Two oddities here go hand in hand, eating perplexing ices and chewing gum. Ask the sodawater jerker.

Atlanta dyspeptics, he says call for sundaes, which begin with a foundation of cream, are sweetened with a syrup, are given diversity by ground nuts, and are completed by whipped cream, in the center of which lies a red cherry.

Gum here is chewed with a vigor that other cities scarcely equal. It is an evidence of the city's nerves. As a specialist was quoted recently, Atlanta approaches closer to neurasthenia than any other southern city, and the result is quick walking, quick eating, much dancing, and—gum.

Eating brings to mind the odd sight to be seen in any cafeteria of an important business man juggling with two handfuls of food, stepping as though he were walking a tight rope, and wearing an expression of utter anxiety until he reaches the vacant chair which is his goal.

But this is necessity, not eccentricity.

Golf produces mania in its truest aspect. There are otherwise sane Atlanta men who consider it a recreation and a delight to spend an idle day at golf from 9:30 in the morning till 5:30 of an afternoon. Not a few play 36 holes at least one day every week. That means walking miles and miles, letting the sun burn through you, using energy enough to plow an acre field.

But it is all done in the name of pleasure.

As to dancing, it has become too serious a mania for light mention.

Case Begun in 1868 Has Been Decided Once More

"CICERO WILSON et al. vs. Emory and Claud Wood, administrators," is the title of a case which Judge Brand decided yesterday—overruling the motion for a new trial.

Nearly fifty years ago, in 1868, to be exact, this same case was called in Jackson county superior court.

Through two generations, many administrations on the bench, through appeals and decisions, changing in form, new attorneys and descendants of the original parties, the case has come down from one judge to another as the heritage of the office—a case with possibly the longest record as to time in litigation in this part of the country.

The case was an application for dower when it first began to be fought out in the courts. Years ago it was an old case. All the parties and attorneys in it originally are now dead—including more than one judge before whom it was tried. Several years ago, ten or twelve years, the state was scoured for a man alive who could identify the handwriting of one of the judges who had signed an order in the case—the late Judge Hutchins. Judge Alex. S. Erwin, of this city, at that time was the only man who could be found who knew the writing. He has now been dead for a number of years.

The case probably will again go to the supreme court for the third or fourth time. Judge Brand has heard it more than once; Judge Russell before him tried it twice, and judges back if him had presided over courts in which it was being fought out.—Athens (Ga.) Banner.

How a 14-Year-Old Boy Has Hoboed Through the West

edge of the water, and sleeping in empty box cars in the yard.

I decided to go to Chicago, and with all the fond hope of youth I again started out for the end of the rainbow. I rode a slow freight into Elroy and dropped off to catch the fast Minneapolis-Chicago through passenger.

Until 2 o'clock next morning I dodged detectives, better known as "bulls" to the clan that travels the unusual trails, and at that time the through train whirled into the station. I remained in the shadows until the passenger started. Then, I made for the first "blind," which is the closed door in the end of a baggage car, the outside threshold of which will accommodate three men. But, to my surprise, seven men ran out of the shadows and crawled on the first blind.

However, I didn't mean to be outdone. I swung onto the back of the engine tender and rode with my toe on an iron rod, two fingers of my right hand over the top of the tender back and holding to the corner rod with my left hand. Rain and hail set in and my hands were numbed so completely that below my wrists I could feel nothing. The tender rocked and swayed and I don't know how I kept from falling between the cars. The cold rain poured down my sleeve, under my clothes, into my shoes. Hot cinders from the smokestack struck my face. The seven men crowded on the blind did not have enough room, and were continually jostling against me. We went over high trestles and through suffocating tunnels; the lights of villages flared up in the darkness and were gone as soon as we had seen them. Such was my experience that night for an hour and ten minutes, or until we hove into Baraboo and stopped under the bright lights of the union station.

When we stopped I looked down from my perch at the crowds below and the crowds also glanced up at me, and of those who glanced one wore a blue uniform. I spent the remainder of the night in jail. However, the doors were opened next morning in time for me to crawl into a car of potatoes and ride into Madison, the capital of Wisconsin.

At Madison, I went to sleep in a car of oats, having covered myself with oats all but my nose. About midnight I awoke to hear a freight pulling out east. Thinking it was the Chicago train I crawled aboard, went to sleep and awoke the next morning as the freight pulled into Milwaukee. All along the road I had traveled with professional "moochers" (young men who beg for money around railroad stations) and they had furnished the eats.

I worked my way on the boat from Milwaukee to Chicago, but upon arriving, I did not find the expected job. The day passed and I knew not where to turn for food or shelter. I was afraid of the "bulls," and wanted to get out of Chicago as much as I had wanted to get into it.

I was nearer home now, and this sobered me to the thought of trying to get back to Atlanta. I looked up a labor agency and "shipped" to Pennsylvania. However, on a Sunday morning, the railroad unloaded the entire crew of "shippers" in Ohio and commanded us to build our bunks in cow cars and make "jungle" fires in the woods to do our cooking. Several of the men deserted but were caught and put in jail. I climbed over a fence into an orchard and made a speedy get-a-way. That afternoon I ate twenty apples before I stopped.

That night I slept at the Gaylord coal mines across the Ohio river from Wheeling, W. Va. I slept in the hay under a shelter and awoke early in the morning to find my head resting against a mule's hoof. The mules had been brought in during the night.

During the day I sold a quaintly carved pipe I had carried with me and bought food. Night found me up in the hill country west of Wheeling. I slept in the bluegrass near the trail and tied two handkerchiefs about my head to keep out the cold. About midnight I was conscious of a light shining in my face and yelled out in my sleep. The light happened to be from a lantern carried by a woman going down the trail with a child. I raised up quickly, and when the woman heard the yell and saw my head, a ball of white handkerchief, bob up above the bluegrass all the superstitions of the mountain kindred sent fear into her soul; she screamed three times and ran down the the trail calling to her child to follow. As far as I could see, I watched the lantern light glide down then trail. And, then, I swiftly left those parts, the cold chills already running up and down my spine.

From Wheeling to Ashland, Ky., I rode beneath coal cars and on top of oil cars. A dozen times I was thrown off or fell off cars but always managed to keep from under the wheels. I slept on the edge of oil cars or any available place. Twice I awoke to find I was rolling off the top of a box car. But one gets so little sleep following that life that one doesn't notice these things much. Several times on the long trip south there would be as many as forty hoboes sleeping on top of a freight train (not in Georgia, however) and one would roll off. Whether or not he was killed no one ever seemed to care.

From Ashland to Lexington, I shoveled coal for the fireman. The most dangerous part of the journey was going through King's mountain in Tennessee, when my box car was compressed with smoke and I had to hold a wet rag in my mouth for five minutes. I came very near suffocating as it was and suffered terribly.

When I reached Georgia, I rode in a car loaded with iron wheels and hid among these, but the head brakeman found me and put me off above Rome. However, I finally got back to Atlanta, and the old town looked like the mythical city of gold. I felt that I had really reached the end of the rainbow at last. And I swore never to go again to the grain fields of the glorious west.

Old Negro Has A Series of Names

THE Journal has received the following letter:

"I saw in today's paper about a man with eleven names. My name beats that, and two babies are named after me.

"I am fifty-six years and ten months old, born Lawrenceville, Ga., in 1858, came to Atlanta in 1865, and those that wants to see me, drop me a P. C., 13 Old Wheat street, W. H. Holmes.

"My name is William Henry Stonewall Jackson General George Washington Gill More Abraham Lincoln Christopher Columbus Holmes.

"My old master and young master and three young mistresses and two aunts and one uncle wanted to name me, so they gave me all that."

Three-Weeks-Old Baby Has a Tooth

THE three-weeks-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Jennings has a tooth. The child was only about two weeks old when the tooth was found. It is very rare that a child has a tooth at this age, although cases have been known of children being born with teeth.—Saluda Standard.

front porch to the comfort of the seventy-five-year-old chairs.

For a while he rested there listening to the drone of the street, then he rubbed one hand over his chin and leaned forward in the story-telling way.

His speech has the twist of a native-born Irish, and sure enough he was born in Ireland.

"At Tyrone," he said, "in the north. It is a fine place. But I left there when I was a lad of sixteen. I've always been curious to see curious things. And there was nothing new I could find in the old country. I went to Liverpool, then to the north of England. From there I came to the States. In 1886, I moved to Georgia; and I've lived here since. For twenty years I've searched for antiques.

"In Savannah, Columbus, Augusta, Sparta, and Milledgeville, I've looked for old bits; and it used to be that I bought them by the carloads. Why, by the thousand-dollars' worth at the time I've auctioned the old things in Atlanta.

"But they're getting scarce now. In a few years there'll be no antiques, except what the rich own and no one can buy. All I get now comes from New Orleans. People in Georgia sell their old furniture no more.

"In its time, Milledgeville was the grand place for the antique man. When it was the capital, the wealthy folk lived there, and their homes were filled with fine furnishings.

"Much is left, but when you go to buy now, people simply tell you, 'No.' And they rather resent your wanting their relics.

"Sparta once was a place where I found valuable things, and there were antiques in Macon. But Atlanta is a new city. There's nothing here, except what is brought in since the war.

"I suppose what I have bought and sold was worth a million. Perhaps, more. But the day of the antique man is passing. In a few years there'll be no more trading in the old things."

S. R. Phillips Has Unfortunate Accident

MR. S. R. PHILLIPS of this community, who attended the singing at The Rock Sunday, happened to a very unfortunate accident on the church grounds. One of his automobile tires exploded; and the result created a little excitement within the church, the audience believing it to be the report of a gun, but this thought was completely dispersed when they were informed otherwise. It is said he received another tire explosion while returning home.—Fairburn (Ga.) News.

tache long enough to have about three twists. He put me in mind of a Colquitt county ram's horn. He had a star on his coat with enough tin in it to make a Ford automobile.

"He says, 'Five dollars, please.' We of course asked what it was all about. He pointed back down to the corner we had just turned and says, 'You did not turn that corner just right.' We began to ask for a better explanation. At this time we could see him swelling bigger. The fellow with me began to cuss. The cop then put his thumb under that big star and leaned awayback. I saw the payment of the 5$ was the safest way out of that burg so we just shelled them out and went our way $5 short and not much wiser.
